If anyone did please come forward and tell us if you voted for it.

At least the description of the Cult's faces when they see who and what we're coming with better be suitably hilarious.

This!

This actually makes sense!

Midori IS a fucking Callidus right? So is Wendy! Between the two of them, they should be able to make Tiny Pete look like...

Look like just about anything that's not as likely to induce shit hitting the fan, or panties in this case.

Because of Midori's given explanation that this is to meet with the Cult and keep them uncomfortable.

The option outright said to bring Tiny Pete along, not his teleport beacon. You assumed something that the option explicitly stated wasn't the case.

The problem is the way Midori's powers work, on expectations and whatnot. Unless the culties are expecting an escort of that type for whatever reason, it won't really work. Who'd use mundanes as an escort for an MG anyway?

Then again, Wendy could probably offer some pointers on what to use to trick the Cult.

It was stated that Midori powers affect the five senses. She is very capable to make you think that Tiny Pete is a big american guy. What you are suggesting is for when Midori has to disguise as an specific target, and casually there are one or various people who know the target personally, so Midori uses their expectations of the target to make herself the target and to make the people who don´t know the target believe thst Midori is the target. In this case, no one has any expectation about the big american, so it should be even more easy

You decide to be as honest as you can, under the current circumstances, here. While Misaka is technically still a kid - you've been on the receiving end of her tantrums when she didn't get her way - she is also quite horrifyingly smart for age, not just in putting guns and war machines together but also in figuring things out. In reading between the lines. She'd definitely be able to tell if you were lying to her outright, especially when it's about her surrogate big sister.

"Big Sister Murderface is a bit tired from her last operation, so she's resting up for a while." You tell the brown-haired girl looking up at you expectantly. "She's not quite healed yet, but the moment we can I'm dragging her to visit you." You pause here for a second before nodding.

"Even if she forgets, I won't."

Misaka goes silent for a while, her smile falling - the kid is clearly crestfallen, there's no mystery there, but at the same time you can tell she's trying her best to keep strong. "O-okay. Misaka won't cry, and will patiently wait for Big Sister Murderface to visit, Misaka says, despite really wanting to run away to quarters and cry while hugging Big Pete." She runs a slightly grimy sleeve across her eyes, sniffing loudly, before pulling something out from her lab coat pocket and holding it up to you.

It's the Teleportation Beacon you wore back at Siberia. Back when you threw yourself into the hell behind reality, to get your sempai back. ...Look, it's even got that mark when the Armored Fragment's claws nearly slashed it from your wrist that one time. A press of its screen, and Tiny Pete - wherever he is - would be warped directly to where you were. Ready to kill anything in his path. Ready to destroyo anything you pointed at.

Pretty ironic that it'd find its way back to you, and now of all times, you muse.

"Here, in case...in case Broccolihead needs Tiny Pete in emergency, get in places where he cannot go." Misaka sniffs. "Broccolihead is remembering how to operate, yes, Misaka asks wondering if Broccolihead forgot?"

...You remember, yes. You smile down at her and thank her. ...You'd hug her, but you have the suspicion you'd be rebuked for instead. It's not like you were popular with the kids anyhow, anyway.

And so with the bulky beacon once more wrapped around your wrist like a bulky wristwatch, you met up with Wendy outside the main lobby, with the Callidus quite nearly having a stroke at the appearance of the terminator. You're not going to say making Wendy panic was part of your plan, but who could really resist?

"Green, please. Just...tell me you're fucking joking. You can't bring this thing to the meeting, you can't. It's just..." Wendy spreads her arms wide, puffing out her cheeks. "I mean, FUCK."

It seems that Wendy's really being finicky with Tiny Pete. Shame, you were looking forward to seeing the faces of whoever's managing that shop to see a nine-foot tall armored giant walk up to their display.

[]Proceed as you planned. Tiny Pete tags along in full view.
[]Throw Wendy a bone before she has a heart attack. Tell Tiny Pete to stay put here and be ready to be summoned when he's needed, all you'll need to bring along is the Teleportation beacon.

Obviously the disguise is only for the trip there so that we're not revealing him in public. MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 07/26/15(Sun)10:10:53 No.41474985 Archived

As fun as it would be to actually have Tiny Pete tag along like you intended for him to, you do know that it's not really all that feasible to do so. There's only so much the tissue-thin excuses of 'cosplay' or 'science project' will cover up, after all. With the terminator looking as aggressive as he does, even just by standing still - those excuses will be as effective as a couple of bold lines scribbled onto certain bits and pieces of drawn anatomy in the pursuit of tasteful censorship.

There's also the fact that bringing him along in full view would greatly diminish something that makes him devastatingly efficient: his element of surprise. Anyone can be intimidating when they want to be, but nothing else breaks both fighting spirit and morale more easily than suddenly being face to face with a nine-foot tall armored giant with skulls rattling on its shoulder spikes when there had been none before.

So you decide to throw Wendy a bone, here. Yes, you were just...joking. You really weren't going to bring Tiny Pete along in full view, oh no. You just wanted to see her reaction. Yeah.

"..." Wendy stares at you as if you'd just told her to start killing cats for a hobby. Before she could verbally react, however, you turn around to address the spiked, skull trophy-exhibiting armored brute that is Tiny Pete. Meeting his helmet's crimson eyeslits with red eyes of your own.

"Tiny Pete?" You venture quietly, one hand reaching out to gently trace the carved kill-tallies on his armor. You smirk slightly at the name - you'll never get used to it, no matter what.

[CAPTAIN?] The terminator replies almost immediately, the various plates of his armor clanking as he shifts to address you directly. His voice a deep, gravelly bass rumbling against the thick metal plate of his helm, before echoing deep inside his heavy metal guts.

...Hah. You still remember how spooked you were, the first time you saw him. Then, right afterwards, after hearing both his weird nickname and the fact that he's actually on your side - well, more your sempai's than anyone else - you flirted with the giant machine. More of a joke than anything else, but you also remember feeling just a bit sad that he didn't reciprocate.

You blink at yourself, before chuckling. Just what were you thinking then? It feels like it was so long ago, even though you know it hasn't really been that long, and--

Oh. Oh, right. You were trying to make her jealous.

Because you yourself were getting just a bit...touchy about the attention she was lavishing her surrogate little sister.

You find yourself inwardly cringing at yourself. You were even trying the whole tough girl act then too, weren't you? But it didn't really take. It didn't really catch her attention as well as...well, you know.

You shake your head here. No time for that now, you have a sempai to rescue - and a High Priestess of a cult to talk to about said saving.

"Sorry. I guess I won't be taking you with me after all." You tell the armored behemoth towering over you, the crimson light burning from the angular eyeslits of its tusked, elephantine helm regarding you with stony silence. "Can you, um, just wait here and be ready in case I need to call you in? With this, I mean." You tap the bulky homing beacon strapped to your wrist.

Tiny Pete remains silent for a long, awkward moment, before finally inclining his head in a nod. The motion slow, ponderous, like tectonic plates finally deciding to shift after an eternity.

[UNDERSTOOD, CAPTAIN. I WILL STAND GUARD BY THE ENTRANCE UNTIL YOUR SUMMONS.] With a shrug of the huge pauldrons encasing his shoulders, the armored giant unslings the huge thunder hammer from his back, hefting it with both hands as he makes his slow, ponderous way to the Officio's lobby entrance. His heavy tread and obvious imposing presence making a few girls shriek and scatter at his approach, clearly not used to the sight of something so huge and armored walking towards them.

This trepidation towards one of your sempai's stranger companions doesn't last long, however. As soon as they realize that he wasn't about to drag them into a dark corner and do unspeakable things to them, the same magical girls that panicked at his approach quickly begin to warm up to Tiny Pete, crowding and cooing around him like tourists around a particularly interesting statue.

Just as they start taking selfies with Tiny Pete - something you couldn't help but smirk at, and discreetly take a picture of yourself - is when Wendy finally makes her presence felt yet again. Like some sort of grumpy guardian angel, except with an appetite for huge greasy burgers rather than patience and understanding.

"You finished gawkin' over your robot buddy over there, Green, or do you want to take a few days off?" The Callidus grumbles over your shoulder. "It's fine. Take all the time you want, it's not like Kong's getting any deader than she already is."

...No. Don't. Don't rise to the bait, you remind yourself as you turn around to face Wendy, a smile fixed upon your face. She's not doing it to be mean, it's just how she is. She can't help it, the same way your sempai can't help it that she drinks or abuses those horrible painkillers of hers. After all, she does want to help Chiaki, even if...well, even if they're not together anymore. Yes. She's a good person. Just rough around the edges, that's all.

Hmm. Now there's a thought. You don't really have a character like that in your story yet, right?

And no, Murder Mayumi doesn't count. A lot of your readers think she's actually kuudere when she's not. She's ice all the way through. Maybe...hmm...Gloomy Gertrude? A brash foreigner Magical Girl who uses the power of gravity to lock people down? Would that work? ...Has potential, anyway, but--

"...Green?" The note of hesitation in Wendy's voice shocks you just enough to snap you out of your train of thought. You shake your head here, and you blink at Wendy, furrowing your brow. W-what? What is it?

The American Callidus stares at you for a few moments longer before shaking her head. "...Just fucking zoned out on me all of a sudden. Thought for a moment you were getting some sort of vision or something." She leans just a fraction of an inch closer to you, her sullen eyes narrowed and piercing. "Are you? Because you have to fucking tell me what it is, or otherwise--"

What? No, no! You weren't getting any visions, you tell her. Just...you were thinking about something, that's all! Nothing that important!

"..." Wendy shakes her head, before letting out a sigh. "...Shit. Alright, fine. It's been a long fucking morning for the both of us, and from the looks of things it's not gonna get any better." She pulls out her smartphone. "If you want to take a short break or something, let me know. I can just call Annie and ask for an hour's reprieve or somethin'. I just have to call ahead first."

You blink here. Wait, is Wendy...is Wendy actually showing you concern--

"...For fuck's sake, I'm just trying to show some fucking decency here, alright?" The American snaps, clearly stung from your stare. Her cheeks going a slight shade of pink, although whether that's from embarrassment or anger, you have no way of telling. "And it's not the entire fucking day, just an hour or so. I figure an hour's better than nothing, though. Probably get a halfway decent catnap from it if you get to sleep quickly enough."

Well. It seems like Wendy's trying to be nice.

How do you respond?

[]Accept. Maybe just a few minutes' worth of resting your eyes before meeting the High Priestess will do.
[]Decline. You'll sleep when your sempai's safe. Besides, it's just an interview, it's not like you'll be dodging bullets during it, right?
[]Delay it for later. You want something to try out with Wendy. If what your sempai told you about Wendy is true,then it should work...

You smile at this sudden display of uncharacteristic kindness from the hard-edged Callidus, before shaking your head. You're fine, you tell her. You don't want to keep the High Priestess waiting, especially when the meeting's already been set. To call her up again saying that she might need to wait for you for an hour longer while you try to catch up on sleep, well...that seems way too impolite for you to even consider. Besides, Wendy did say she's particular about people keeping their appointments, so...

"...No, it's okay, really. She doesn't really give a shit, so long as we call ahead." Wendy seems to insist here. "Look, I know all about Japanese manners and such, but she won't hold a grudge. Fuck, Annie'll probably appreciate the extra hour to sleep off her ice cream lunch."

What? Your eyes snap wide open here. Ice...Ice cream for lunch? Seriously? Who does that? You can imagine a big ice cream for an after-lunch dessert, but as your lunch itself, that's--

"Annie," Wendy replies promptly. "Annie does it. It's kind of a thing she does. If she wasn't a Magical Girl she'd probably contracted at least six different types of diabetes already." The Callidus gestures at you with her phone again. "Well?"

You glance at the phone's glowing screen, before shaking your head. You've made up your mind, you tell Wendy. You'll go ahead with the meeting at the time it was originally planned. You're flattered that she's so concerned about you getting rest, but you're pretty sure you can handle a meeting, especially when it's just talking.

That said, you're not tossing the option out just yet. Maybe after the meeting - there's something you want to try out with Wendy, and this could be a good opportunity for it. You just have to somewhere private to do it in - somewhere more private than with an abandoned classroom, at least.

"...Fine. Just thought you needed a breather, or something. Sleep deprivation isn't something you fuck around with, even if you're a Magical Girl." Wendy grunts, before shoving her phone back into her skirt pocket. "Do me a solid, though: don't start nodding off while she's talking to you. Nothing riles up Annie more than having people fall asleep while she's talking."

That...well, you'll try your best, you try to reply levelly. Does...does it happen often, or what? People falling asleep on her? Some people just naturally have that kind of soothing voice, you've heard, so--

"Nearly every fucking sermon." Wendy shakes her head. "Doesn't have to do anything with her voice, as far as I can tell, because she can be as shrill or as grating when she wants to be. Sometimes both." She pauses here, as if deep in thought. "...Well, I'm probably doing her a disservice again, she's been getting better at that. She doesn't even get mad anymore when she sees Kyoko snoring in the front pew."

...What? Kyoko? Kyoko's been attending the sermons?

"Saw her a couple of times, yeah." Wendy nods. "Not really a stickler for it, though. She just goes there even if there's a service scheduled or not and just sits in one of the pews. Probably just likes it for the quiet. Then she falls asleep and sleeps through the rest of the day, until we have to wake her up to tell her we're closing down."

Hah. That's your sempai's best friend, alright. It makes you feel slightly better about the whole meeting thing, too. If Sakura Kyoko can sleep like a baby while being amongst the Pinky-worshipping cult, well...surely they can't all be that bad, right?

"...Anyway, if you're good, we can go right now. Shouldn't take us more than ten minutes to get there, maybe fifteen if we're walking real slow." Wendy says, making to leave. You nod to the affirmative and follow her - taking one last look at the Ninth Officio Headquarters building looming over you from behind.

Somehow, you have a sickening feeling that it'll be the last time you see it.

The trip took less then ten minutes. Probably the brisk walking pace that Wendy set the moment you left Headquarters had something to do with it. Of course, you couldn't help but take a peek at Hanegawa's when you passed by - and you smiled in relief as you saw your father dealing with the still-ongoing lunch rush with the same kind of gusto and fervor that you've always seen him with. You also caught sight of your brothers also helping out - two of them serving as waiters and one running nearby deliveries.

...You didn't stop to visit. That's...you're not quite ready for that, not yet. Maybe later, when you've squared away one of the bigger issues weighing you down first. Besides, the fact that your father and brothers are doing well is enough for you - for now, anyway.

Anyway. So this safe house that Wendy was talking about. It's just nearby Hanegawa's, right? And next door to Charles' bar? But the only other shop nearby is that gun store, so...by process of elimination, this safehouse should be in...in...

Your eyes go wide as the 'safehouse' in question finally comes into view.

It's...you didn't know what you were expecting.

It's...you didn't know what you were expecting.

It's a Deli Heal Agency. It's an effing--no, FRIGGING Deli Heal Agency. One that...that advertises 'Magical Girls' as its chief product. Its name, 'Magical Happy Endings', is written in the same font that they use when advertising the titles of movies based on fairy tales. The ones that have lots of flowers and sparkles? Yeah, that.

"...It's not what you think it is," Wendy tells you, although from the note of hesitation in her voice makes her sound like she wasn't expecting this either. Her blushing face further betraying her surprise. "We're not...we're not that kind of fucking cult, Green. Close your fucking mouth."

How do you react?

[]Be incredulous. Your safehouse is a deli heal agency, Miss Cooldown. How is it not what you think it is? What does she think you think it is?!

In the first case, most likely. Pinky does know how the Cult really is, she's the one that pushed Wendy in it if I'm not mistaken, and she did tell Chiaki that Wendy gave her Soul Gems to munch on.

In the second case, ominous, yes, but I think in this case it's a red herring.

That's really only about making a canvas and loading images to draw on there. Simple Java applet or Flash animation (unless Flash gets discontinued soon) can do the trick...

Unless the costumes can be split into component parts for mix&match, you may as well just paste each costume over the base image and save those.

It's trickier than it appears, you either need to use bizarre cutouts that manage to be consistent across garments, or each component piece needs to be multiple layers (which need to be correctly matched with the layers of other piece so you don't get incorrect overlaps or intersections).

More going forward, I mean. It would be next to impossible to break down the costumes that are already in place and, for the most part, they're meant as cosplay outfits so it's not that important to have different segments.

However, I do like the idea of mixing and matching so I could try to do some outfits where each section of the costume is done in a separate layer, rather than having the entire costume in a single layer.

The multiple layer part doesn't bother me. It's just more time per costume. The problem would be putting the entire costume together once it's been segmented, yeah.

No promises, but I'll look into it, I know how to make it as application. Making it something you can run from the web (eg. hosted on MGNQ wiki) will need me to learn more about those. But hey, learning new things is good.

It's...a Deli Heal Agency. An actual Deli Heal Agency, standing right in front of you.

It's not the first time you've seen it, of course. You've seen it once or twice on your way to school from your family's ramen restaurant, but always from the edge of your vision and never directly. Your parents - your mother, specifically - had made you promise to keep away from such places, and being a dutiful daughter back then, you did. You kept away from it like the plague, but at the same time - you've always been so achingly curious as to what actually happens inside.

...Well, it's not like you can't GUESS, or anything. You knew the deal, even back then. You've seen tired, haggard-looking salarymen with thinning hair come out hours later looking like a million dollars, backs straight, shoulders back and a cofident grin that they couldn't stop flashing. The same went for a few young men in your class that didn't quite manage to snag a girlfriend during those impressionable years - stoop-shouldered, acne-ridden hermits shambling through the door, only to leave like they've been given a new lease on life.

It's common sense. Anyone with even any small amount of wordly knowledge would be able to figure out what happened beyond a Deli Heal agency's closed doors. Hell, anyone with any ample amount in their wallets could easily find out firsthand, without any flights of imagination.

But to actually BE inside one. To have a legitimate reason to be in there, without having to deal with the sheer, agonizing awkwardness of being a customer, or...or heaven forbid, an agent...! To be there just to observe, to see what it's like! Finally, you can do that side story arc that you've been putting off for the longest time, simply because you've never been able to work up the courage to go inside a Deli Heal Agency!

"...Look, I..." Wendy starts again, sounding completely wretched despite her rough-edged voice. "...Maybe we can have the meeting some other time, or something. Probably got the...the address wrong, yeah." She shakes her head. "Let's...let's just go, alright? Let's go and never come back. Or speak of this to anyone ever again--"

You shake our head. So quickly that for a moment there it felt like you were getting whiplash.

No, no. There's...nothing wrong with it, you tell her. This is the address. And she needs to get you inside, right now.

Wendy stares at you goggle-eyed. "...Do you know what that is, Green?"

Yes!

"Do you fucking really? No, I'm serious, do you KNOW what Deli Heal Agency fucking MEANS?"

You do! You can read, for heaven's sake!

"...And you're saying you want to go in anyway?!"

With your spiral notebook and pencil pulled from your inventory and clasped tight in your hands, you return her look with one of your own.

"Did I FUCKING stutter?" You whisper to her, allowing the expletive to slip through your lips.

Silence. Utter silence.

"...Jesus." Wendy's capitulation comes in the form of a murmured epithet and reddened cheeks, before she steps forward and pushes the door open. The bells tied to the uppermost doorjamb jangling and clanking as the door itself upsets them. "And here I was thinking that Kong was a bad influence on you, Green. Turns out it's the other way around."

Oh, shut up, you snap at her, following the Callidus into the establishment itself. It's not that perverted. ...it's just for research purposes. Yeah. For your own special project.

"Whatever." The Callidus grunts. "...Just try not to look like you're too excited to be in here."

You won't. You'll do your best not to.

Even if you feel like that kid who got the latest videogame console underneath the Christmas tree, from so long ago.

The first thing you see inside the Deli Heal Agency proper is...not what you expected.

Actually, it's almost disappointing. But you start taking notes anyway.

It's actually clean, for one. And completely normal-looking, from what you can see, so normal-looking that you mistake it for a doctor's office first. There's a receptionist at the front desk, a 'waiting area' taking up half the shop with rows of comfortably-upholstered chairs and sofas - hell, there's even a widescreen TV directly in front of the waiting area, and it's playing what appears to be reruns of last night's late-night anime.

...Okay, so maybe that last bit isn't quite like a doctor's office, but...yeah. You were expecting it to be a bit more...authentic. Maybe a rack of rubber toys here, some manaches and chains in that wall over there, and-- "I don't know what kind of place you're thinking about, Green, but I hope you never bring Kong into one of those ever," Wendy growls, before walking up to the receptionist. She's...a rather cute one, a redhead, her hair cut into a rather neat shoulder-length hairstyle with the rest of it tied off with a blue bow. Her eyes, bright amber, shines from a pair of what looks like the fakest glasses around - namely because it doesn't even have lenses, just the cokebottle frames. And she's wearing what looks like a schoolgirl uniform, a more traditional one with the sailor collar and everything.

Wendy raps her knuckles against the counter. "...Hey. I need to talk to--" the Callidus' eyes goggle again. "...Wait, what the fuck? Amb? That you?"

"Guilty as charged," The girl giggles, a smirk curling her lips. ...You feel you've seen her before, somewhere. "Least your eyes are still working, Wendy." She glances over to you, a brief look of confusion flitting over her face, before it's replaced with the sly, feline mischief that seems to emanate from the girl in waves.

...For a moment it looked as if Wendy would hit the receptionist, but she doesn't. Instead she pushes the form and the pen back. "Go fuck yourself, Amb. We're here to see Annie. Or rather, she is." The Callidus jerks a thumb at your direction. "She told you guys, right?"

The receptionist addressed as 'Amb' merely looks at Wendy, who in turn simply slaps her forehead. "I fuckin' knew it," The Callidus groans. "Fuck. Annie, get your shit together, for fuck's sake--"

"She did. I was kidding." The receptionist giggles again, before tossing you a key. A key with a heart-shaped handle on it, and the number SP-01 engraved on it. "Last door on the right," She points to one of the corridors going deeper into the establishment. "You can't miss it."

"...Right." Your Callidus companion seems to take another moment to compose herself, before leading the way. "Come on, and try not to breathe in too much--"

"Oh, right, she's probably still with a customer right now!" Amb calls from the receptionist's deck. "But she said it's okay, just make sure to knock first!"

Wendy freezes in her tracks, before letting out a sign and moving forward. "...Come on, Green. Let's get this over with."

You follow her down that long corridor, your ears straining to hear anything from beyond the doors leading to the other rooms. Strangely enough, you don't hear anything. ...Either it's a slow day for this agency, or they've invested in some soundproofing.

Until you arrive at room SP-01. Even while approaching it, you can hear someone giggling inside. A female voice, that's for sure.

You blink at the key in your hand, then at Wendy. But...it, er, it sounds like she's busy. Maybe you should wait, or something--

"Did I fucking stutter?" The Callidus stares back at you, with absolutely no sense of irony. "She's waiting. Get to it, Green."

...Well. You did ask for this.

Shaking your head, you insert the key into the lock, turn it, and then twist the doorknob in your hand.

The door creaks open, revealing---

---Yet another scene you thought the worst of, but as it turns out it doesn't come close to what you thought at all.

It's a plain-looking room covered in tatami mats. A generous-looking futon spread out in the middle, right in front of a flatscreen TV showing last night's punishment game variety shows. A young woman and her...'john' is on the futon itself, but instead of...being in the state you expected them to be, both of them are fully clothed.

The woman dressed in what looks like a loose, silk version of a nun's stiff and formal black habit, complete with veil, and the john still wearing his wrinkled business suit with the tie and just the tie undone. And he appears to be sleeping - snoring, even - with his head on the nun's lap. Using her silk-covered thighs as a pillow.

Which is strange, considering that she has two other huge pillowy objects on her, and they're...substantially bigger than what you're used to seeing in the mirror. So big that they're actually stretching the silk material of her habit around her chest, revealing quite a healthy amount of cleavage. Cleavage that threatened to bounce out and pop free from their restraints every time she laughed.

"AHAHAHA! Jesus Christ, they actually did it! They ripped his balls off for laughing!" The nun shrieks, cackling in an American accent with a definite Southern drawl to it. "These fucking maniacs, I swear!"

You clear your throat after a moment, to try and attract her attention - and it takes you a couple of tries before she finally turns towards you. Her eyes hidden behind a pair of glasses so cloudy they may as well be opaque. "Oh! You're already here!" She smiles, before waving you forward. "Come in, make yourself comfortable! And don't worry about this guy, he's dead to the world!"

...Wait, dead? For real?!

"What? No, of course not," The busty nun shakes her head. "Just a medicated sleep. Tea with some special medicine Amber cooks up in her spare time. Really makes 'em feel like a million bucks when they wake up. Gives 'em an uninterrupted eight hours straight no matter what." As if to prove this, she gives the snoring man a hearty slap on the face, one strong enough that you wince at the smack of it. It doesn't even interrupt his snoring. "see?"

Y-yeah. Yeah, you can see that.

How do you react?

The vote may be taken literally, like with the Tiny Pete thing a thread or two ago. Asking for help with a situation, means asking for help with a situation, which includes explaining the details, unless you specify to exclude them.

It's up to Decu's interpretation, so I suppose we'll see.

You know, assessing her first, before seeing if we even wanted her help.

Somehow we jumped straight into asking for help.

As for this case, I'd start by saying that we need the help of someone who can appeal to the Blessed Lady, like her, and that we'd like to know more about what it entails before giving any more details.

I mean, really. Poor Kuma-chan is a good girl. So every time she hears the command word, she has to clench her teeth and quietly ride her orgasm out so that she doesn't make any lewd expressions or noises. Maybe she would blush a lot and breathe a little heavier, but she can't let anything else slip out.

Even if Chiaki repeats it many, many times, Kuma-chan has to stand tall and hope she can change her shorts before anybody realizes how soaked they are. So she'll walk away on wobbly legs, trying to be discreet in going out even as the scent starts permeating the air.

We don't know for sure one way or the other. Pilot dude might have been the guy, or he might have been the guy before the guy, or someone else entirely that deserved getting punched for a completely different reason.

We never pursued that stuff, didn't have time too really, and at this current point in time, there are bigger worries than Mami's relationships.

Chiaki first started out as a cautionary tale for Kumatora, someone who was really at rock bottom and trying to survive. At first Kumatora absolutely despised being Chiaki's trainee, until she realized that even with so much weighing her down Chiaki still has that professional edge, especially when dealing with work. She took that as an example to do better and now idolizes Chiaki as the person she needs to learn from, not necessarily 'become'.

As for being a good teacher, Chiaki is a very strict and very demanding one, but also very balanced in her approach. And she will praise you if you do well, if a bit awkwardly. (She likes punishing wayward students however).

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 07/29/15(Wed)10:55:55 No.41541333 Archived

You are a Magical Girl, and you're trying to bust your sempai out from a prison cell that's killing her.

Her witch familiar - a living, sentient balljointed doll that's as cute as it is frankly unnerving - has assured you that whatever's killing her is taking its time, however. That it's a slow enough process that you don't have to panic and blast your way through a guard detail of Eversors - as well as tempered steel doors two feet thick - to get her out of there as soon as posible. It means you have time. Time to explore your options. Time to try and figure out a plan for the best way to get her out of there without...well, without bunging it all up and killing the both of you. Or probably the whole Officio. Whichever comes first.

And you're exploring one of your options now. Specifically, the option to ask a 'seer' for help, someone who can, as your sempai's familiar put it, 'walk the Akashic Realm'. Although now you're thinking if the familiar, as cute as she was, meant something else other than the hell behind reality when she said that. Like, maybe, 'street corner'.

Because the person in front of you, sitting on the straw mat-covered floor with a balding salaryman's snoring head on her lap - and dressed so unconvincingly like a nun that she looks more like someone out of a fetish convention rather than a church - was the farthest thing from the mysterious, spiritual Magical Girl you've been imagining.

In fact, she looked like she did things for money. ...Things other than having her lap used like a pillow while she watches variety punishment game shows on TV.

It wouldn't be that far of a stretch of an imagination, after all. You're pretty sure nun habits aren't supposed to have that big of a cleavage window, nor are nuns supposed to be working out of a freakin' Deli Heal Agency!

>> ☐ Deculture 07/29/15(Wed)10:57:06 No.41541348

...No, no. Focus, Hanegawa. You're here to save your sempai. And you'll do whatever it takes to get her out of there, even it means having to talk to people you normally wouldn't. Even if it means having to deal with shady, suspicious characters like cult leaders, and prostitutes dressed in nun costumes!

"...I'm not sure what Wendy told ya, and I know all this looks a certain way," The person in question suddenly speaks, snapping you back into reality, her soft unpainted lips curling into a gentle if somewhat patronizing smile. "...But we ain't doin' anythin' illegal here. Deli Heal's just a convenient front, nothin' else. Keeps most of the normies out, and those who actually do work up the balls to come in..." She gestures to the sleeping salaryman at her lap. "We give 'em tea, maybe a pressure point massage, and send 'em on their way when they wake up. They're usually too refreshed an' well-rested to say anythin'. Any money they pay us goes directly to the Church fund, helpin' disenfranchised Magical Girls to get back on their feet."

That's...well, that's all well and good, but you didn't say anything about anything illegal--

"Miss Hanegawa, please don't insult us both by denyin' it." Annie May Springfield - supposedly also the former Eversor Rank Leader of the Eighth - waves a perfectly-manicured hand in dismissal. "Even if I can't read your mind, it's easy enough to guess." She shrugs here, the motion making her substantial bosom shift interestingly in its tight confines. "Mind, I don't really give a shit if you think I suck dicks for money, but there's the rest of my girls that I don't want bein' associated with that kind of nonsense. Girls like Amber, who's mannin' the reception desk right now, and Dorothy, who's probably havin' an oil change or whatever, and Wendy..."

A sigh leaves her lips as she says the name. "Wendy. Yeah. Girl's got enough on her plate already, don't need to pile on another scoop of mashed potatoes all over the mess. Even though I know she'll eat it all up with a smile, because she's just that kinda person. Crusty on the outside--"

...Gooey and warm on the inside? You suggest here, which makes her guffaw loudly.

"...I was gonna say 'spoiled rotten to the core', but let's go with that." Annie chuckles. "Anyway, that's enough yakkin' from me. What brings you here, then?"

AH. Well. You were gonna introduce yourself, but it seems she already knows who you are. And you know her name already too, so...

"Right, right, we don't need to make introductions, but just for the record, you can call me Annie. I'd prefer Alice, but that's just usually on formal papers an' when I'm out preachin' to the flock." She grins here, showing two rows of white, perfect teeth. "And you're Hanegawa Midori, right? Can I call you Green, too, or is that just what Wendy calls ya?"

...Well. It's not like you're not used to people calling you by the English meaning of your name. But all the same, maybe Midori'll be better.

"Alright, that's fair. Midori it is, then." Annie nods. "Now, what's gotten ya so desperate that you had to ask me, of all people, for help? Be honest now."

And it's here that you tell her about your...predicament. Not in any real compromising detail, no. Just enough to clue her in on the most basic level, while being vague enough not to give anything incriminating away.

>> ☐ Deculture 07/29/15(Wed)10:59:10 No.41541377

>>41541359

You have a friend who needs help, you say. Spiritual help. Something's happening to her, something bad enough that she'd been locked in a Silent Room by your own incubator. And you have it on good authority that staying in that silent room is doing more harm than good, and she needs to be let out. But your incubator is adamant that your friend stays in there, on the assumption that whatever was happening would be 'fixed' with enough time and patience. And you know that this isn't the case at all.

So what you're here for is to ask Annie for help. Help in getting your friend fixed, as well as getting her out of there.

"...I see." Annie nods. 'Well, first of all, that's pretty fuckin' vague, pardon my French there. I can't reasonably tell ya what's up with them, or what I'd do to get them 'fixed' as you so imply." She mimes the quotation marks here, a wry grin on her face.

"But since you're probably bein' vague for a reason - said reason bein' that you don't exactly trust me much, somethin' I don't rightly deserve and personally a bit offended by - I'd probably start with a prayer service, then a readin' of the Holy Scripture with the Anointing of the Oils, stuff like that. Then if that doesn't help, we do a Healing Mass for her, storm the Blessed Lady with loads of prayers, more readings, lots of hymn-singing that Wendy is actually really good at leadin'. You gotta hear her sometime, I think I got a recordin' here on my phone somewhere--"

You hold up a hand. That's...those sound nice, but do they work at all...?

"...Honestly?" Annie shakes her head. "Not really. Fact is, it really depends on the person you're prayin' for. If they've got it in them for the prayers to work. Otherwise, all it does is make the people who care about her a bit more at peace about the inevitable. Sorta palliative care, but for the people around the patient, not for the patient itself."

But what about exorcism? Wendy told you about exorcism, and how Annie can perform it. She told you how it might be able to help Chiaki. You don't really understand it yourself, but you're willing to give it a shot.

Annie stares at you for a couple of long, silent moments before shaking her head. "Exorcism ain't somethin' I do lightly, and just for anyone. I only do it when I think it needs to be done, and if I think it'll actually do somethin'. Right now, from what you told me, Midori, your friend's on her way to becomin' a full-blown Witch." She shrugs her shoulders. "Nothin' I can do about that. Every one of us turns into one of those sooner or later, assumin' we don't die first. Exorcism is for stuff that isn't about that - it's about ghosts. Spirits. Souls tryin' to go where they're not supposed to go." The nun-priestess sighs here, looking down on the salaryman on her lap, fingers brushing through his balding hair with a tender, if wistful air. "Souls takin' what they're not supposed to take."

She looks back up after a moment. "Exorcism can fix those things. It ain't like the movies where you just shout at things until they throw up green pea soup, though. There's a lot more metaphysics goin' on, stuff even I can't rightly explain. But yeah, right now, I can't reasonably justify exorcism from what you told me." A blink, then a smile. A friendly one. "Unless ya wanna just stop bein' so vague and just come out with it."

So, how can we be sure that someone interceding with Pinky to sav Chiaki will gt us the result we want?
Isn't it far more likely that Pinky, who already intervened once to help us and Chiaki by bringing Manuke to us, will make sure that it's Homura that is restored and in control of the Warmater's body, and not Chiaki?

Any Homura. One that knows what she did and is sorry for it, maybe even a pale echo of TTO, since what Pinky wants is a Homura that knows the mistakes she inflicted upon Godoka to create Faust, and who Pinky can then torture in retaliation.
Because it's no fun if the Homura she tortures doesn't remember why she's being tortured.

Pinky herself said the end result of what's happening go Chiaki, getting all of her memories so she knows what she did wrong, is what she wants.
But the current process which is likely to end with Chiaki Witching Out before Pinky can torture Homura isn't quite what she wants.
That was the only reason she helped us catch Manuke, and if she does help stop Chiaki Witching Out, then it'll be because she wants Homura, not Chiaki.

No. You can't show your hand too early. You have to know more before you do that.

You clear your throat here, and make to ask Annie about exorcism, when she takes a cushion from behind her and tosses it at your feet. "Here, take a load off and rest your ass on this. You look like you've been runnin' around all day with barely any sleep, sportin' eyebags nearly as big as Wendy's."

...Ah. You thank her, and do so immediately - forcing an involuntary sigh from your lips as you settle into the comfort of the well-used cushion. A moment later, you finally follow through with your question. Namely, does exorcism actually work for people who needed it? People she'd performed it on?

Annie smirks, a sly and cunning thing that would have looked cute on a child. Here it just looks...well, the slightest bit disturbing. "Still not tellin', huh? Fine, I can respect that. As for your question, well, I can't rightly say. I mean, I've done it for more than a handful of folks, so I'm not just pullin' stuff out of my ass or anythin', and they seemed ta be back to their normal selves after it, but..."

And there it is. The 'but' that shatters every forlorn hope into pieces, every threadbare wish into tatters. But...?

"But well, there's really no way of tellin', ya know?" Annie raises her hands in the universal sign of ignorance. "It ain't like a disease where you take some medicine and then the doc runs some tests and says you're clear. Sure I do readings after an' explorin' their psyche, burnin' incense around 'em and hypnosis and all that...but ya never really know if it really took, if things are a hunnert percent legit."

You stare at the American's eyes with your own - and it's only here that you notice that they're the same shade of red as yours. It's a strange coincidence, but it's there. "But they returned to their normal selves, right? It worked?"

"...Yeah, I guess so," Annie muses. "I mean, some of these girls, they were really in a bad way when I got called in. Like the Blessed Lady just up and decided to fuck with their minds, right? Just screamin' and yellin' all sorta nonsense, throwin' up blood and clawin' at their eyes. Absolutely nothing on their soul gems, so everyone's noodle was gettin' baked to shit about it. So I try my best, do my thing, and..."

She presses both palms together, and then spreads them in a flourish. "Girl wakes up, no memory of what happened, but no longer crazier than a long-tailed cat in a room full of rockin' chairs. Happened probably in...say, 70, 80 percent of the cases I had to handle."

What happened to the other 20 to 30 percent, then?

The nun-garbed girl mimes putting a gun to her forehead and then pulling the trigger. "Some of them did it, others I had to finish the job myself. Not very pretty when it happens, but ya move on. I tried to. Kept telling myself it's impossible to save everyone."

Oh. That's...yeah. That sounds terrible.

"Better resting in oblivion than suffering every wakin' moment, stuck in a goddamn box." Annie shakes her head in slow, quiet derision. "My opinion, of course. In that I don't want to wish that kind of shit on anyone."

70, 80% chance of your sempai going back to her regular self. That's...not too bad odds, right?

The argument has been made repeatedly that this won't actually fix the situation because an exorcism involves invoking Pinky, and Pinky wants Homura and not Chiaki.

I mean, did you forget how much Pinky told us she hates the name "Chiaki Matsuda"?

Indeed... Odds are pretty high that an exorcism won't work at all, or Pinky will just use it as an excuse to instal a true Homura at the helm rather than Chiaki. She'd have her pick this time if you think about it.

Assuming she's telling the truth, then those are good odds, you think to yourself, nibbling gently at your thumbnail in thought. 80 percent chance of it working, at most - it's not the 100% guaranteed solution that you want, but you have to be realistic here. At the very least, even in the worst case scenario, the statistics are on your side still.

You still want to know something, though. About the exorcism. What happens during it? How does it actually work?

Annie scratches her head at you. "Wow. You're really...you're really crossin' all the Ts and dottin' all the Is here, huh?" She laughs here, an easy, pleasant sound. "How exorcism works...well, that's another bit ya got me on. It's like, I dunno, askin' a Culexus how she does the thing that makes you want to empty your guts all over the sidewalk, yeah? You'd get a whole lotta psychobabble, about magic resonance an' karmic imbalance and all that shit, but at the end of th' day you're nowhere near close to figurin' it out, but you're still got sick all over your shoes."

At your confused expression, the High Priestess shakes her head, chuckling again. "What I was tryin' ta say was, I got no idea to try and explain it. It's one of those things ya just know how to do. But what I can tell ya is what I always aim to do during an exorcism."

She holds up a finger. "First, I look for any spiritual disturbances around the person I'm treatin'. Maybe there's a spirit or a demon tryin' to play pattycakes with her, sorta thing. Any outside influence that's doin that. If I find that, I remove it or drive it away."

Another finger joins the other. "If I don't find any of those, I look inside the person, try and read what their soul's goin' through. Is it intact? Somethin' hidin' or festerin' inside it, like a parasite? Or maybe they're bein' possessed? Again, I drive whatever it is away and make sure it doesn't come again."

>> ☐ Deculture 07/29/15(Wed)13:41:50 No.41543579

A third finger. "Finally, if those don't work, then I break out the big guns. Which is basically askin' the Blessed Lady to intercede on the afflicted's behalf. 'Course I'm already askin' for her help with the first two, but this is appealin' to her mercy and kindness to grant my prayers."

...And how does she do all that?

She grins here. "How do we Magical Girls do what we do? Magic, of course." She thinks for a moment. "...Well, that an' I'll admit a few tricks I learned from my tenure with the Seventh. They know an awful lot about this sort of thing."

Right. Just another question, then.

During these exorcisms, did she ever see what was possessing or affecting the girls? What did the entities look like?

Annie blinks here, before scratching the back of her head again. "Well, let's see. Sometimes it's just really the odd ghost or two, but lately I've been seein' the Blessed Lady herself. Just...you know, a version of her that isn't really all that there, you know?" She taps her temple, before quickly crossing herself. "Like she had one really bad day while out bein' blessed and then it all just spiraled downwards from there, gettin' shittier and shittier with every loop. I'd be spooked if I didn't see that kind of shit every time I closed my eyes to sleep."

A moment later and she smiles. "Well? That enough for ya, Midori? Or ya need to interrogate me more?"

You blush here, before bowing in embarrassment. ...You just wanted to make sure you didn't leave anything out, that's all.

"S'alright, I understand." Alice waves a hand, the motion making her more-than-ample chest sway in a mesmerizing fashion. How do those things even get held up? "Ya gotta be sure with big decisions like this, I get it. Ain't nothin' wrong with makin' sure."

What do you do?

We know, in-character, that Pinky said she's fine with Chiaki being gone, and is only troubled that it was triggered by something not of her own design.

You decide to not to commit to anything yet. While having her perform an exorcism on your sempai sounds like a safe way to go about things, the bit with involving the Blessed Lady at the end...that doesn't sit well with you at all. It's something you'd want to avoid as much as possible, especially with Chiaki being as vulnerable as she is right now.

So it's with a nervous smile that you tell Annie about your decision. She handles it better than you thought she would, the look of disappointment on her face lasting all of a second before it's replaced with a warm, pleasant smile.

"Like I just said, I understand. Ain't nothing wrong with makin' sure about bein' sure. No hard feelings, and besides, you're the one askin' for help, not me!" She laughs, before taking something from what looks like a Hello Kitty wallet from the inside of her habit. A snap of a magnetic lock, and she holds out something to you, something small, white and rectangular. ...A business card?

Blinking, you receive it with both hands, bowing your head in gratitude. You glance down at the card respectfully, reading out the professionally-printed words:

>ALICE
>High Priestess

>The Church of the Golden Land

Nothing else followed, except for her email and what looks like a smartphone number. You blink at her again, and she laughs once more in reply.

"Just in case ya change your mind," Annie grins. "Or if ya can't reach me for some reason, have Wendy do a runner or something. I'll get there soon as I can."

That's...well, you'll keep it in mind. You thank her for her time, and find yourself apologizing for wasting it.

"Bah, think nothin' of it. I know how it goes, lookin' and searchin' for that one remedy for whatever ails someone important to you. Some of these remedies're bad, some of them got potential, others sound way too fuckin' dangerous to mess with. And exorcism, well...it ain't as simple as takin' a pill." She shrugs, still smiling. "Anyway, you're probably gonna want to tell Wendy, so go on and get. Forgive me if I don't get up, legs are kinda asleep here." She gestures to the head pillowing on her lap with a helpless smile on her face.

Haha. Yeah, you probably need to get going. You bid her goodbye and make to leave.

"Go in peace, Midori!" Annie calls after you, just as you close the door behind you. "The Blessed Lady loves all her vessels!"

Did she just...?

No. That's...she couldn't have known.

It's probably just one of her religion's generic greetings.

Yeah. Only that.

You meet Wendy right outside the Deli Heal Agency, after a brief encounter with Amber that left you blushing red and her giggling like a maniac. She's been smoking while waiting, apparently, proven with the spent cigarette butts littering the ground by her feet. By your quick count, she's already on her sixth cigarette.

"...How'd it go?" She asks immediately as soon as you approach. "Annie coming with us or what?"

You shake your head. No, she's not. You...didn't ask for her help.

"..." Wendy is silent here for a few moments, before she shakes her head. "...Was she weird about it, or what? I mean, when you told her about turning her down."

No, you didn't turn anyone down! You protest, careful not to raise your voice lest someone hear you. You just didn't commit to anything at the moment, that's all! ...And Annie was very nice about it and everything!

"I said don't fucking look around, dammit." There is absolutely no urgency or panic in the Callidus' voice. "There's a chance it might not be anything, but let's not fuck around with it, alright? We need to relocate and reconvene to somewhere private, somewhere else that's NOT Headquarters OR here. We'll lose them on the way there.

...Shit. Shit! What are the chances that it's actually nothing?

The point, which seems to keep flying over your head by the way, is that Midori and Wendy have DIFFERENT connections to Pinky. More importantly, NO ONE knew that Midori is a vessel, until Pinky said it a few threads ago.

Annie used the term vessel specifically, and the way she phrased it makes it pretty obvious that she was talking about Midori.

The question is, how the fuck does she know that Midori is a vessel? Did she sense it somehow? Did Pinky tell her? Will she do something with this information that no one has?

And most important of all.

Does she know what being a Vessel of the Blessed Lady actually means? We know what Chosen are, but know nothing IC or even OOC about Vessels.

Yes, but it was under different circumstances, and it was because of Golden Weapon Fuckery. Also, Pinky explicitly calls Wendy a Chosen in one of the write-ups.

Until now, she never named anyone as one of her Vessels, assuming there can be more than one Vessel at the same time.

Also, the main difference between Wendy and Midori is that Midori was resurrected by the actual Blessed Lady in one of her sane phases, while Wendy was rezzed by the full blown crazy Pinky.

That means something, we just don't know what yet.

You desperately wrack your brain for any other location you can both relocate to. You can't...you can't believe you're getting tailed! It's not like you're trying to betray the freaking Officio or anything, you just want to save your sempai, who is coincidentally the frigging WARMASTER! You're not supposed to be tailed like some sort of liability, for goodness' sakes!

Alright, alright, calm down. Just think rationally, you tell yourself as you focus your gaze on Wendy, forcing yourself from succumbing to the compulsion to look around - both for your supposed tail and a place to retreat to. Inspiration strikes you mere seconds, and you nod at its general direction over your partner's shoulder.

"...Charles' Bar?" Wendy murmurs around her cigarette. "...You do know it's just across the fucking street, right? Not even Karasawa can lose a tail with that kind of distance--"

You don't want to lose the tail, you cut Wendy off, speaking in the same low tones. What you want to do is to remove any chance of the both of you being considered as suspicious. If you are being shadowed, then all they'll see is two Magical Girls sharing a drink together and trying to cope with what's happening. Conversely, if the tail sees you going to strange, unfamiliar and horribly private places with another girl, well...

There's a long moment of silence between you and Wendy, before the American lets out a small grunt. For a moment it sounded as if Wendy was simply dismissing your idea with a simple disagreeing noise, when you feel her suddenly take your hand by the wrist and pull you along towards the very same bar you suggested. Across the temporarily-empty road and then back onto the sidewalk.

Her hand just as rough and calloused as your sempai's, but also softer.

Warmer.

A few moments pass, and it's here that you find yourself being ushered through the front door of Charles', the bar that your sempai frequented in her daily quest to kill her liver before it can regenerate.

It's still as empty as you remember it, but...cleaner, somehow. A bit more polished somehow. Maybe the scowling owner got the hint that his place needed to look less of a dive to attract customers? Probably, guessing from the new grand piano sitting in the corner.

It doeesn't seem to be working, granted, but it's the thought that counts.

"...Two Whiskeys, Charles. Kong. Hold the ice." Wendy says as the both of you make your way to the bar counter, easing onto the stools and resting your arms on the polished mahogany. "

The ever-present, ever-silent scowling Bar Owner grunts something at Wendy as he prepares your drinks. Wendy looks up at the afro-wielding gentlemen for a moment before shrugging, and grunted something in reply. Charles shakes his head again, before planting both drinks in front of you. Face still locked in a permanent, jaw-breaking grimace.

You shake your head here, and gingerly take your own drink. It's...it's a glass full of whisky. It's not just a shot or two, it's an entire frigging glass of the stuff! And you're expected to drink it all up?!

"Take your time and sip it slowly if you can't down it all in one go." Wendy murmurs, nursing her own drink. "...No sign yet of the tail. Probably lying low or something. Let's just stay like this for a few while until we're sure they're gone. I'll say so when we're clear."

Fine. Alright. ...Can you talk about things while you wait until then?

"...Don't see why not." The Callidus says after a moment. "Just try to avoid anything too specific, just in case."

Right. Okay. You can do that.

I cannot fathom the machinations of Decu in this case; we haven't talked about the particulars here at all, he's just running with it. Although consider: Midori and Wendy hooking up doesn't necessarily lead to a harem route. There's also an NTR route.

Annie usually takes the cake (figuratively and literally), but she knows when to rein it in. You don't make it more than a few years in without being kind of eccentric anyway. Or lasting for a few years turns you into an eccentric desperately fighting to cope. One of those.

Generally speaking all of the Callidus Rank Leaders/former Rank Leaders are familiar with one another, and working in a profession where your job is to be paranoid and lie turns out more eccentrics than most.

Poor, poor Enishi.

It mostly comes down to the lines between lying for work and having a personal life. Once in a while a mysterious and fabulous sponsor arranges a sort of meetup for all of them to drink and, now and again, compete for reasons that absolutely aren't half for her entertainment and half for scouting purposes, and then it's a balance between showing off/making an impression and keeping your secrets for the sake of doing your job better.

One might do the same thing for Eversors, but they tend to have much bigger ranks to manage, and if you got twenty of the best in a room they'd probably just all headbutt each other unconscious anyway.

That actually brings up another question. If most Vindicare rely on guns, what do they use their magic for?

Also, where does Mami fit in on this? Her guns aren't real guns, everything from their ammo, range, so on and so forth is decided by her magic.

I just want to say, I'm fairly certain Annie has the ability to help Chiaki, she'd just need to be told a TON of sensitive information or else risk going about things all wrong and potentially making things worse. And, of course, there's the very real possibility of her deciding to do it for Pinky anyway.

That said, I think there might also still be the possibility of getting Pinky's help. We might be able to convince her not to let someone else try to hijack her plan, even if that someone else is Homura.

Mumi is, as far as I can see, the rare successful hybrid of the two styles. She can absolutely throw around huge lasers if the situation calls for it, but it rarely does.

There's something I haven't seen anyone else bring up and it makes me wonder.

Isn't Annie the one Wendy reports to and has pretty much said she's totally loyal to? How do we know she hasn't already told her basically everything so far?

I've been under the impression that Wendy isn't so much loyal to Annie as she is supportive of her. Wendy has her reservations about the cult, or at the very least had them at one point, and definitely knows everyone involved is pretty crazy even by Magical Girl standards. Especially herself.

And of course, it's also likely that Wendy values Chiaki above all of that.

Hm... someone should bug him about that, since that sounds a bit weak... though it might just make Vindicare the most effective magi in terms of grief seed usage. Still, I'd have figured that at the very least, they'd use it to beef up their weapons in various ways. Object enchantment was a thing in PMMM, but I dunno how that applies MGNQ.

I'm pretty sure he's been told it before. I've talked about it to him before. If he ever feels like having such techniques come up or putting it in the spotlight, it'd be in.

>> ☐ Anonymous 07/29/15(Wed)18:07:04 No.41548130

>>41548050
Well, it's kind of tough with Chiaki. She didn't really need that kind of technique because of her time stops, which were just plain better as far as magic investments go. Now she has golden-shit to fall back on too.

We'd need to see more Vindicare in the spotlight, which is unlikely considering how they usually operate.

Still... Chiaki should really work on mastering telekinesis at some point, presuming she doesn't get to keep a bunch of devil powers that need mastering once Midori quest is done. The possibilities offered by efficient telekinesis are just plain ridiculous if one really thinks about them.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/04/15(Tue)10:59:55 No.41666826 Archived

You decide to do a bit of small talk with Wendy, just to settle your nerves as well as appear normal for whoever's on your tail. You turn towards Wendy to engage in said small talk - and blink as you see her take out her Soul Gem and blithely dump it into her own glass of amber liquid. The bauble glowing in slow, lazy pulses as it gently turned in its alcohol bath.

"...Neg on it being a Callidus." The American murmurs underneath her breath. "Picking up a few, but they're inactive. Nowhere near us too, or at least not near enough to matter." She clicks her tongue - a sign of obvious annoyance - before taking a sip of her whisky. The Soul Gem inside clinking against the glass. "So either it's Karasawa on her A game following us around, or a normal who just signed their own fucking death warrant by stalking us. ...Not sure which is worse."

Karasawa...Karasawa Enishi? Your eyes go wide in alarm. No, that's impossible. She told you--

"Yeah, I know. That's what's fucked about it." Wendy's eyes flicks over to stare into yours for a brief moment. "If it's actually her, then that means..." Her voice trails off, letting the unspeakable go unsaid. The unspoken possibility of betrayal blossoming in your mind at the same moment that a sick, sour dread twists your insides.

"...Relax. I'm not saying it actually IS her." The brown-haired Callidus finally turns away from you, facing her drink once more. "Just, you know. Some kinda Callidus wisdom I got from the old Prima - that's Rank Leader to you - back home." Her voice turns wistful at the memory. "Like, if you feel you're being followed, and nothing turns up on a scan, then it's either a normie with a death wish or a Karasawa."

You blink again. That's...you've never heard of that, actually. Not from the Tenth. Is Enishi really that famous...? You've had your own suspicions, but--

"...Yeah. Or at least her family is." Wendy takes another sip from her glass. "Not really buying into the hype myself, but if you've got Callidus from other Officios namedropping you, then you must be hot shit, right?" She lets out a small, tired-sounding chuckle. "Anyway. It's probably not her, but let's just keep on the down low to be sure."

Right. Down low. Small talk. Right. You shake your head and look back down at your still-untouched glass of whiskey, the fumes from the amber liquid enough to make you feel just the slightest bit lightheaded. You shake your head again, before glancing sidelong at the Callidus beside you.

"So, uh, your lighter." You begin awkwardly, haltingly. "It's...it looks interesting. Can I see it?"

Now it's Wendy's turn to blink at you, seemingly puzzled at such a request - but she hands it over without a word. The oversized zippo thudding heavily into your outstretched palm, cold as...well, metal things tend to be in Mitakihara's normally-chilly weather. The embossed bald eagle clutching a sheriff's star with the Roman numeral VIII on it a curious texture as you brush your thumb over it.

It's as gaudy as you expect anything from America to be, and at the same time it...well, it kinda fits her. Wendy, you mean. But you also can't help but feel how familiar it is. About how you've seen it before, used by someone else you know.

More importantly-

>>41666849

"It's not...one of those things, if that's what you're worried about." Wendy murmurs, taking the words right out of your mouth. "If it was, then I damn sure would've used it to give Darks her worst hair day in years." She shakes her head, and then looks at you, seemingly incredulous. "...Wait. No fucking way, did you actually think it was...?"

...Well, it's--

"Christ, Green." The Callidus turns away again, this time burying her face into her arm - and you can tell that she's laughing, by the way her shoulders are shaking. "Not...not every fucking thing that's gold is actually a fucking Golden Weapon, Green. Jesus."

You didn't say that! You hiss this at her, before thrusting the offending lighter back at the laughing Callidus. It's just that it caught the light the same way those things did, and it just looked really suspicious--

"Toothpaste. That and a clean blotting cloth. Polishes gold like nobody's business." Wendy flicks the lighter a couple of times, causing the flint to spark and the small wick to ignite. A tongue of yellow flame briefly snapping into existence before being snuffed out just as quickly.

"...It'd be cool, though. If it actually turned out like that." She tosses the lighter from hand to hand, before holding it up to the light. "Probably be like some sorta super-flamethrower in a pocket or something. ...yeah, I'd like one of those."

What? She actually WANTS a Golden Weapon?

You open your mouth to tell her just how...how stupid, how crazy that is, when she points to the Soul gem in her glass.

It's pulsing much more quickly and steadily than it was earlier. Which could mean anything from a fellow Callidus about to join you in the bar or someone about to make their move. What kind of move it is, you have no idea, but with Wendy's hand straying to her side - where her knife should be - you're not taking any chances here.

How do you react?

[]Keep the small talk going while preparing yourself for the worst. No need to overreact, that'd just make you look even more suspicious.

You decide to stay put and continue the small tallk instead of bugging out and leaving. Nothing's really happened yet, and leaving right now would only make you look more suspicious than you already are. ...Still, you're not ignoring the warning as it's so conveniently dropped onto your lap - or more accurately, dropped into your drinking mate's half-full glass of whiskey. The butterfly knife that you keep up your sleeve surreptitiously palmed between your thigh and hand, ready to be wielded or thrown at a moment's notice.

A-anyway. Why would Wendy want to have a Golden Wea--er, one of THOSE things? You frown at her, while trying to keep your voice down as much as you can. Did she actually forget how awful they were? For goodness' sake, she literally just came back from a mission involving one, and it ended with nearly everyone dead and your sempai being thrown into a Silent Room that's slowly killing her, and--

"...Fucking calm down, Green. I know how that op ended. I was there." Wendy replies after a moment, grimacing as she takes another sip from her glass. "And I know how dangerous one of those things are - probably more than you do. It's just...well, you know." Her lips curl into the barest approximation of a smile, a genuine one that you can't help but feel wasted with the topic at hand.

"...It's like that feeling you get when you're still a kid and you keep seeing your dad's guns locked in his cabinet. You know how dangerous they are, you know that you're not supposed to even hold one until much later, and you know how fucked you're going to be if you manage to sneak one out. You know all that. But at the same time, you desperately want to break into that closet and just take one, because..." She makes a cyclical gesture with a hand. "...it's gonna be so much fucking fun when you do."

>> ☐ Deculture 08/04/15(Tue)13:05:29 No.41668464

But that's just the things talking, you insist. It's what they do. That's what draws people to them. They make people lust for them, like some sort of golden fever, until they go crazy enough to kill for them!

"...Knew that already, Green." Wendy nods. "But it isn't it. It's...I don't know. Something else other than that. Something that doesn't feel like you've got other people fucking around with your head, but it's all you." She shrugs here. "Maybe I am crazy. Or maybe I just think they're really fucking cool."

You find yourself staring at her, a disbelieving grimace curling your lips. ...Cool, huh? She thinks weapons that turn their users into face-eating monsters with sawblades for teeth 'cool'?

Well, nobody ever said Middle School 2nd Year Syndrome is confined only to Japan. Or to kids 13-14 years of age.

Just as you make to say this out loud, however--

"Boss? I got the design you wanted! Designer guy says it'll take some time to make, but he's REALLY concerned about the name. Something about it being really unlucky for business, or something..."

Both you and Wendy freeze as a newcomer loudly and cheerfully strides into the relative quiet of the bar, your grip tightening on the butterfly knife you're palming. You glance quickly at the Soul Gem floating in whiskey - it's pulsating fast, really fast, akin to a racing heartbeat.

You look up at Wendy - the Callidus meeting your gaze with something approaching urgency in her eyes, before shaking her head. Signifying to remain calm, to remain cool, and to wait before moving. Gritting your teeth, you do so, keeping your head down and letting your breath escape through tightly-pursed lips. Forcing your body to ignore the temptation to hyperventilate as adrenalin courses through you.

You hear Charles grunt here, followed by the newcomer's steps coming closer. Your shoulders tensing and your insides twisting as you prepare to move at the slightest sign of threat.

But instead of going for your kidneys with a combat knife as she comes up beside you, the stranger simply hands what appears to be a large white piece of cardboard over to the afro-wielding bar owner. "I personally think it's really stylish, and has a kind of 'Bar At The End of the World' kinda feel, but don't you think 'Gates of Hell' is a bit TOO much...?"

It's here, then, with the newcomer busy talking to the grunting mountain that is Charles of Charles' Bar, that you sneak a glance at her. At the stranger making Wendy's Soul Gem react in a rather disturbing way.

She's...well, she's cute, but she's nothing special, you note. A few inches taller than you, definitely a bit more slender and modestly-proportioned, the newcomer is a glass of water with black hair styled into an impossibly-neat, impossibly-prim bobcut. She's also wearing what looks like a butler's formal uniform - with the tie and the vest and all that - but with a pencil skirt rather than trousers, and the sleeves sliced off to bare her arms and shoulders. It's a strange and unorthodox look, but for a bar type of situation, it kinda works. Almost classy in a way.

...And no, you don't see a ring. Or a pendant. Or any jewelry that would give her away as a Magical Girl.

Another grunt from Charles makes you start, and the girl pouts here. "Well, it's your bar, Boss, and I'm not going to stop you. But maybe sleep over it, see if you're really set on the idea? I mean, it is a really big decision, and--"

Grunt. "Okay, okay. Gates of Hell it is, jeez." She catches you looking at her, and you blink as she winks at you, almost in a flirty way. "You guys'll still drink here even if it's called that, right? I mean, if you see this sign outside?"

She takes the whiteboard from Charles to flash it at your direction. It's a neon signboard, with the words 'Gates of Hell' written in bright violet neon, and in highly-stylized cursive lettering. A rather silly-looking emblem of a prancing demon wielding a gun on each hand emblazoned above it.

You glance back at Wendy, who shrugs at you and takes another sip from her glass. Giving you another peek at the Soul Gem floating in the liquor.

It's...it's stopped pulsing. It's just glowing with its natural light, now. A steady sort of glow.

Considering that Wendy's the murderhobo and Midori's a better specialist in illusions, shouldn't it be the other way around? I mean ffs, it was implied, multiple times, that Midori's actually competent in the illusions department. If someone was good enough to get her, they should be getting Wendy too, unless Pinky bullshit or Golden Weapon fuckery is protecting her.

GreenGreen isn't better in illusions, she has a different style that's better suited to general use: turning people's expectations against them.

I'm finding this VERY weird btw. I mean, sure, we didn't suggest it, but do we need to spell out every detail of Midori's actions for her to DO stuff that makes sense for her to do IC? I mean, it's not like when we're directing Chiaki, we detail where she fires every single bullet etc.

Also, why is EVERYONE so sure that it's the 9th doing the spying on us? What if it's the 10th, either looking for revenge, or info? What if it's someone else who KNOWS that Midori is a) Chiaki's current girlfriend; b) one of her Aides as Warmaster?

Also, why isn't Midori thinking of any of these possibilities herself? There are actually A LOT of people that might try to follow them, and her in particular, because of her position, especially now when she has plenty of reasons to be paranoid.

Chiaki has plenty of potential enemies after all.

Ok, this is turning into a rant, Imma gunna shut up now.

First off is a comic. This is an edit of a 4-koma I found a whole back. I have no idea what the original Japanese text said, so I just went with what the comic made me think of. Even if it's a trace, I learned a little from this. I hope I can put some of that into practice in the future.

Yeah, me too. I suppose that Mami has a relatively minor role in the mythos because she got killed so early on compared to the other four main characters. According to Decu, her title is "The Unconquered Sun", which I find kind of hard to place into context considering the other four's titles. I really wish that Decu would expand more upon this, it's a really interesting aspect of the setting.

Yeah, of course you'll still drink here, you tell the girl. It's just a sign, after all.

"Really?" The girl turns the whiteboard towards her, frowning over the design, before shrugging her slender shoulders. "Well, Boss knows best, I guess," She remarks, before tucking the board underneath one arm and making for the exit once more. "I'll go and tell him it's final, then, Boss. I'll be back as soon as I can to help you with the afternoon crowd!"

Charles grunts in assent as the girl leaves - and it's with her rather noisy exit as she suddenly gets set upon by what looks to be a rather ornery crow that you yourself glance around. Afternoon crowd? You're the only other customer here besides Wendy, what afternoon crowd?

"...Maybe the functioning alcoholics only have enough self-respect to keep themselves away until early evening, or whatever. Don't ask me." Wendy murmurs, carefully draining the rest of her whiskey from her glass and then fishing her Soul Gem out. By this time the pale pink gem had completely stopped pulsing, or even showing any other sign of activity other than its natural glow. "...Right. Tail's gone. Whoever or whatever it is, it's fucked off somewhere else." She lets out a sigh of relief. "Any idea who it can be, Green? Besides Karasawa, I mean. ...Someone from the Tenth, you figure?"

You look at Wendy and shake your head. It's...you're not really sure. At first you suspected that it was someone from the Tenth, but you'd know. You may not have been the best Callidus in the rank during your tenure there, but you damn well could tell if someone from the Tenth was tailing you or not. You don't even have to do the Soul Gem thing to know. It's just one of the quirks of your contract, you suppose.

"...Probably. And this'd give a clearer return, too." Wendy pats her own Soul Gem, the bauble still dripping and glistening with liquor, with a finger. "So it's not any of our usual suspects, then."

No, you guess not, you say after a moment. ...But then again, as much as you'd like to fine out who it is, it'll have to wait. You need to decide about what to do with your sempai, and you need to make that decision right now. The earlier you make that decision, the sooner you can pull your plan off and get your sempai from her prison.

"...Maybe wait until we're somewhere private, Green?" The American Callidus ventures here, sounding somewhat uncertain. Her speech the slightest bit slurred, her cheeks going the faintest tinge of pink. "I mean, the tail's gone, but that doesn't mean this is someplace secure enough to discuss that kind of thing, yeah." She turns towards the stoic Charles. "No offense, big guy."

How do you respond?

WHO'S THAT MEGUCA?

>>41669505
Well, considering Decu's love for lifting Warhammer/Warhammer 40k lore and/or expys, it might come from there. I think there's an ultrasmurf captain with a name that plays off of that latin phrase. There's also the historical Roman god of soldiers to consider.

It might just refer to Mami being both walking sunshine and an extremely lethal meguca.

Really? Interesting, but I doubt I'd still be interested in the quest at that point. I mean sure, Decu's writing is awesome, and I like the MGNQ setting and whatnot, but it wouldn't be the same without Chiaki.

I guess the quest's future would then depend on how many people think like me or not.

...Fine. That's...alright. Somewhere more private. Okay. You have an idea where to go, and it's just nearby. And...well, it should be a bit more private than your sempai's apartment, which might already be bugged to hell and back if you've a hint of how Kyuubey thinks.

So you make to take Wendy there, after quickly paying Charles for your drinks (the bar owner grunting at your own untouched whiskey, but simply waving you off when you tried to apologize). It's only when Wendy tries to slide off the bar stool she'd been perched on this entire time - nearly falling flat on her face in the attempt - that you realize the consequences of her little ploy earlier. Reminding you of a half-drunken memory a couple of lifetimes ago, one made inside a Silent Room with only a bloodstained maid for company.

You shake your head at this, and steady the American Callidus with a hand on her shoulder. A hand that she immediately brushes off, but more of reflex than anything malevolent.

"...'m fine, 'm fine." Wendy's slurred speech is almost indecipherable as she staggers back to her feet, her sleepy eyes straining to look alert from underneath her mop of chocolate-brown hair. "Got this. I got this. Not even drunk. Just...just a bit buzzed. S'all." She sways dangerously from side to side before finally standing still. "...Yeah. Still got it. S'okay, Green."

Really? You could just, you know, discuss it here, or--

"N-no. Gotta be private. Gotta be secure." She takes a wobbly step towards you, and for a moment it looked as if she was going to topple face first - but she doesn't, instead grabbing hold of your hand. "Just...take me there. Dry out on the way, already sober when we get there. Promise."

If she's sure, then, you reply, before tightening your hand's grip on hers and then pulling her out of the bar. Stopping every couple of steps along the way as the Callidus you're towing stumbles now and then.

Jeez. For something to reduce a usually lethally-coordinated Callidus like Wendy into someone so clumsy, and in just a short time...that soulgem-dunking thing is really potent, huh?

Well, of course it is, you reply to yourself. Exact same thing happened to you, and you didn't even touch one drop of the stuff.

You shake your head again, before finally getting Wendy across the street, and into the home you left years ago.

Hanegawa's. Specifically, your room inside the small apartment above your father's ramen joint.

No place more private. No room more secluded.

And if your parents did hold true to their promise - that they'd always keep it under lock and key no matter what circumstances - completely bug-free.

If you get found out here, then you're throwing in the towel yourself. Because if Kyuubey's managed to get eyes and ears in your own room, then there is no place in Mitakihara that's safe from the mutant cat bastard.

Anyway. It takes you the better part of an hour to get Wendy (and yourself) across a semi-full ramen restaurant, through a haggard-looking team of cooks, and then finally past your own father counting yesterday's earnings - before you finally get her into your room with no one the wiser. The key you've always kept with you sliding home into its lock with a well-oiled ease, before a neat twist allowed you access to nearly everything else you hold dear in the entire world.

Everything else besides your sempai.

Which is, embarrassingly enough, a room full of your old art. Art you've slaved over in the creation of MM x MM. Prototypes of characters, failed profiles, ridiculously long-lists of techniques and hopelessly-convoluted relationship maps. Right where you left them, some of them pinned on the walls, or even on the ceiling. All there, as if preserved in memory.

Oh, and all the doujinshi you've personally purchased, too, in order to hone your craft in depicting those unspeakable acts. All arranged neatly into shelves facing your cot. You still know each and every one by heart, even though you've stopped collecting ever since you struck out.

"Where...where the hell am I...?" Wendy drawls from her place on your small, one-person cot. Still somewhat out of it, but slowly recovering. "Some kinda weird otaku paradise, is that it? Did I...did I just get kidnapped by a fat otaku to get raped, or--"

...No, of course not, You tell her after a few moment's worth of stunned disbelief. ...Just what kind of garbage does Wendy come up with when she's not herself?!

A-anyway! You're here to discuss what to do with your sempai, and it's important that you make a decision right here and now! That's why she's here in your bedroom!

"Oh." The other Callidus in the room nods. "...Yeah. Yeah, I remember. 's'about Kong, right?"

Yeah. It's about her, alright. You took Wendy here to make sure the conversation between the both of you won't be heard by anyone else.

But even then, you want to make doubly sure, so...erm. You'll need Wendy's help, here.

"...My help? But what--" Wendy begins, before her eyes go wide with half-drunk realization. "Oh. Oh, yeah. The dream thing I do." She grins here, then, a sleepy, drippy kind of grin. "Yeah, I can...can do that. No one else can. Fuck 'em if they say so."

Yes! Yes, that! You smile and sit beside her on the bed. That should make things just a bit more secure. And if what your sempai told you is correct, then she can share her dreams with someone else who's also asleep at the same time, and they can talk there. The conversation will literally take place in your dreams, which means no recording equipment can capture it, barring some sort of Culexus or something.

"Y-yeah. Really secure." The Callidus echoes, before smiling again as she leans her head against your shoulder. Making you feel suddenly self-conscious despite your...well, blithe eagerness about things. "Easy as pie. Just...take a nap together, n'I'll take care of the rest."

Really? You blink here. That's it? Just nap together? No secret incantations, no special perfumes, nothing of the sort?

"Don't need that crap," The brown-haired American insists, pouting now. "Just...nap. Nap and nothing else." And then, without any warning whatsoever, she pushes you down onto the bed in a sudden spurt of movement - causing the both of you to be literally on top of each other. Causing you to almost shriek, half in panic, and half in...well, exactly what? Fear?...Maybe. You don't know right now.

"I'm...I'm really good at it," Wendy begins to boast, her face mere inches from yours, in the strangely adorable drunken tone she'd been speaking in for quite some time now. "N-napping. Really, really good. I'm...I'm the...the fuckin' best at it."

That's...well, that's nice, you manage to squeak out, still completely poleaxed at this turn of events. After all, it IS your girlfriend's ex on top of you. On your childhood bed, of all places, and--

Amusingly enough, I can actually see Decu trolling us with that one. Don't think so though, Wendy didn't drink that much physically. Her head is fuzzy because of Soul Gem dunking.

Even if lewds happen, it'll all fade to black anyway, and some writefaggot from WST will put something up on pastebin.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/09/15(Sun)11:00:27 No.41767728 Archived

You are a Magical Girl, and you're...doing something...with someone you're not supposed to be doing it with.

"Mmnph--!!"

It's...you don't know how it started. You had no idea it was going to lead to this.

All you wanted to do was save your sempai. Everything you've been doing up to this point was to save her from the fate that the entire universe had conspired to force her into.

"N-nngh...!"

You...you were prepared, you remember. Prepared to do everything and anything to get this done. Even if it means putting your life in danger again. Even if it means forfeiting your second and last chance at life, a chance that your best friend and a goddess with amber eyes had so selflessly blessed you with. Just to save her. Just to make sure she's alright.

But not this. Never this. To do something so...so wrong, and especially with HER of all people--

"M-mmgh..."

Push her away. You can do it. You can't let this happen. Just take her by the shoulders and push her off you--

No. No, no. Don't.

You're...you're still doing this for your sempai.

This will help get her out. This will--

"...Mnnn..."

No...you're not enjoying it.

You're not.

"..."

Your last thought, just before the darkness takes you, is how her lips are the softest pair you've ever kissed. Since...ever.

And the last thing you feel is her fingers lacing through yours.

You open your eyes after what seems like an eternity, and gasp in disbelief as you realize where you are.

This is...you're not in your room anymore. ...You're not even in Mitakihara anymore.

You're in...no, this is impossible. You shouldn't be here. This place should not exist.

You're in Unmei Junior High. Specifically, on the rooftop of the main building, with the elaborate and swanky Art-Noveau railings. Just a few minutes into the golden hour, the slowly-sinking sun in the horizon bathing everything in a soft amber glow. The gothic-themed crenallations jutting out from the nearby buildings casting their shadows ominously across the glowing tiles like swords unsheathed for war, or feathers sprouting from skeletal wings. The scent of blue roses thick in the air, almost like an oppressive stench.

...You're actually in the school that you made up years go.

The school that you wrote into your own love story-turned after-dark anime. Replicated accurately, down to the last tile.

The school that Miracle Midori was attending school in, until her fateful meeting with Murder Mayumi.

...Which means--

You look down at yourself, and blink again.

Your clothes - gone. Replaced by the very first costume Miracle Midori wore, before her upgrade.

This is...no, this has to be some sort of joke. As, as exciting as this is, to actually be in an accurate simulation of your own created universe, this...this has got to be a prank. Some sort of gag--

"...A joke, huh?" A voice growls from somewhere behind you, and your eyes widen at the sound. Your body immediately turning - no, whirling - in the same way that you drew your self-insert facing the stranger that would change her life forever. "Well, I'm not fucking laughing."

>> ☐ Deculture 08/09/15(Sun)11:03:06 No.41767758

>>41767748

You blink again as you come face to face with a completely red-in-the-face Wendy, her arms crossed underneath her chest. The American Callidus wearing Murder Midori's costume, from the haircut to the waspishly-buzzing chainsaw-toothed shield clamped onto her arm.

That's...why does she look like--

"...The fuck do I know?" Wendy snaps, the feathers of her bomber jacket's down collar bristling. "It's just, I did what you said, right? You said you wanted to talk inside a dream. Well, here we are. And now I look like this, and you look like that."

Dream...? You blink at her again, a blank look of confusion ghosting across your features, before realization hits you like a hammer.

Wait, this is a dream? A real honest-to-goodness dream? You're talking in a dream right NOW?

"What did I just fucking say?!" The brown-haired girl - now a clear brunette, what with you having written Murder Mayumi to have 'hair as black as night, reminiscient of raven wings in the darkest hour of twilight' - replies sharply. The chainsaw teeth on her Shield shrieking, before suddenly going still. "Of course we're in a dream! You think I'd really wear something like this, Green?" She spreads her arms wide, before turning briefly in place. "Do I want to look like this much of an overdesigned faggot?"

...No, but...you thought dreamscapes were less concrete like this and more...abstract. Less of an actual place but more of emotions and memories running together. Forming weird shapes and symbols and dogs coming out of people's faces or something.

A-and, hey! Murder Mayumi isn't overdesigned! You...er, the creator clearly intentionally designed her to have an elaborate costume, because of her strong and confident personality type! You can't fault a character design when it's clearly deliberate, and--!

>> ☐ Deculture 08/09/15(Sun)11:04:14 No.41767767

>>41767758

"Strong and confident type? More like complete-utter-fucking-asshole personality type." Wendy grumbles. "Yeah, sure, it's clear she's got the whole dark mysterious magical girl thing going on, and she's the deutaragonist-slash-main love interest out of everyone else Magical Midori meets, but sometimes I think Green Green wants everyone reading to hate Mayumi as much as she wants to push the idea that she's a badass. It's too fuckin' inconsistent for me sometimes. One page she's swooping Midori off her feet, then the next she's blackmailing her into doing what she wants. It's like an abusive relationship, and--" The American seems to catch herself, and stops, shaking her head. "N-not that I'd know anything about that garbage. I just hear it from Annie and shit."

...

"A-anyway, fuck this, you wanted to talk, let's talk." Wendy snaps again, going red once more. "S'not like we got long with naps like this. We gotta do this quickly."

Alright. Fine. But...well, you're not going to forget this.

The idea that Wendy's actually a big fan of your work - well, it shouldn't make you that happy, but it does, somehow.

In any case, the both of you begin your clandestine discussion in the dream. You quickly summarize from memory what your options are in getting Chiaki out of the Silent Room.

You have three options right now.

The first involves breaking into Chiaki's vault and getting one of the Golden Weapons, namely her Golden Desert Eagle, and then breaking into the Silent Room itself, to give Chiaki the aforementioned Desert Eagle. This would involve calling in favors from Kyoko, Sayaka, Enishi and Wendy, and every one of them is ready to help. You feel good about this plan, despite it being a high-risk one.

[3/4]

>>41767767

The second involves getting the help of Annie May Springfield, the High Priestess of the Church of the Golden Land. You'll enlist her help, and with her as an outside expert, you'll convince Kyuubey to have an exorcism performed on Chiaki. This of course involves stuff you don't really know much about, including asking the Blessed Lady for help. You're not sure about this plan, despite it being a relatively low-risk one - except for the Blessed Lady bit.

The third...well, it's you and Wendy busting Chiaki out and hauling her off to somewhere else. It's basically kidnapping. You don't like this plan at all, mostly because it would not only put too many lives at risk, but its high chance of failure. Not to mention you'll be practically parting ways with the Officio in the most violent manner possible.

...Not a very healthy list of options, but it's what you have right now, after running around for most of the entire day.

Anyway. What do you do?

[]Ask Wendy's opinion about the three options.
[]Try to think if there's anything you missed, anything you can add to the list.
[]Make a decision, right here and now, about which option you're going with.
[]Other.

Man, all these threads, and only crappy options available.

Option one WILL help, but we don't know if it will be enough.

Option two can go anywhere from epic fail to epic win, depending on Pinky.

Option three is just plain horrible, and comes with no guarantees that it will help Chiaki in any way, presuming we could succeed in the first place.

Then again, I suppose there wouldn't be any blatantly good options after 'give soul gem'.

This has some potential actually. Who knows how the link might have changed between Midori becoming a TBL Vessel, and Chiaki changing as much as she did. It could allow us to help her directly, either before or after delivering the DE.

>> ☐ Anonymous 08/09/15(Sun)11:22:55 No.41767919

What we have been doing so far is talking to two parties who both have interest in Chiaki not getting better.

Namely Pinky and the Claradoll.
Pinky outright stated that she is fine with Chiaki coming out of this as some sort of lovecraftian monstrosity.
The Claradolls are minions of Homucifer so everything Manuke said to use should be taken with a bit of grain.
The Church absolutly falls flat since it involves Pinky and Pinkyworshippers once again and also revealing Chiakis condition to outsiders,

This leaves us either breaking into Chiakis Cell which also is a bad idea since it involves turning against our Officio or seek outside help in form of an expert on this like Kharn.
I mean, Kharn was kinda in a situation like this. Twice.

>> ☐ Anonymous 08/09/15(Sun)11:26:16 No.41767954

>>41767919
That's assuming QB hasn't contacted Kharn and Souji already. Midori wouldn't know, on one hand, and on the other, she has no way to securely contact them. There are just too many ways for someone to listen in without proper equipment, and having the Homucifer situation leaked would be extremely, horribly bad...

As for Manuke, that depends. They might be Homucifers, or, like the shield, there might be multiple versions of it for any Homu that fulfills the right conditions.

You are dumb you pissant because you cant see the bigger picture.

Of course a retard like you would assume that we should just spill the beans to Kyubey despite me not mentioning anything like that.

Since you are a retard let me point out the obvious to you:

-Chiaki is in a cell because Kyubey thinks he is in control
-Kyubey is convinced that he will just sit it out just like before due to the Failsafe in Chiakis mind aka Malal.
-We know from both Pinky and the Claradoll that this isnt the case and that shit is in fact hitting the fan

Now we need to approach the Critter use diplomacy, you know, the thing Midori used to her advantage in Siberia and simply make him believe that we know more about the Situation than he does without revealing our cards.

On the matter of the link between Midori and Chiaki. If I remember right, the two of them were able to send simple pulses to each other, something they developed AFTER Siberia, though it was mentally draining, so they decided to only use it in case of emergencies.

Uuuh... the reason I said that what you said is dumb is because there's NO reason why QB would believe Midori, especially when he knows she has deep emotional ties to Chiaki. Furthermore, Midori does NOT know of the Malal thing, and Manuke/Pinky did NOT know either, they just know that shit's hitting the fan, not why.

So, for all QB knows, this IS how the failsafe is supposed to work in such an extreme case, since I don't think the previous wipes were under such dire circumstances, seeing the previous times, Chiaki was obviously unable to put up a fight.

tl;tr: Diplomacy won't work because QB has no reason to believe Midori.

>>41767994
Sympathy? I wouldn't say that. Kyuubey lost all credibility when the failsafe in Chiaki's mind was discovered (with Malal admitting that QB is aware of it). Right now, we can't trust him. You better think of him not as an ally of Chiaki, but as someone who is trying to keep everything under control, even if it means hurting Chiaki. Basically, QB can't be trusted

>>41768013
Well, IC, Midori has no reason to believe that the Murder-doll doesn't belong to Chiaki. Furthermore, with how terrified Manuke was of Midori because of her Vessel status, odds are decently high that she wouldn't lie just for the sake of avoiding a gruesome retribution later.

Lastly, there's only so much paranoia we can handle until we either go crazy, or get nothing done.

This is where Midori comes into play.
We have to coerce him that
1. we have a better understanding than he does about the situation
2. he is not in control anymore
3. due to the events in Siberia we have a way to get through to Chiaki (he doesnt know what EXACTLY happened there inside the Witchbarrier)
4. That not helping Chiaki will make everything worse for everyone on the level of the Walpurgisnacht-Event

Remember that this is how Midori surivived Siberia by bullshitting, diplomancy and being cautious until our resident Retard-Squad voted for GET FUCKED.

UUUUUUUUUUUUUUUUUUUHHH- except that she is better informed than Kyubey AND knows what actually happened in Siberia which Kyubey doesn't.

His reason to believe Midori is her telling him that down there in her call aint happening what he thinks is happening and Midori having knowledge to back that up that Kyubey does not possess.
Currently he is convinced he is in control and knows what is happening.
When Midori shows up and throws a wrench in those gears he will listen.

What I am trying to say is that he is too paranoid to trust us, with his life and his Officio on the line. I bet he is putting all his faith into the failsafe, because it has worked other times. I too agree that it would be the best outcome if he agreed to help us with our plan, but as circumstances are, he is probably not going to agree to anything

1. How? Should Midori tell him that she talked to Faust and one of Chiaki's familiars? Even IF he believed that, he'd probably just lock her up in a Silent room too, if he doesn't just get rid of her because she might be a potential liability.
2. That's not entirely true, he can still more or less nuke/bomb/whatever Chiaki's room and kill her, she's in no state to defend herself.
3. We can't prove that, since this situation is clearly different, on one hand and on the other, QB is far less likely to fall to complete BS.

4. Actually, as far as QB knows, killing her works just as well. Malal's plan goes down the toilet, but Faust and TTO aren't immediate threats, with several Golden Weapons secure in his posession, he can ensure that for the moment, no one else gets them all, and potentially work at finding another candidate.

Oh and btw, we don't know if Midori was even contracted during the last Walmartnight, she might not have any idea just how horrible that was.

There's no Witch Barrier in the silent room. There is literally NO reason why QB should believe that this incident is related to the Siberia incident. This is NOT a witch out event, as such, there's no reason to believe that Midori's experience back then has any actual relevance.

He already admitted that he doesn't KNOW what's going on in the room, but they DO know that it's not a Witch out.

That's what a number of anons are going for at any rate. Decu left it as something that can be achieved and Cooldown said that it can work out if Midori and Wendy exchange enough points during this Midori arc.

Seeing as Chiaki's thoughts are mostly controlled by anons, then she'll probably get wet if she hears about this, or something like that.

>1. How? Should Midori tell him that she talked to Faust and one of Chiaki's familiars?
A) We could bullshit him about our Link to Chiakis Soulgem having changed being afflicted by Siberia.
B) We can Bullshit him about Pinky. He knows Pinky is a thing and is scared shitless. We know that Pinky is interested in Chiaki/Homu becoming a monster. Simply by telling him that it will raise his alert and attention to the other shit we have to say.
C) We could actually bullshit that we found out more about Chiaki/Homucifer/Pinky etc due to Siberia and thus know what is going and why its going to fail.

Siberia is a blind spot for him that we can use.

>Even IF he believed that, he'd probably just lock her up in a Silent room too, if he doesn't just get rid of her because she might be a potential liability.
Do you have a case to show for where something like that happened?
He has never done anything like that or acted like that why are you pulling out of your ass how he is suddenly going to act?

In fact he threw Chiaki into a cell because he is convinced that she will stay there, the Malal-Failsafe will wipe her memory and a brand new mindwiped Homu will come out of there like before.

>2. That's not entirely true, he can still more or less nuke/bomb/whatever Chiaki's room and kill her, she's in no state to defend herself.
Because that totally worked on powerful witches and the Walpurgisnacht-Incident before, right? RIGHT? Oh wait, it didnt!

Nevermind that he has never shown erratical behaviour like and that once again you are pulling shit out of your ass. You assume that he would act like that without having any basis for is.
He is cold, manipulative, calculating. This is anything but.

>3. We can't prove that, since this situation is clearly different, on one hand and on the other, QB is far less likely to fall to complete BS.
Actually we can. We can tell him to inspect the cell and its tenant himself.

So, you're basically banking on QB falling for complete bullshit? That's a bit too risky, especially since he's genuinely afraid of Homucifer and far more likely to kill anything like it rather than take any truly big risks.

As for my theories about how he might act. It's possible if QB believes that Midori's attachment makes her a risk to the officio. She's not REALLY one of his girls, and the link with Chiaki might be something that works against her. Don't forget, Homucifer TERRIFIES the Incubators, enough to ensure that the FIRST would get involved, you know, the Officio composed entirely of supped up Witch/MG Hybrids? That should say something about how bad the situation is.

Also, the situation with Chiaki now, and WPN are completely different. Chiaki is not a humongous Witch, and she's in no state to fight against anything right now. Furthermore, even WPN grade Witches were at the time free and able to act. Chiaki is under Silent Room conditions, which IS affecting her to an extent.

Also, keep in mind that one of the reasons why I believe that QB could kill Chiaki is especially because he's calculating and manipulative. He has to think of the entire Officio. Plan or no plan, Chiaki is just one girl, and Warmasters have been ousted before, like in the Malal flashback with Kharn's rescue. Chiaki also happens to look like the Incubator's worst fear. He also admitted himself that what he SHOULD have done was to have her executed immediately, and that keeping her alive is a big risk for him and all the other girls.

He's already taking a big risk. It's doubtful that he'll raise the stakes anymore than he already did. Not without solid proof. Midori has none of that.

You ask Wendy for her opinions on each option. You have your own opinion on each one, but you want to hear what she thinks.

The American Callidus looks at you for a moment - looking way too much like Murder Mayumi than you're actually comfortable with - before speaking. "...It seems like getting the Deagle is the safe choice to me, from an execution standpoint. We've already got everything lined up for it. Dunno if it's the good choice, though - I think she'd be pretty pissed off if you got yourself fucked up and crazy carrying her shit around. Or with the fallout of actually doing the break-in." A half-beat's worth of silent hesitation. "...Probably can take care of that part, though."

She looks down at the buzzsaw-shield on her arm, turning it this way and that, seemingly admiring it, before looking back up at you. "Annie...I think she's qualified to help. She might be the only one that CAN help. Never had a lot of confidence in trying to sweet-talk gods into giving a shit, but I know for a fact Annie can handle this kind of thing. It's about whether you trust her to."

Another moment of silence, this time a bit longer as she turns her back on you, crossing her arms under her chest. "...The third option's probably what I'd like to do. Get her out of there now. You do that, I bust open the golden weapon vault, and we take care of this where nobody else has to get involved. Hide out at the Church while we do whatever we have to do. It leaves Annie open to try an exorcism, too.

"The Incubators won't like it, but fucking with the Church - even our shitty little offshoot - is liable to hurt puella magi morale worldwide. They'll think twice about it to avoid the mess, at least for a while - even the First doesn't pick fights with the Church on a whim. ...Seems better than letting her sit around here hoping nobody stabs us in the back."

She turns to look at you again. "...Just for the record, I'm not trying to talk you into picking one or the other, alright? You asked for my opinion, I'm giving it. Whatever you pick, we'll go with that, no questions asked. Won't hear a peep out of me, besides complaining how utterly fucked this entire situation is."

...Y-yeah. Of course. You understand.

Predictably, Wendy favors the third option, but you're really just not taken with the idea. There's too much at stake here.

The second you're still not sure about, but Wendy seems to be really confident about Annie. But...well, where does her loyalty and friendship to Annie end and her honest opinion of her begin? They seemed to be pretty close from what you saw back there at the Deli Heal. ...Of course, the High Priestess herself didn't look all that crazy. Slightly weird, sure, and a bit...too easygoing for your taste, but she felt like someone who had her act figured out. But there's still the matter of asking the Blessed Lady for intervention, and you'll probably never stop feeling wary about that.

The first option...well, at least Wendy also agrees with you that it's the safest option so far, if not for the fact that there'll be hell to pay right after. This puts it right out front of all the other options. And you admit, you feel good about your chances of pulling it off. You'll just have to coordinate...

You bite into a glove-clad thumbnail as you force yourself to think. Is there something you're missing, here? There must be something you haven't looked into, something you didn't check out. You know that you don't really have time to actually explore everything, but if you can add just one or two more options to the list...

You blink here. Kharn. Didn't Kyuubey said Kharn was coming over? As a consult?

>> ☐ Deculture 08/09/15(Sun)12:34:33 No.41768804

"...Yeah, I heard something about that too." Wendy nods. "Heard a couple dozen Eversors back at the canteen giggling about it. Heard they were going to order a lot of blonde hair dye, too. Not too sure how I actually feel about it myself, except for the fact that she's still fucking terrifying." She blinks at you. "What about her?"

Well, like...Kharn seems to have a lot of experience with being a Witch, right? Of what your sempai is going through? She did perform the procedure on her, too. If she examined Chiaki right now, then...then it's possible that she'd validate your own findings herself, and then add her voice to yours when you finally try to convince Kyuubey into giving Chiaki her Golden Weapon back.

"That's..." Wendy frowns here. "...Alright, that kind of makes sense, but do you really want to wait that long until she gets here? Not to mention that she might take a long time examining Kong. It'll all add up. Yeah, that creepy doll thing did say we don't have a hard and fast deadline, but I'd like to actually see Kong out of there ASAP." She shakes her head.

She's right. But still, having Kharn arguing for you with the Incubator...and she did seem a lot better from the last time you encountered her in person, too...it'd make for a more convincing case, if ever you decide to try that route.

You'll add that as the fourth option, then. Still not a sure, safe bet, but four is better than three. ...Probably that's the most you can do right now, too.

And with that, you can probably make your decision right now.

[]Pick the first option. Stealing the Golden Desert Eagle to give to your sempai.
[]Pick the second option. Enlist Alice's help. Exorcism.
[]Pick the third option. Break Chiaki out and flee the country.
[]Pick the fourth option. Wait for Kharn's arrival, enlist her support.
[]Don't pick any single one. You can't pick one right now. You need more time.
[]Other.

Pinky has already agreed to help us, so Kyuubey is the only obstacle. This is the only option that doesn't automatically alienate Kyuubey when it goes tits-up. This option also allows us the possibility of waiting for Kharn, for example if Kyuubey insists. It is strictly optimal.

>"And you know what? I'm really, really happy for her. In fact, I'm..." She pauses, cackling this time, a sharp and unnerving laugh that rakes painfully against the insides of your skull after being stabbed right into your ear canals. "I'm actually really excited! Because this changes EVERYTHING! It changes everything I've been planning for her, everything I've been planning on doing, everything I've been plotting for these last few fucking CENTURIES!"
>"Oh, well, it doesn't really matter anyhow. What matters is that while I like what's happening to Chiaki, I don't like HOW it's happening." You hear her harrumph here. "So fine. I'll help you out, Midori-chan, but just this once, okay?"
I don't think that Pinky will help further, since this is what she wants to have happen.

Since we're now going to be trying to steal the Golden DEagle, we should start planning for what can go wrong and how to mitigate them.

1. What do we do if Kyouko can't get the card for the Vault?
2. What do we do if Sayaka figures out that we're stealing a GW and tries to stop us?
3. What do we do if QB is alerted to a security breach in the Vault and sends Eversor and Callidus squads at us?
4. How are we going to get the Golden DEagle to Chiaki? We can't just open the door, and how do we even open the peephole?

>> ☐ Anonymous 08/09/15(Sun)13:18:06 No.41769393

>>41769352
1. Wendy seemed to think she can bypass vault security, we dunno if that's true or not though.
2. We can try cashing in that favor. May or may not work.
3. We prevent this from happening with Midori's Illusion. It works on cameras and other monitoring devices, or at least it did in the Lorry arc, so she should be able to trick them into thinking that everything's fine. Plus, Enishi might help.

4. Dunno, but peephole shouldn't be hard to open. It's debatable if that's enough for her to get it though. The dolls might help. The weapons can perma-kill them, but not on their own after all.

We ask QB for permission to visit Chiaki again. He has no reason to refuse. We will essentially end up in the same situation we were in at the start of the quest. Then we put the DE through the hole and disguise this with Callidus magic.

2. and 3. mean that we will have to go with the prison break.

If we do so, we should ask before we break into the Vault, in order to optimize our chances.

If we break in without setting off alarms, then we have a straight shot at getting the Three Stooges to Chiaki.
If the alarms go off, then we have lost nothing since QB likely already thought of what we would do with a stolen Golden Weapon.
His hobby is coming up with worst case scenarios and preparing for them before they happen.

We don't know, though I think not. The second phase of the procedure likely turns Chiaki in a full Maerorus, or however you spell that, and she might already be there after being Homuciferized earlier. As somebody who would've voted for it if I were there that day, I have to say - knowledge is our big weakness. It's what we, as players, crave. Even more than lewds, which the characters may want as much or more than us, we're pretty much unable to turn down that temptation. It's actually pretty clever - pain doesn't threaten us because we don't feel it, but knowledge, even knowledge the characters will have no memory of, is irresistible because it's why we're here in the first place.

Decu can basically rest assured that if he needs us to do something stupid, all he has to do is dangle the possibility of hidden lore and we'll let our curiosityboners do the thinking for us.

Alright. You've made your decision. After all the talking and running around and worrying, you finally know what to do. You know what you want to do to save your sempai.

The first option. Breaking into the Golden Weapon vault, stealing the Golden Desert Eagle, and then breaking into Silent Room Regalia to get the Desert Eagle to Chiaki. That's your decision.

"...Didn't think you'd actually have the balls to pick that." Wendy murmurs after staring at you for what seemed like an uncomfortably long time. And with her wearing Murder Mayumi's costume, you couldn't help but feel just a bit flustered underneath her gaze. "Not the one I'd have picked personally, but I did say we're going with your decision, no questions asked."

She raps her knuckles against the beaten, saw-toothed shield on her arm contemplatively. "We'll need to coordinate with everyone involved in the plan. Right now, from what I remember, we've got Kyoko, Mickey, and Karasawa involved. Let's divvy it up - I'll get Karasawa up to speed, you go for Kyoko. Chances are that'll take care of Mickey automatically too. If everything's in place and we don't get to deal with any surprises, I think we can look at tonight being the earliest time for this particular rescue op."

You blink in surprise here. You don't have a problem with the both of you splitting up the coordinating, but tonight? When you've only come up with the plan today? Isn't that a bit...early?

"...So?" Wendy shrugs here. "We're aiming to make sure Kong doesn't stay inside that hellhole any longer than she has to, right? 'Sides, this means the rainbow of fuckfaces guarding her Silent Room hasn't gotten used to guard duty just yet. Probably going to abuse coffee and power drinks a whole lot, so that'll make them jittery and easy to deal with." She pauses here. "Except for Darks. Easily the biggest fly in our ointment, here. She probably already suspects we're up to something."

...That's...that's horrifying to think about. And when you consider the tail earlier--

Your sempai's ex holds up a gloved hand. "We don't have any proof that it was actually someone from the Ninth, so let's not start connecting dots when we're not sure if they even lead to each other, alright? We do that, we psych ourselves out, and a lot of fucking good that'll do us. Focus on the plan."

"Fine. ...Don't think there's anything else other than that." It's here that your surroundings begin to dim - the golden sun bathing everything with a sunset's glow slowly sinking into the horizon, replaced with the beginning purples and reds of dusk. "Gonna kick us out of the dream, then. You'll probably feel just a bit disoriented when you wake up, but just stay still and it'll pass. Don't get up too quickly, either, or you'll get nauseous and probably throw up all over yourself." She pauses to look at you square in the eye. "Trust me, I know. And it's going to be really shitty if you do."

What do you do?

[]Let Wendy take you out of the dream, and back into the real world.

Personally, I voted for the SG link option because I think it might just fuck us over later if we leave it alone.

At the same time, it MIGHT open up a new option. Best case scenario? We might be able to enter Chiaki's mind or whatever she's in, and bring people in via Wendy's dream shit.

If that actually works, we could assemble an entire team and go in there to help.

Of course, this might just be wishful thinking, but eh...

No, the memory erasures happened every time Girl A/Murderface began to go down a path that was predicted to end in failure, using Malal's vision of previous timelines and her knowledge of what happened in them.

It had nothing to do with whether Murderface found out too much.

You decide to let Wendy do her thing. To take the both of you out of the dream and back into the real world. Feeling a bit more lighter and less anxious now that you've chosen on what to do with your sempai. As if finally making up your mind on what route to take in this dilemma has brushed away the physically-palpable weight of indecision off your shoulders.

Just hold on for a little longer, sempai, you think to yourself, one hand reaching up to touch the Soul Gem at the base of your throat, where Miracle Midori kept hers. Just hold on, help is on its way.

"...Right. Kicking us back into reality now." Wendy says, and you blink as you feel her grab a chunk of your cheek between thumb and forefinger. Around the same time that you see her also pinch a bit of her own cheek with her other hand.

...Wait. Is she...? This is how she does it? Literally pinching the both of you awake? Is that it?

"...You got a problem with that?" Wendy asks, narrowing her eyes.

Well, no, it's just that...you'd thought it'd be a bit more cool, like some kind of incantation, or some kind of non-sequitur way like they did it in that one Western movie you liked, with the naked people being used as computer batteries. They did it with those old-fashioned rotary phones--

"Who DIED and made you expert on cool shit? And besides, I'm the one with the dream powers here, not you." The American snaps, growing flustered once more. "Just...just shut up and let me do this. We're already risking going into overtime as it is, and that's sleepwalking territory."

Alright, alright. You'll keep quiet, you reassure her, fighting to keep the smile off your face. Despite the fact that she'd been nothing but abrasive to you the entire time, it's...you kinda get that most if it, like 80%, is just her trying to look and sound cool. At least that's what you're getting, and you've been a relatively decent judge of character so far. Certainly not like your sempai, where she literally can't help but be abrasive most of the time, but she'd been doing her best not to be, especially with you.

And then it hits you, hard enough to make you sweat a little.

...No, you're not. It's just...you've just been spending a bit more time with her, that's all.

You're not--

The pinching sensation on your cheek stops your train of thought cold, and the world immediately disappears in a blink of an eye.

When it returns - with you opening your eyes to the suddenly-harsh fluorescent light of your own room--

You are sudenly aware that you're...naked. And sweaty. Well, half-naked and sweaty, anyway. In your underwear, with your clothes in a discarded pile on the floor, alongside Wendy's.

And speaking of your sempai's ex, she's practically in the same state. Her arm wrapped around your waist and her head resting on your shoulder, her face buried in the side of your left breast. Still obviously asleep, her snoring muffled into a faint rumble against your skin, making your hairs stand on end.

What do you do?

[]Take this chance for a tactile comparison between you and Wendy.

Some of the 'get going' votes were also votes for touching fluffy tail. Since if we get going right away those are mutually exclusive but if we touch fluffy tail first they're not, the intent must have been to touch fluffy tail but make sure we get going quickly and have her explain what the fuck on the way.

Basically, they can't be counted singularly as votes to leave.

Midori's doing pretty damn well for herself, but that might be partly because Wendy is a sucker for cute girls with nice lips and a D-cup or above, and is generally really lonely lately.
It's hard to say about Ramen Points, but it seems to be enough that a little crush is forming.

Or maybe it's all a suspension bridge effect sort of deal, they're both worried and stressed and the other one is there and comforting.

It wasn't nearly as much of a physical attraction - she has a preference and it really affects her choices sometimes, but she can still be physically attracted to girls that aren't secretly/non-secretly dairy cows.

Murderface was fun, and they understood each other. Same line of work, same direct attitude about how to do it, same shitty grumplord personality, in a loose sense. They probably enabled each other and it was probably a naive kind of love where neither really knew each other all that well when it came down to it, but they liked being around each other.

Sometimes all it takes is someone that makes you feel like you're not alone in the world.

It's kind of a pet pairing of Midori (drawfag) and mine, so we've talked about it a lot. Wendy's also kind of attracted to Midori's normalness, and Wendy also has a mommy complex the size of her thighs so someone to scold and pamper her a little bit hits her directly in the heart.

Midori likes getting attention - a lot of it - and having someone trying to impress her, then getting gruff and defensive about it (and being kind of a grabby pervert) hits her in a weak spot. It doesn't hurt that she really does have a thing for the kind of tryhard edgelord that Wendy happens to be.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/13/15(Thu)11:35:14 No.41849233 Archived

You stare at the American Callidus sleeping beside you, her snores muffled by the side of your brassiere-clad chest. Her soft, sweat-bedewed, and completely naked frame all but draped onto yours.

To say that you're in a rather compromising position right now - and with your girlfriend's ex, of all people - is an understatement to end all understatements. All you need is someone barging into the room right now, like one of your brothers - or worse, your dad - and it'd practically be a real-life reenactment of an overused surprise event.

At this point, you're not even shocked anymore. Today has been a day of many shocking surprises and revelations, and most of them so harrowing and horrifying, you're not sure why you haven't had a nervous breakdown yet.

From being woken up and told that your sempai has taken a turn for the worse, to Pinky at her sneering, snickering worst giving you an unexpected visit, THEN learning from your sempai's familiar that the one measure supposed to keep her safe is actually killing her slowly and painfully - well, suffice to say waking up in this state isn't exactly making you panic the way it should.

This must be what your sempai feels like.

Just unfortunate surprise after unfortunate surprise, one after another, until it's all she could do not to completely die inside.

>> ☐ Deculture 08/13/15(Thu)11:36:00 No.41849241

It's when you make to extract yourself from Wendy's grasp - grasping her arm by the wrist to gently lift it off you - that a traitorous thought sparks into life in your mind. A thought you'd never imagined would ever take root in your mind, especially with your...current relationship status.

...Did you just...? With Wendy?

You feel a cold sweat immediately break out all over you as you quietly panic in your own childhood bed. N-no, no. You couldn't have. You're still wearing your own underwear, for one, and you're...well, you're not feeling that kind of tingly afterglow that usually sticks with you long after the act itself, just that slight lightheaded feeling that Wendy warned you about. A brief once-over and a quick peek underneath your panties also show nothing untoward, no hint of evidence that something had indeed taken place.

That's...that's good. You let out the breath you've been holding in a sigh of guilty relief. Everything checks out, nothing happened between the both of you. Very good.

Because you'll never be able to live with yourself if the opposite was true.

Chiaki's gone through enough, and going through even a hell of a lot more. To do that kind of horrible thing to her, especially now, would be...

Nngh. You can't even complete the thought. It's just too abhorrent to even think about.

You've done a lot of detestable, unspeakable things in your short career as a Magical Girl, but that is something you know you'll regret for the rest of you life if you did.

You shake your head, and look down at your impromptu nap partner. Despite your fidgeting and moving about on the small, cramped bed, Wendy is still out like light, sleeping the sleep of the innocent dead. ...Guess she wasn't just messing around when she said she was the best at taking naps, huh? Probably could easily snore right through an earthquake if she wanted to.

Staring at her sleeping form gives you another idea, one that makes you feel just as guilty as the first, even though you know it isn't really anywhere near as bad. It's just...it's just comparing, right? Some of the girls in the communal showers back at the Tenth did it all the time, checking their sizes against each other and stuff amidst squealing and jeering. ...You've never really seen the appeal, but you were a total loner back then. You had no one to compare to, but now...

H-hah. You're...you're definitely bigger.

...

By at least a handful. Maybe more.

...

Just a bit firmer, though. Probably all the running around and stabbing people that she does.

...

Nnnh. Is this what your sempai likes, then? She'd never complained about yours, but maybe--

"...You sure you're not actually related to Kong, Green?" You hear Wendy murmur, and you immediately freeze at this, your hand still in mid-grope. ...Grk, you were too preoccupied with comparing that you forgot to keep an eye on her! CRAP!

After a moment, you look towards her, slowly removing your hand from where it was brazenly squeezing.

Uh, you don't really...know what she's talking about, you say after a moment, rather lamely.

Wendy looks at you sullenly, before shaking her head. "...Just that all the other times I got woken up like this, it was Kong doing the feeling up. ...Least when she wasn't forcing me to make pancakes for her, anyway."

A-ah. Your sempai did that, then? You laugh awkwardly here, your cheeks still burning at being caught. You know she can be unreasonable sometimes, but--

"...Didn't really mind all that much. It was pretty...new. She was practically the only other person that wanted me to cook breakfast for them. 'Cept with Kong, she wanted breakfast for every meal of the day, no exception." Wendy shrugs, before stretching lazily on the bed. A strange cat-like expression flickering over her face, one you immediately redden at and turn away from.

"...You going to tell me what was that all about at least, Green?" The American Callidus says slowly, in an almost flirtatious manner. Making you redden even more.

How do you react?

I have made a recopilation, anons. Help me complete it, please. Also, I have put little theories at the end.
THINGS WE WANT TO KNOW BECAUSE OF PLOT
-The identity of the red culexus (Kyouko´s sister? A Kyoko of another timeline that was roaming the Akashic Realm?)
-The real identity of this timeline Akemi Homura (Warmaster of the First? Contracted in The First?)
-Who orchestated the attack on Murderface that ultimately made Kharn witch out, and who were the people involved (Strauss vengeance for what Malal did to her?)
-Who scarred the shield of Chiaki, making impossible for TTO to control Matsuda (Malal? Godoka?)
-Who possessed Misaka during her prophecy
-Who is the mysterious number in the telephone of Chiaki that told us to wake up in Midori´s illusion and called us a fool in Siberia
-New passwords for REMOV that unlock what it has for us
-The real story of the being known as Chiaki Matsuda and how is related to everything that is happening (Many things have been discovered, but still there are much to know)
-The new soul trapped in the Golden Staff (Yuma? The red culexus?)
-Where are the Golden Weapons that we need, what type of weapon are they and who have them (Petra the golden hammer ¿Canon?, This timeline Homu the Golden Shield, one girl who have five, Nicole the Golden Mask, The 17th the Golden Hooks ¿Canon?, Mami has the Golden Musket, the 8th the Golden Scythes ¿Canon?, one girl with long brown hair in a similar style to Pinky that wants friends have one (Nahona? Is she the one with 5 GW?, there is one sword-pistol (Decu said it in ask.fm))

Yes, it´s me. Good guest, anon. It´s true that I too think that this timeline Homura is in The First, and while I personally believe Hazuki and she are different persons, I leave the door open for the opposite. The reason why I put it as questions is that so far we have no confirmation of anything, so for now I leave it as a possibility until new info appears. I don´t know why you called me out, but it´s probably because you´re pissed off with me and think that I am going to mess up everything up again. Relax. I realize that I am one of the most hated presons around here (if not the most). Please, let´s not open the box of shit again: I believe we all had more than enough in thread 274. I´m posting my list because I want a recompilation of important plot things we still have to discover, and while I enjoy theorycrafting, I´m only leaving them as possibilities, nothing more. I do not wish to start a shitstorm again

There's the fact that her sister, you know, the girl who swore to expose Chiaki to the world as Homucifer for getting Yuma killed and heralding the end of the world, is in a Silent Room of ours.
Sure, QB assured us that the First Warmaster is estranged from her and that's why we didn't need to worry before, but now that we have the Wings we have to read up on her as a potential opponent in case we get found out.

Which was Malal anyway.

Though, that said, I can't remember, but did her projection say that he knows about the mind-wipes explicitly, or just that there's some sort of failsafe against Chiaki going all Final Boss on humanity? This is actually relevant, since it would shed some light on what QB actually knows or not.

People shouldn't forget that Malal was playing a very big game, which involved fucking around with Incubators and even Pinky herself to an extent. It's not impossible to think that even QB doesn't really know what Malal did.

What is a better option when the that same person is:
1. Currently a broken mess and completely catatonic
2. Has such a weakened sense of self that she'd get taken over by a Golden Weapon's corruption regardless of the Procedure
3. Is about to Witch Out and no Grief Seeds are able to keep her Grief in check
4. Was goddamned stupid enough to hand her Soul Gem over to an enemy and let the TTO ASSUME DIRECT CONTROL

It's because Chiaki is the only person who can save the world that the reset button on her head has to get pushed when she obviously can't do the job of saving the world.

And they kept Wendy from us because they didn't know if reuniting with her would trigger the same thing that happened the last time we met her, I.e. us about to Witch Out.
There was no problem BECAUSE we didn't know she existed.

...You decide to tell the truth. It's...well, you were caught red-handed, so how exactly are you going to talk your way out of that? Deflecting probably wouldn't work either - maybe for a while at least, but it would only be prolonging the inevitable. Wendy'd confront you about it eventually, and with your luck, she'd bring it up within earshot of your sempai, and that...that could create some complications you do NOT want to have to deal with at all. Oh no.

"..." Wendy is silent as she stares at you, before lifting her shoulders up in another shrug. "...Eh. Sure. I'll buy it." She lets out a small sigh before sitting up on the bed, rubbing at her eyes with both fists. "Puzzles the fucking hell out of me why you have to do something like that, though. You not feeling all that confident with those things, huh?"

Those...things? You blink in confusion here, before you realize just what she meant by that, your arms involuntarily crossing over your brassier-clad chest. ...N-no, it wasn't that! It was just--

"I already fucking told you it's fine." Wendy holds up a hand, before raking her fingers through her sleep-ruined hair. "...Look, I'm in a good mood - usually am after a nice nap - so I'm going to be straight with you, okay? Later I'm going to fucking deny everything else I say after this post, and if you bring it up I'll probably stab you in the fucking kidneys, but other than that just listen."

You blink again, and nod. ...Actually, now that she points it out...this freshly-napped Wendy does seem a bit softer around the edges. She's still cursing like a sailor's kid during summer, but besides that, she does seem a bit less abrasive than she normally is.

"...I'm not a threat, okay? Not to you and...and Kong." The American Callidus winces slightly here, as if voicing the mere subject is prickly enough for her to cause pain. "We didn't part ways all that well, but I don't...blame her entirely for it. Shit happens. We deal. It's shit, but we deal." Her copper-brown eyes stare into your crimson own, before she lets out a sigh and turns away. "I'm not going to steal her away from you, if that's what you're worried about. Consider it beyond the realms of possibility." She grunts here, sticking a cigarette between her lips before lighting it with her abnormally-large golden zippo. Breathing in the smoke in a deep, thirsty gulp.

That's...you didn't really mean it like that, but...really?

Wendy nods. "Not even a fucking issue at this point, to be completely honest. She's got her own thing, and I've got..." She glances back at you, then at the golden lighter in her hand. "...well, a work in progress. Something like that."

An awkward moment later and Wendy breaks the silence with a clearing of her throat. "Anyway. We probably should go get ready, right? We're still aiming for tonight, so." She points to the pile of clothes on the floor, and you nod, making to dress yourself. Your mind still buzzing loudly with everything you've learned today. Wendy does the same a moment later, her cigarette winking out of existence the moment it burned down to the filter.

...Wait. You stop in the middle of putting your hoodie back on, turning to Wendy with your midriff still bared. ...Why did the both of you wake up naked again? Was there any reason for that, or...?

"Dunno. But I usually sleep naked, so." Wendy shrugs. "We were sharing dreams, so probably there was some transference involved." She looks at you as she straps her boots on. "...And no, we didn't fuck, Green. I'd know, and you'd damn very well know, too."

Right. That's...yeah. That's a relief.

From where do you get that?

Anyway. You leave your father's ramen joint a few moments later - spending nearly half an hour saying goodbye to your father and all your brothers - and make a beeline for Kyoko Sakura's sickbay room at the Officio. You did agree with Wendy to split the work involving the coordination of all the parties involved, and the red-haired Eversor's up. With any luck, she'll also get Sayaka in on the act, too - just that you hope the blue-haired Eversor Rank Leader (and Acting Warmaster) isn't around when you tell her partner.

Geh. It's not that you don't trust Sayaka or anything, just that the rapport she had was with your sempai, and...well, it doesn't really transfer to you, even if you are her girlfriend. Sure, she'd been approachable enough, but the blue-haired Eversor is such a legendary stickler for rules that getting her to accept the idea of breaking into two protected areas of the Officio in one night may be a bit too much to ask for. At least, doing that and not expecting to be thrown into solitary, or something.

...As luck would have it, though, Sayaka is indeed there, seemingly back from running interference with a particular idol and now feeding Kyoko from a packed lunch. Despite your dismay at the Acting Warmaster's presence, you couldn't help but appreciate the scene in front of you - wondering if you'll ever get to do that kind of thing with your sempai. ...At least, with you doing the feeding.

"Hey, Midorin!" Kyoko cheers, right before accepting a mouthful of food, delivered by Sayaka's chopsticks. The blue-haired girl on the other hand smiles at your arrival, a tight but tired kind of smile. You greet them in return, entering the small room and closing the door behind you.

You've barely sat down on one of the chairs provided before Sayaka speaks from her place on Kyoko's bedside."Minase's out of our hair for now. She bought the story of Chiaki being in a secret, offshore-op." She makes a face here, clearly not at all comfortable with having to resort to something like lying. "Not the best, I admit, but gives us a couple of weeks' time to work with, at least." She turns to you before smiling again. "Thanks for the assist, Midorin. Like we agreed upon, I owe you one."

You return her nod, inwardly smiling. Yeah, she does, and Blessed Lady willing, you won't feel that bad calling it in in the worst way possible.

"What are you doing here, though?" Sayaka blinks. "Well, besides checking up on Kyoko, or at least I hope you are." She chuckles. "You going for a checkup or something? Or is there something on your mind?"

Behind Sayaka's shoulder, Kyoko stares at you, before flashing you the world's quickest thumbs-up.

This isn't really what you planned, but it looks like you can hit two birds with one stone, here. You just have to be careful, you know who you're dealing with.

[]Ask if you can speak to Kyoko in private. Sayaka doesn't need to be involved yet. Kyoko can handle that.

I don't think it will, since from what we've seen, Sayaka should be willing to at least 'misplace' the access card to the Vault and look the other way. We don't need anything more than that from her, and at the end of the day. Enishi has Heartcatch squad covered for us once we contact her, and Midori can take care of surveillance herself.

Theoretically, no one should notice anything by the time we're done.

...Alright. Since they're both here, you decided to go for it and tell them both about what you have planned. You were hoping to leave the convincing of Sakaya to Kyoko, but...well, here you are. There's no going back after this.

You clear your throat before nodding. Yeah, you do have something on your mind, yes. It's about your sempai--

"Hold on." Sayaka cuts you off, handing Kyoko her packed lunch with one hand and then beckoning you forward with the other. You blink here before obeying - moving away from the door and nearer to Kyoko's bedside - and you blink again as the Eversor quickly steps forward, locking the door and then drawing the blinds. A flash of light, and Sayaka's Soul Gem manifests on top of her palm as a bright, nearly blinding-gem of white-hot azure. This she taps against the door, the windows, the walls and the ceiling of the room - covering everything nearly with a faint blue glow. After this sudden and strange display, the Eversor nods to herself, and the handheld star on her palm mercifully fades from sight. She nods once more, this time to you.

"Five minutes. I've soundproofed the room by making it briefly impenetrable to anything, including signals, radio waves, whatever." Sayaka rakes a gloved hand through her blue hair. "Now, tell me how we're going to bust Murderface out of that shithole we threw her in, Midorin, and make it quick. Barrier's a new trick I just learned and I don't think I'll be able to keep it up for long."

A...barrier? You echo here, before your eyes go wide as it finally sinks in. Wait, Sayaka knows?! But you haven't even--

"Told her," Kyoko pipes up, somehow managing to look both sheepish and proud at the same time, while also talking with a mouthful of food. "Tried to be really...mngfph...discreet about it, but she kinda figured it out after--"

"After you tried asking me about Murderface's vault card and then borrowing it 'just to see what it looks like'." Sayaka notes sourly, pulling what looks like a black cobalt card from a skirt pocket. You can't help but stare at it - it's one of the keys you need to ensure Chiaki's survival, after all, being waved in your face. And then, as quickly as it disappears, it's gone, and you blink at the blue-haired Eversor's smirking face as she puts the card back into her skirt pocket.

...How much does she know, then? You stare at the couple, Kyoko ravenously feeding herself and Sayaka looking tense, but otherwise pensive. How much did Kyoko tell Sayaka?

"Not everything, but enough," The Eversor Rank Leader-slash-Acting Warmaster says after a moment. "Something about Murderface dying a slow death inside the Silent Room because of what she's turned into, and how we need to get her out of there ASAP. Nothing about why you need access to the Golden Weapon Vault, which I'm hoping you can clear up in..." She looks up at the blue-tinged clock on t he wall. "...Less than four minutes."

...Ghghk. F-fine, alright, you'll do your best.

It actually takes you two minutes. Two minutes clearly explaining what you know about Chiaki's condition, and what needs to be done to save her. Thankfully Sayaka doesn't bombard you with questions, simply asking for clarifications every now and then, and even then they were few and far between. At the very end of it, Sayaka nodded once, let out a sigh, before pulling out the black cobalt keycard and then tossing it onto the bed.

That's...you look at her, eyes wide, then at Kyoko. The red-haired Eversor also seems as shocked at this turn of events as you are, although the very pleased smile on her rice-dotted lips says that she was expecting it somewhat. But just as you make to take the card, Sayaka stops you cold.

"Only on one condition, Hanegawa." The Acting Warmaster's voice is tight. Not strained, not hesitant, just...tense.

You blink at her, before nodding slowly. Yes, of course. Whatever she wants--

"This goes ass-upwards, Kyoko was never involved. You never talked to her about this plan, you never approached her. At no point did you ever contact her or inform her about what you were planning on doing. Are we clear?"

Kyoko immediately explodes into protest at this. "H-hey! Sayaka, no! It was my idea, I talked you into it, if this goes to shit I--"

"Are we CLEAR, Hanegawa?" Sayaka repeats, her blue eyes hard as flint.

How do you respond?

Crystal, you immediately reply. She didn't even need to bring it up - you weren't planning on taking anyone down with you if the entire thing went completely awry. You already have an alibi ready for them: you stole the card off of Sayaka just as you foisted Iori after her. That should be enough, right? Nobody else but you gets the blame. You won't even look at their direction at your execution.

Sayaka glares at you for a couple more seconds - as if trying to divine just how much of what you said was bullshit or not - before nodding and stepping aside, letting you finally pick up the keycard. You do so, and carefully place it in your inventory for safekeeping. ...One step closer to getting your sempai out of the prison cell that's slowly killing her.

You turn back to the blue-haired Eversor Rank Leader turned Acting Warmaster and bow in thanks. As deeply and as genuinely as you can.

"...Don't thank me just yet." Sayaka says weakly, her lips twisting into a wry smile. "I'm not exactly doing this out of the goodness of my heart, Hanegawa. If you hadn't dragged Kyoko into this, I'd have..." She turns to the red-haired Eversor, who merely looks back with concern, before turning back to you. "...I wouldn't have helped you. I'd have probably turned you in myself, come to that."

But you didn't drag anyone into anything! You just--

"Yes, I know. You just wanted to help. And I can't, in good conscience, fault you for that." Sayaka lets out another sigh. "And I do owe Murderface, especially after the last op. I should be the one cutting that door open, grabbing whatever Chiaki needs from that vault and then cramming it down her throat so she doesn't have to complain about it ever again. But..." She shakes her head. "Look, I've just been doing some reading on this whole Shieldmaiden business, and...what if you open those doors and whoever's in there isn't Murderface anymore?"

...That's...

...That's...

"Sayaka, that's crazy!" Kyoko insists. "We all know Murderface is in there, she already talked to Midorin! Come on, don't be like this--"

Heedless of her girlfriend's words, Sayaka continues. "What if Murderface's gone, and the thing that's got Kyuubey spooked enough that he's willing to compromise Officio morale by throwing its Warmaster into Regalia is in there? What happens once you give her what Murderface supposedly needs, and then she escapes? Then what?"

How do you respond?

[]Sempai wouldn't lie to me, no matter what. She's in there, we need to save her.
[]She's both. But I know sempai would never give in to that side of her. She'd kill herself first.

This plotline happened primarily because of that decision, yes. This transformation may have happened later just because of Chiaki's nature as TNO and a Homu, but the situation would have been very different.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/16/15(Sun)11:21:48 No.41908717 Archived

You look at Sayaka and shake your head. You know your sempai more than anyone. Even if she's already turned into the thing that Kyuubey accuses her of being, you know she would never give in to that side of her.. She'd kill herself first - and she nearly did, back at Siberia.

The blue-haired Eversor doesn't seem to be convinced. "...Look, Hanegawa--no, Midori. I want to trust your word on this, I really do, but what if you're wrong? What if Murderface IS gone, and what little common sense you're making this decision with is compromised by your feelings for her?"

You feel yourself go cold at this, and make to reply -- that is, until Kyoko speaks up again. This time putting her hand on Sayaka's arm. "Sayaka, I love ya and everything, but sometimes I wonder if I'm really the dumb meathead Eversor in this gig."

She grins toothily here, before giving the Acting Warmaster's shoulder a squeeze. "Midorin knows what she's doin'. Things look dicey at the moment, sure, but when Murderface's involved, I'll trust Broccolihead over whatever our mutant cat boss is flappin' his gums around with."

You smile in thanks at Kyoko's vote of confidence, before turning to Sayaka. ...Alright, sure. You're not going to deny that you may be 'emotionally compromised'. And yes, there's a good chance you're wrong about this. You don't have all the facts, after all, only what you know right now.

"Yes, that's what I'm talking about--" The blue-haired Eversor says, but you raise a hand to interrupt her. Signaling that you're not done just yet.

Consider, then, that you actually are wrong, and what Sayaka is saying is true - that your sempai is in fact truly and utterly gone, replaced by the monster that's got Kyuubey spooked.

It's pretty much a guarantee, then, that Regalia won't be able to hold her for long. That means everyone - not just you, not just the entire Officio, but everyone in the world - is fucked no matter what they do. With that kind of alternative, then isn't doing something - anything, basically - worth doing now?

You can either try this and risk dying for something, or everyone here can stand by and die for nothing.

Silence as Sayaka stares at you once more, before slowly letting out another sigh. "...Christ. Alright. If this is the best you think we can do, then let's do it." She rakes her fingers through her hair once more, and you get the impression that she's still struggling to take this all in. "You guys are pulling this off tonight, right? I probably can't help out any more than I already have, but is there anything else you need squared away so this goes as smoothly as it can?"

Is there anything you need help with?

How do you respond?

[]Actually, there is. (Write-in)

Open the Vault door, take a look around as if checking to make sure that all of the Golden Weapons are still there, then leave.

Midori and Wendy will go in at the same time, under cloak, grab the DEagle when Sayaka turns to leave, and exit at the same time as she does.

That way, if QB checks up on why the Golden Vault is being accessed, Sayaka has an alibi, and Midori and Wendy will be the only ones blamed.

We need a way to get the Golden Deagle from the vault to Regalia unnoticed.
If Sayaka or Kyouko can keep QB distracted for a few minutes, that should be enough.

This makes no sense. If Sayaka's seen entering the Vault at any point today, then it would be naturally suspicious, seeing as 2 Callidus MGs performed the heist.

Who's to say she wasn't in on it? An alibi would involve being somewhere where others could confirm her presence when the heist happens. The card going missing is much more easily explained than Sayaka's presence in the GW vault.

If we got that full on paranoid, QB would also ensure that any search on the GW's security would be recorded as well, so just looking for that info would blow our cover.

That said, there's no indication that entrance to the vault with the Warmaster's card was ever monitored. That might have changed with Chiaki's current situation, but somehow I doubt that QB thinks she'd bother sneaking in there if she goes nuts.

Info on Regalia might be useful, but it's debatable if there's any to be had, or if Sayaka can get to any of it in the first place, at least not in a useful timeframe.

Anons, as someone very new on 4chan who have discovered this quest recently, I want to ask: why the people is so abrassive? There are times when two persons can have a pacific discussion, exchanging ideas. But normally, when someone post something, the answer of the person who disagrees is full of insults, like "retard", "get out", "autistic moron" and worse things. And of course, the first poster responds with the same fury. Why can't we be respectful with each other, even if you don't agree with what other person is posting?

That would be true if we were going to leave after Sayaka, but the idea was to leave with her.

And yes, it does require changing the plan, from asserting that we swiped the card from her, to Midori and Wendy taking advantage of Sayaka checking up on the Vault.

Though, since Sayaka doesn't have a known regular schedule of checking on the Golden Weapons, there would need to be a further lie that Midori had asked Sayaka to check the Vault since it's been documented before that Golden Weapons can disappear from the Vault and appear with Chiaki of their own accord.

I suppose it's a question of which is more believable: that Midori could swipe a card from Sayaka, the Eversor Rank Leader, or that Midori could use social engineering to get Sayaka to open the door for her.

As someone who was new like you and has been around here for enough time, let me tell you my history: when I first arrived here, I knew some disturbing stories about the place. I thought that it couldn't be that bad, that not everyone is like that. At first, everything went fine: occasionally someone appeared with insults, making me think "what an asshole". The more I spent time in 4chan, the more I realized that EVERYONE was like that. I wasn't too preocupied: I was polite and educated all the time, trying to make ingenious jokes and clever posts, and never needed to put myself at the same level as the rest of the people who acted like chimpanzees with Down syndrome full on cocaine. I was superior to them. Then, the insults were directed at me for some reason or another. That really angered me. I couldn't help but answer back in the same way, even if only by spite. Little by little, I changed my mind: it was easier to jump at the minimal chance instead of maintaining composture, and easier to make absurd and stupid jokes instead of well-thought arguments. And before I realized it, I had changed, to never return to my previous self. Now I am one OF them, I am WITH them! Long lost are my hope and dreams, only to be replaced with stupidity, mental retardation and unuseful things in my life that consume all my time. Serious answer: that's more or less the culture on all boards on the 4chins. Insults aren't actually insults here, no matter how heated it may seem. It doesn't really mean anything; even in this quest, people are not nearly as angry about stuff as they appear to be while posting.

Because of the very tight timeframe we have during votes, ideas and votes must be attacked, criticised, and torn down in as quick and effective manner as possible.
There is neither the time nor the margin for error that the compromises and politeness for social cohesiveness require.
We are here to make the right choice (defined as getting us closer to a majority goal), regardless of how many feelings are hurt in the process, than the wrong choice which doesn't hurt people's feelings.

You cannot and should not gain street cred here, become accepted, or any of that. Don't expect it to happen. Every time you post, you are tested, and should be better for it.

Speaking of which, you really need to learn english. The quality of the posts is extremely important to this community.

This isn't always the case, and that brings up another point:

Do not EVER fall into the shoddy mental trap of thinking the board is a true hivemind. Sometimes, no matter what you say and how you say it, you will still be called a faggot and have your post declared objectively incorrect even though the topic is purely subjective.

Don't be a retard and think that "the board can't make up its mind". The board is not "a single mind"; the person who call "you're waifu/favorite vidya a shit" isn't the same one who might call an other cartoon girl/video game shit.

You think for a moment before shaking your head. ...No, you think you've got everything handled. All that's left is to basically pull it off without everything going completely - as Sayaka herself put it - ass-upwards. Besides, you don't want to involve Sayaka more than she already is right now, or have her abuse her Acting Warmaster status too much, since you are trying to minimize the fallout that this clearly unsanctioned operation would inevitably cause.

"...Yeah. That's...yeah." Sayaka is clearly having trouble finding words here, still obviously struggling with the idea of such wanton, premeditated insubordination. But just as you expect her to change her mind, to suddenly go back on her words and report this to Kyuubey - she instead simply makes to leave the room, giving Kyoko a quick peck on the cheek and then patting you briskly on the shoulder on her way out. "Good luck, Midorin. I'm...well, everyone is counting on you, so...don't fuck it up."

You manage to force a smile here as the blue-haired Eversor finally leaves, taking with her the barrier that had muffled everything said inside the room from the outside world. A sigh of relief leaving your own lips as the door clicks shut, leaving you alone with your sempai's still-recovering best friend.

"...Don't think of her too badly, yeah, Midorin?" Kyoko speaks up after a moment, and you turn to see her cracking open another box of chocolate-covered breadsticks, an apologetic smile curling her lips. "Sayaka's always been a straight shooter ever since she contracted. Bought everything Kyuubey told her so hard he had to tell her to take it down a couple notches." She chuckles here, before crunching down on a particularly tasty-looking stick with so much gusto that you feel like joining in with the indiscriminate snacking. "Something like this ain't easy for her."

Well, you understand that, but...surely she's broken a couple of rules before, right? Everybody does so sooner or later. No one's that much of a stickler to the rules--

The red-haired Eversor grins here, before shaking her head. "Yer underestimatin' just how huge the stick in her, ah, ass is, Midorin." Kyoko goes briefly red at the expression, before continuing. "Fact is, the handful of times she ever got into trouble was because she was followin' orders a bit TOO hard, if you get what I'm sayin'. 'Course she mellowed out a lot after that, but...yeah." She shrugs. "Don't worry about her givin' the game away or anything, though. The one thing Sayaka hates more than breaking rules is going back on her word. 'Specially when it's this important."

You nod at Kyoko, before turning back to the door where the Acting Warmaster had left from.

...Yeah. You hope so.

Anyway. It looks like you have everything ready. You just need to decide just when to pull this off.

You decide to pull off the operation in the evening, right around the time when most of the Officio would be having dinner, either in the communal cafeteria or in their own quarters. Sure, you'll have a smaller time window to pull everything off, and there's a higher chance of someone inadvertently stumbling into the proceedings, either a straggler or someone simply walking dinner off - but it's also the only other time at night when most of the Officio would be legitimately occupied, along with the rest of Heartcatch Squad. Whatever Enishi plans to do about the color-coded eversors, it'll probably work better while they're still eating their meal in preparation for the long night ahead.

You spend the rest of the day, then, quickly and discreetly coordinating with Enishi and Wendy as well as gearing up for the operation itself. Getting Enishi up to speed was easy - all she needed was the time in which you needed Heartcatch Squad distracted, and immediately declared herself ready to strike at your signal. Wendy was a bit trickier - not that she needed any special instructions or anything like that, just that she seemed adamant that you also ascribe to her own idea of, well, being prepared.

You understand bringing along a knife, and maybe a silenced pistol loaded with tranquilizer rounds strong enough to knock an Eversor out. You also get the deal with the mask. But you're not too sure what bringing along a, a laser sword and a bandolier of grenades would help in a stealthy undertaking like this. Wendy had grumbled and insisted that it was 'just in case', but you simply wouldn't have it. In the end, you took an extra knife and the pistol, as well as the mask she wouldn't budge on.

It's a plain white fox mask, almost like the ones they sell in festivals, but made out of something much tougher and hardier than simple paper pulp or porcelain. How it fits onto your face is also unexpectedly intricate and high-end as well, with proper harness straps that buckle across the back of your head rather than simple string around the back of your ears. A brief comparison with Wendy's own mask, and you see that yours is an exact mirror of hers - except where hers is sculpted as to be grinning mischievously, yours has a more somber, melancholic expression, almost to the point of dourness.

You waited for evening in your own quarters, with Wendy sent ahead to scope out the vault in advance. As soon as the call for dinner came over the public announcement system, you let exactly ten minutes pass, before finally moving out on your own. Closing and locking your quarters' door behind you, but not before taking one last look at your own bed.

...This is it, you thought. There's no going back after this. Whatever happens after tonight, win or lose...well, no one can say you didn't try.

Leaving your quarters, you start to make your way to the vault. The corridors are relatively deserted, with a few stragglers here and there making their way back to their quarters, takeout and food trays balanced carefully on their hands. You deliberately walk slowly, unhurriedly, picking the longer and less-walked routes rather than the direct (and oftentimes the most congested) ones. This goes just like you planned it, and you immediately get to the same floor the vault is in without anyone so much as spotting you or greeting you.

The next turn brings you as close to the vault as you possibly can be without actually being in front of it. But instead of taking those last few steps to cross that distance, you instead walk a bit past it, towards a spot in the adjacent corridor with a subtly-flickering shadow at the corner. You lean back against the wall, removing yourself from the field of vision of the cameras perched above the vault doors as well as giving yourself time to catch your breath. ...All this adrenalin is making you breath hard. You need to start exercising again.

"...What fucking took you so long, Green?" The shadow hisses as you sidle up behind it. A moment later, and the shadow resolves into something more material, something more recognizable - Wendy herself, with her grinning fox mask already concealing her features. "You take a big shit before coming here or what?"

...What? No, you didn't! You couldn't even eat your own dinner, for Chrissakes!

"Yeah? Well, you probably should've. Once this thing starts rolling, we won't have any time for bathroom breaks." Wendy snaps, before quickly peering around the corner to look at the vault. "Alright, how do you want to do this? You want me to go trick the cameras and cover you while you go in and take the target, or the other way around? One of us has to be stay out here in case someone comes around."

We don't know what they think of Wendy, Midori is the better illusionist of the two.
We're also choosing between a Chosen of the Blessed Lady versus a Vessel, and which is more likely to resist the corrupting effects of a Golden Weapon.

Have Wendy trick the cameras:
1. More likely that the Three Stooges will be compliant with Midori
2. Being a Vessel may impart more resistant to GW corruption.

Have Midori trick the cameras:
1. Midori is the better illusionist
2. Since Wendy was brought back from Soul Gem destruction, her Soul Gem may resist corruption better

The thing is, Wendy was exposed to Golden Weapon fuckery before, so she should be more used to resisting it anyway. Plus, the DEagle is one of the more docile weapons, and the stooges are unlikely to try and pull off any shit unless someone tries to use it, which Wendy or Midori aren't.

Still, Midori is the better illusionist here, and she's more familiar with the 9th as well as with the people that might later watch the tapes, so she can weave an illusion that is far superior than anything that Wendy can attempt.

Wendy is silent as you tell her your decision, and she nods as soon as you finish. "Been a while since I had to do something like this," she murmurs as two shadowy forms, each one seemingly made out of tendrils of sentient smoke, curl away from the Callidus before gently floating up to the cameras themselves. At the same time, she unholsters her tranquilizer pistol from its holster, twisting a slender supressor onto its muzzle and then racking the greased slide. "Usually I just kill everyone first, andn then take the CCTV footage." She turns to you, her fox mask grinning murderously in the dim half-light of the corridor. "Mask up. Wait for my signal."

You do so, pulling the mask on, its heavy straps securing tightly and snugly around your skull. It's not...uncomfortable, not as such, and whoever designed it seemed to have discovered a way for your breath to aspirate neatly through the mouth and nose areas of the mask, instead of simply being filtered back to you and creating a muffled, stuffy kind of existence. It's a bit...liberating, in a way. Making you feel like you can do anything with the mask on and not be accountable for anything at all.You probably could get used to this--

"Alright, cameras taken care of. Go." Wendy growls, and you immediately move out of cover and walk briskly towards the vault. Your heart pounding faster with every step you take, the cobalt-black keycard's edge digging into your hand with how tightly you're holding it.

Relax, Hanegawa, you can do this, you fervently remind yourself as you bring yourself ever closer to betraying the Officio that took you in. You managed to hide from the Armored Fragment in two overlapping barriers - and that's with the grinning, cannibalizing, pink dress-wearing blight of the universe in your arms. Sneaking into a vault should be a piece of cake.

Three steps. Two steps. One step.

>> ☐ Deculture 08/16/15(Sun)16:03:12 No.41913574

>>41913553

And you stop as you behold the vault doors in front of you, the keycard slot's notification screen lighting up as soon as you glance towards it. A single sentence emblazoned there in pixellated letters:

KEYCARD REQUIRED.

With a shivering, white-knuckled grip, you slide the keycard through the vault door's proffered card track. A moment later, and the doors begin to slowly and creakingly grind open in slow, ponderous cranks. As soon as you spot the opportunity to, you finally step inside - and the freezing cold air inside hits you with an almost palpable force that for a moment you wonder if you've confused the vault witha walk-in freezer instead.

"Still clear. No one else around." Wendy's voice crackles in your ear, delivered by the built-in headset in the mask itself. You turn , and you have enough time to give her a nod just as the doors themselves start their laborious journey to close behind you.

"Update me when that changes," You reply, before facing forward again and moving slowly into the vault proper, careful not to touch anything. Wendy's reply of acknowledgement is a single brief burst of static, pulsed down the connection before the connection itself goes quiet.

You keep moving forward, looking around the sharply-illuminated room of reinforced concrete, steel and golden madness. Your breath leaving your lips in white

The vault is...well, it's your sempai's vault. It's the first time you've been here, and the first time you've seen all the Golden Weapons stored in one single place. All neat and tidy in their own numbered racks, among those not yet 'occupied'.

What surprises you the most - looking at them right here and now - is how mundane and harmless they look, once you look past their golden facades. You suspected them to be rattling in their racks, or emitting some kind of shrill screaming cacophony of the crazed, blood-maddened undead - but instead they're quiet, docile, as if your presence here had reduced them to the lifeless things they should be, instead of what they only seemed to be.

Still, you're going to be careful. Really careful.

Because f--frig if you're letting one of these things do what they nearly did to your sempai, and everyone else who'd had the unfortunate luck of being chosen for them.

Inching a bit closer to the raised table at the middle of the vault, it's here that you see the rack - well, the framed foam inset, anyway - for your sempai's Desert Eagle. The main objective of this first half of the mission.

And it's gleaming, almost temptingly so. The harsh glow of the fluorescent light above making the metal shimmer tantalizingly, begging to be held. Begging to be used.

What do you do?

You pull on a pair of white cotton gloves you've prepared for just this moment. You're not entirely sure if the Golden Weapons take skin contact into account when driving their wielders crazy, but you'll take any precaution available to avoid something like that.

Just as you make to gingerly pick out the oversized, blocky firearm from its customized foam inset - you suddenly get the irrational, almost laugh-out-loud silly idea that you should be asking permission first, rather than simply taking it. You have no idea where the idea itself came from, only that it popped up in your mind, unbidden and unwanted.

"Please..." You try to begin, feeling your face grow hot as you hear your voice echo around the room, tinny and hesitant. Urgh. Are you actually doing this? Are you actually asking a gun permission to pick it up?

Crazier things have happened, you tell yourself. You shouldn't even be surprised at this point, honestly.

"Please excuse me." You finally manage to complete your sentence, before finally plucking the Golden Desert Eagle from its foam-cut home. Lifting it free from its confines and letting its weight rest heavily on your gloved hands.

It's...heavier than you expected, and you expected it to be really heavy. How your sempai just picks it up and uses it like she does, you'll never figure out.

It DOES feel really good to hold, though. As heavy as it is, it feels almost like an extension of yourself, the handle seemingly molding itself to fit your grip better. But other than that, it doesn't seem to be turning you into a monster just yet.

You stand perfectly still for a couple of seconds, before letting out the breath you've been holding.

Well, it seems to have worked. The asking permission part, anyway. Working as quickly as you can, you stuff the gun into the whitesnake leather holster conveniently hanging from the raised table, before placing the entire thing back into your inventory.

You hear Wendy cursing over the frequency. "...Shit. Two people. One eversor, one vindicare." A moment. "Want me to get rid of them?

And then you hear it.

A faint rattling behind you, coming from the rack where the XX Golden Weapon should be.

How do you respond?

"N-negative," You manage to stammer out as you realize just what Wendy was suggesting just now. "N-no! Don't do anything! Just let them through! I'll just stay put until they're gone!"

Silence, before Wendy's voice crackles in your ear. "...Fine. Standing down. Notifying you the moment they leave."

You let out a shuddering sigh of relief, before pulling your mask up and away from your face, letting it sit on top of your scalp. As comfortable as it is, the mask was making things feel a bit too claustrophobic for comfort - and the vault itself isn't quite the spacious room either, with barely just enough room for walk around and not disturb the racked Weapons strewn around.

The rattling noise makes you start, and you whirl to see the XX Golden Weapon - the katana, Muramasa - rattling in its rack, as if trying to shake itself off of the prongs firmly clasping it against the wall. A bit of the golden sword's blade already revealed by its ministrations, with that tiny sliver glowing with a mad, hungry light.

And then--

+ Well, well. I guess this means the rumors are true. +

A shadow, flickering into reality in front of you. A nearly formless, shapeless manifestation, barely reaching the same level of tangibility as that of Wendy's own phantasms. But you could still make out its general figure of a rather tall, yet slender Magical Girl. One with short hair and an eyepatch over one madly-glowing eye.

+ She's dead, then? Murderface is dead? Or did she finally turn into that black-winged wretch of a traitor that we all knew she was going to be? +

What do you do?

[] Pulse a reply refuting her claims.
[] Ignore her. It's just...a trick of the Golden Weapons. Just a talking shadow, nothing more. Wait for Wendy to tell you when it's safe to leave.

+ I wouldn't be here if that was true. + is the reply you manage to pulse at the shadowy, wispy thing of hissing, sneering hatred. Whoever - or whatever - it was, you have the sinking feeling that it's not going to let you out of here without a scrap. One that would probably have you bleeding all over the expensive carpeting.

+ Hnn. Well, that makes sense, I suppose. + The shadow seems to smirk here. + If Murderface was indeed permanently compromised, you'd be looting this place entirely of the miserable booty it has. ...Although-- +

Another shadow-ghost appears to your left, one shorter, slightly stockier, with a child's height and build. Two specks of dull orange light flickering from the depths of its hooded face.

+ She took it! + The shadow points a smoke-twisted tendril of an arm towards you. + She took Matsuda-san's gun! + It glares at you, hotly indignant, and somehow you can hear each individual knuckle of its hands cracking as it clenches them into tight, skull-breaking fists. + Give it back! That's not yours to take! Give it back! + Its childlike voice then twists into an angry, unearthly roar - one much more suited to the huge, black-mawed monsters of your nightmares. + GIVE. IT. BACK! +

+ Oh, dear. Look, no one asked you, little runt. Go back to bed. + The first shadow snorts, before turning back to you. + See, now look what you've done. Now you're going to wake everyone else up, and it's going to turn into a fucking circus in here--+

+ OI! + Yet another shadow sprouts out of nowhere, and with this one you can feel...hunger. An everlasting, unsatiable hunger for blood, for skulls, and charcoal-grilled shrimp. + What's all this then? What's all this ruckus?

Did the bint with the legs finally come back from her vacation or what? +

>>41917160

Two amber eyes, each one pupilled with a cross, blinks at you. +Oh, false alarm, it's just some chubby sheila tryin' to make off with the skinny one's gun. ...Wait, is that allowed? That ain't allowed, innit? Hey cunt-- +

+ No, it isn't allowed. None may touch us except the Chosen. + The first shadow snaps. + And stop yapping, your voice is like a thousand tiny razors shredding my skin every time you draw breath. +

+ Please yourself, ya buggering git, + The third shadow easily replies, before turning back to you. + Hey. You. Put that back where it belongs, it ain't really yours to take. That's bad news, that. + It pauses here, as if thinking about something. + If you don't, then we'll have to tear you apart to get it back. And nobody wants that, right? ...Well, I do, but ya probably don't, so... +

You shake your head and step back from the looming phantasms. + N-no! No, I'm not stealing it! I'm just taking it to her! Semp--no, Chiaki needs it! I'm just taking it to give it to her because she can't do it herself! +

The first ghost giggles here, a slow purring sound reminding you of honey. + A sound denial. But then again, isn't that what all thieves say? +

And it's here, then, that the shadows start to move closer, with clear murderous intent in their flickering eyes.

Is...is this it? Is this how far you're going to get? This is where you fail?

And then, beside you - a golden light. A warm one, like a lover's touch.

You turn to it, and see...the reason that had landed your sempai in this mess in the first place.

The Golden Staff. The hequin-topped rod of pure, carved gold glowing in its rack, just inside your reach.

For some reason, it feels like...it feels like you can use it to drive them away.

All you need to do is to reach out and curl your fingers around it.

What do you do?

[]Grab it and threaten the shadows with it.
[]Evacuate from the vault. It doesn't matter if you're seen leaving it. Just RUN.

Damn, too late to use the power of yuri. Offer our body and soul to them if that's their price, but the woman we love needs us. Needs this gun, and we will get it to her no matter the cost. If they love her like us, they will let us pass or take whatever they need to satisfy them. But we will not be DENIED. WE WILL SAVE HER, FROM WITCHES OR PINKY OR EVEN HERSELF IF NEED BE. We are powered by love, and regardless of the cost we will bring her back.

We did it once before, and we WILL do it again.

That was handing our Soul Gem to someone who held a very personal grudge against us. This is simply showing our Soul Gem, and maybe doing some weird Soul Gem magic with it, to a bunch of incorporeal beings we do technically have a connection to that simply don't know who we are.

~~I still don't think handing Ahriman our Soul Gem was a mistake. A bad idea, sure, but one that definitely had some important outcomes.~~

Nobody here REALLY knows how Soul Gems work, especially one personally reconstructed by a goddess and linked to a devil. Maybe pumping a little bit of magic into it to make it glow will make it glow in such a way that the GW spirits will recognize as being connected to the Blessed Lady. Maybe they could tell just by looking at it.

They'd probably just get a 'we can't do that', like trying to bring someone back from the dead. That kind of wish doesn't make a Culexus and Maerorus aren't that simple. Incubators probably would have figured out how to take advantage of them by now if they were.

I'm still curious as to what sort of wish even creates a Culexus.

Maybe, if my suspicions are right and Yuma is now in the Golden Staff instead of Ahriman, we should ask her about it once we get back in control of Chiaki.

What's up with the limit on bringing back the dead anyway? I mean, time travel was possible in the original PMMM, and possibly in MGNQ too with the right wish, shouldn't raising one dead person be comparatively easy, especially if they haven't been dead for long?

Or are Wishes simply weaker in MGNQ than they were in the original PMMM universe because the whole Homusatan and Madokami conflict fucked everything for everyone ever?

>> ☐ Anonymous 08/16/15(Sun)20:25:12 No.41919292

It's possible that the Incubators either don't know where a soul goes after death, or do know but are unable to reach it for one reason or another.

Besides Magical Girl souls, anyway. We know EXACTLY where those go.

I think from a narrative standpoint it's to make death meaningful in the arguably more meatgrinder-y MGNQ universe. I'm inclined to say the subject of souls and afterlives is complicated.

Time travel wasn't planned, and it's not like QB was responsible for it. And even then it's probably easier for a soul gem to do that sort of stuff compared to an actual soul.

I don't think Incubators have that much control over the Wishing process, or at least they didn't in canon, otherwise I'm fairly certain that Madokami would have never happened.

I thought it was completely selfless wishes of certain magnitudes that create Culexus. If I remember correctly, in an old thread it was stated that so much magic was used to complete their wish, that there is none left for the wisher, therefore resulting in them becoming beings of anti-magic.

Regardless, it's clear that magic and Wishes in MGNQ are different from canon PMMM, partly because the universe was fucked over. Odds are that even if someone somehow had Madoka's level of potential, they wouldn't be able to go full goddess in MGNQ no matter what Wish they make.

Could a girl wish for an already contracted magical girl to turn into a Maerorus? This of course implies a close to impossible chain of events where a normie with potential knows an MG, wants to make a wish for them, and knows about witch-hybrids in the first place.

So never gonna happen, but out of curiosity.

This implies that they have a greater control over wishes and their effects than they did in canon. Interesting.

During Kharn´s flashback, we saw that she was truly concerned by "the corruption", as she called it. If this was because she didn´t knew the maerorus project well at this point or because she really had to fight that part of her because it was trying to consume her is another point.
Another interesting question for Decu, even if I say so myself

My headcanon is that they can grant certain wishes, but won't, because of Incubator laws, agreements between each other, their very nature, or a combination of those three. If one of them did so anyway, the rest would take actions against the Incubator and probably their entire Officio.

Pic unrelated.

I'm afraid of asking Decu questions directly, his Hahaha scares me. It's hella creepy!

That said, Kharn IS one of the prototypes, so she might have problems that the girls in the first don't have. By that same token, her worry might simply be a case of ignorance...

...and Decu is totally gonna fuck with everyone's head when it comes to this...

...and Chiaki doesn't really count because she's one of the Homus and thus her circumstances are simply too FUBAR to generalize...

>> ☐ Cooldown 08/16/15(Sun)20:54:37 No.41920042

>>41919785
The First are all pointedly exceptional meguca in the first place - the kind that stand well above the rest even before they're Maerorus - and Kharn is hard to expound upon with the information we have so far about her, but you could argue that her Maerorus nature is what made her witch powerful enough to wipe out the Templars and the Ninth's Culexus.

This anon also has it right, and it's worth taking to Decu, definitely.

My understanding has always been that a Maerorus is almost certainly an unstable individual on the best of days physically, emotionally, and spiritually, and that there's a constant struggle to keep ahold of oneself...which is understandable when the girl in question is on a tightrope where falling too far either way leads to exploding into a horrible, insane murderwitch.

>> ☐ Anonymous 08/16/15(Sun)21:09:37 No.41920421

If being a maerorus put a girl on a tightrope as heavy as the one you mention, Then how the first incubator manages to control all his girls? He must be an exceptional individual.

Also, captcha, fish is no juice! For God's sake!

The First is only, if I recall correctly, around twenty girls, and each and every one of them is the best of the best physically and mentally. It's not really the same situation as the other Officios.

And he IS the Incubator the others all answer to, I imagine he's the best at it.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 08/23/15(Sun)11:58:21 No.42046987 Archived

You shake your head and flinch away from the Golden Staff. N-no! No! You're not even going to get near that thing! You'd rather get torn apart first!

+ That can be arranged. + The first of the three shadows stalking closer to you laughs as long, wicked claws sprout from its lace-ruffled sleeves. + Full disclosure - you'll be my first victim in a very long time. So as a personal favor to everyone present, I'll try my best not to enjoy it too much. + A slick, wet sound ends the shadow's pulsed thoughts, and in the span of a gut-wrenching heartbeat do you realize that the nameless, faceless phantasm has just pulsed the noise of her licking her own lips right into your brain.

The thought is as repulsive as it is singularly horrifying.

+ Guh. Forgot for a moment that you're the type to make this as weird as hell. + The dog-eared shadow shivers on the spot, seemingly voicing your own thoughts as her own. + S'not like this is gonna be any fun anyway, I mean, look at 'er! Doesn't look like she'll even put up a fun scrap, much less a decent fight. This isn't gonna be anythin' else other than a messy murder, but maybe we don't need to be too disrespectful about things, is what I'm saying. +

+ I don't think we need to be respectful to thieves at all, + The shortest of the three shadows, its faint features hidden from underneath its own ghostly cowl, snarls. + She's taking something that isn't hers. In my book, that forfeits her right to an open-casket burial. + The hooded shadow slams both her fists together, in a noise disturbingly akin to a sledgehammer loudly pounding into plate steel. + I'm not letting her walk out of here alive, especially not with Matsuda-san's gun--+

+ Wait! WAIT! + You raise both hands as you continue to back away from the approaching trio. + I'm telling you, I'm not stealing it! I'm trying to get it to sem--to Chiaki! She needs it, and she's going to die if I don't get it to her as soon as I can! +

The trio freezes in place here, and you press on, emboldened by their sudden hesitation, all while continuing to backpedal. + And this - this bullshit you're doing right now - isn't helping at all! +

+ ...So she IS dying. Not dead, but close enough. + The first shadow's voice, already dripping with a sick kind of delight, turns thick with sadistic relish. Its claws lengthening and then glowing with a caustic purple light, before it moves again. + Then I'll enjoy this all the more. Nothing personal - I'm just of the school of thought that Matsuda has never deserved the kind of role fate has given her. To be center stage in this grand play? Someone like her should be confined to the background. A tiny bit part, a mere discordant note in the song-- +

+ Hold on. + The second shadow speaks up, stopping the first in its tracks. Its amber orbs narrowing as it focuses on you. + Is that true? Matsuda-san...she's actually dying? +

Your reply to all three of them is a frantic, frenzied version of the same pulse you sent Kyoko. A balled-up wad of what you know, what you suspect, and what you fear is happening to Chiaki right this very moment.

Their reaction is varied and immediate. The third flinches as if struck, a look of horror deforming its occluded, fanged features. The first blinks, before cackling, seemingly taking pleasure in learning your sempai's fate. The second--

>>42047010

The second shadow lunges for the first, and both shadowy forms seem to evaporate at the sudden contact - before materializing on the floor, locked in a clawing, scraping grapple. The sound of bone breaking through repeated blunt force trauma punctuated by the sound of sharpened metal slicing deep into flesh. This disturbing cacophony overlaid by a screaming, baying choir coming from everywhere and nowhere at once.

+ O-oi! I don't think we're actually allowed to do that! + The dog-eared shadow exclaims, clearly shocked at the sudden turn of events. + We're supposed to be driving people crazy with bloodlust, not trying to kill each other! +

What do you do?

The plan was to just ask QB for permission for another visit.
Since we never got the chance to choose or reject this option I'm asuming the guards will be able to open the door.
Might still trigger an alarm though.

You immediately retreat from the furious melee, scrambling towards the vault doors and pressing your back against the cold metal as the shadows continue to rip each other apart. And you find yourself unable to look away - even with their wispy, half-incorporeal forms, the sheer bloody-minded violence of their movements keeps your gaze riveted upon them, making you behold every punch, every stab, every blood-crazed attempt at murdering each other.

The fact that neither combatant is of flesh and blood doing absolutely nothing to make their frantic grappling any less real, any less horrifying. If anything, it seemed to work the completely opposite way, not only amplifying the reality of their conflict but lending the sight a surreal, nightmarish quality.

You shake your head again, before attempting to contact your co-conspirator, Wendy, outside of the vault you've trapped yourself in. You need to get out, and while you want nothing more than to throw the door open and just make a break for it - you can't deny that doing could blow your cover, as well as the rescue op you've been desperately and painstakingly setting up for most of the day. So you decide to check with her first - just to make sure the coast is clear.

"...Negative. They're still here. They'll see you if you so much as poke your fucking head out, Green." Wendy replies after a moment. "...Christ, what the fuck is happening in there? I can hear--wait, what the fuck was that? Was that screaming--"

Gngh...! You can't wait for them to leave! You force yourself not to shriek as the clawed shadow cackles, and it's with a gout of red smoke that a severed arm lands in a wet squelch at your feet, before discorporating into vapor. ...Can, can Wendy do anything to get them out of there? Without...without doing anything permanent, at least...!

"..." Silence on the other end, at least for a few moments, before Wendy speaks up again. "Understood. Get ready to move the moment I say so."

[1/2]

O-okay. Okay. ...Wait, what is she going to--

"Now."

You hesitate for just one split-second before slashing the keycard down on the slit on the control panel beside you. A rather tight squeeze later - you didn't wait for the doors to completely pull themselves apart, instead making a break for it the moment you felt the gap between them was big enough for you to squeeze through - and you find yourself back outside the vault.

Back into reality, back into a sane world where blood-maddened ghosts sealed inside archaic weaponry didn't try to murder each other because they were simply bored inside their steel-shod prison.

And thankfully - just like Wendy promised - the corridor outside is completely empty. Devoid of life, devoid of any eyes to spot your treasonous thievery.

At least, until you see the American Callidus herself slipping out from what appears to be a nearby broom closet, surreptitiously closing the door behind her. Blood - fresh enough that you can smell it from here - marking the trademark checkered strip on her salmon-pink sweater.

...No. That's--no. She couldn't have. You told her--

"The fuck you looking at, Green?" Wendy snaps as she finally reaches you. By her own body language, you can tell she'd just gone through an altercation that may have been just as rough as yours - if not rougher. "Come the fuck on! We have a retard to rescue from her fucking Silent Room! What did you think I was going to fucking do?"

How do you respond?

You wrench your eyes away from the bloodstain on Wendy's sweater. Forcing yourself not to think about what happened to the Vindicare and Eversor that you'd just asked Wendy to deal with.

Whatever Wendy did to them, it's...she's not entirely at fault, you remind yourself. Part of the blame falls squarely on you.

And you'll cross that bridge when you get to it. Just...not right now. Not right now, when you've got a sempai to save, and the time is quickly running out.

So instead of replying to the American Callidus - insted of giving voice to a nightmare scenario that you'd been fervently praying would not come to fruition - you simply turn and make for the quickest route to Silent Room Regalia that you know. Wendy immediately following suit, easily catching up and then keeping pace beside you. Both your footsteps echoing in the mostly-empty corridors.

It takes you ten minutes to reach your sempai's Silent Room. Ten minutes of complete and utter silence as both you and Wendy focus on nothing but what you need to do next: to somehow bring the Golden Desert Eagle that you've stolen into Regalia, and then into your sempai's hands. How to do that exactly is anyone's guess, but Wendy did say she has the first bit handled, so there's that at least.

The first thing you notice when Regalia finally comes into view - and nearly making you panic at the sight of it - is that Heartcatch Squad is still there. Standing still, in perfect formation, right in front of the huge reinforced door leading to the Silent Room itself. Their eyes open and alert, staring straight ahead, the very picture of sleepless, tireless sentries prepared to stand through the night and most of the morning, if need be.

But before you could alert Wendy to this, you make out another figure standing in their midst, facing the completely opposite direction. Her black kimono clashing with Heartcatch Squad's sea of bright color-coordinated insanity, in both style and hue. Her equally-long hair also as black as the midnight captured in the cloth of her dress.

And she's smiling. The curve of her lips visible even from this distance.

"...Well, I'll be fucked." Wendy breathes in begrudging awe, wincing as the both of you approach the shut-in princess. "An entire fucking Eversor Squad? Just like THAT, Karasawa?"

"I did promise Hanegawa my cooperation and contribution to her plan, and here I am." Enishi's smile is unwavering despite the beads of sweat trickling down her cheeks and forehead. "I'll also forgive the unfortunate implication of your words, Cooldown. A single squad of Eversors is no match for the Karasawa Technique of Voyeurism and Concealment."

Wendy makes to retort here, but you stop her with a question of your own. Is...is Heartcatch Squad legitimately inside an illusion right now?! You didn't even feel it happen, and any Callidus around should be able to feel the tingling sensation, at least! But this--

"Family secret, Hanegawa. I face censure - or worse, disownment - if I reveal anything to anyone not part of the official bloodline." Enishi grins. "But for all intents and purposes, yes, they are being made to believe that they are standing on duty, and there's nothing particularly exciting happening. However--" She gestures with a kimono sleeve towards Ecstasy Darks, the only member of Heartcatch Squad whose eyes are squeezed tightly shut. Her shoulders giving a small, tremulous shake every now and then.

>>42050242

"I believe she's beginning to suspect that something's up. No, she won't be able to break out of it on her own, but I suggest getting a move on and doing what we're here to do." The Karasawa heiress finishes, still unmoving from her spot. "And to do it as quickly as we can manage, or else things won't be as seamless as it should."

Right. Okay. So that's Heartcatch Squad taken care of. Thanks to Enishi, you won't have to worry about them trying to stop you.

Now it's just getting the Golden Desert Eagle to Chiaki that's left.

And then, after that, everything will be better again.

You turn to Wendy and nod - and without saying a word, she walks towards the Silent Room's door and wrenches open a small panel on it, revealing a small numbered pad. You see her quickly type in a sixteen-digit cypher, before turning back to you. As if to ask you one last time if you're sure about this.

You nod again, and the American Callidus punches in one last number. The heavy, blast-shielded door immediately cranking itself open, just enough for a person to slip through. Revealing nothing but cold, black darkness inside the room itself. Darkness and silence.

...Strange. You expected something more ominous to present itself, funnily enough. The scent of blood or rotting corpses. The screams of the murdered dead. Even a twisted, mangled copy of your sempai immediately bursting forth from the room's depths, to rip everything apart outside of her tomb with her claws.

You weren't expecting this...peaceful, funereal absence of light and sound. It's almost comforting in a way, actually.

Wendy, for her part, doesn't seem to share your sentiment here. She takes a step back from the door, as if expecting something winged and demonic to burst out from the slice of darkness in front of you. "...Christ. I...I honestly thought it wouldn't be this bad. But it's worse. So much fucking...worse." She shakes her head. "You fucking retard, Kong."

She turns to you. "...You sure about this, Green? I can...I can take the gun to her on my own, you know. Might be safer, if what we're stepping into is that shit."

How do you respond?

[]No. I'm seeing this through to the end. ...You don't have to come with me if you're scared, Cooldown.

I mean, aside from adverse reactions from the Three Stooges, can we really trust her inside of a sea of Corruption? At least Midori's Soul Gem is linked to Matsuda's, who had the Procedure done to facilitate resistance.

You shake your head, forcing a smile on your face. You understand her concern, but really - asking you to back off, after everything up to this point?

No, you tell Wendy. You're seeing this through to the end, no matter what it takes.

...She doesn't have to come with you if she's scared, though.

Wendy stares at you for a moment, before shaking her head and stepping forward - her rough calloused hand quickly finding yours in a warm, disturbingly-comfortable grip. "...Fuck you, Green. Teach me to actually show genuine concern for once and I get called a pussy for it. Never fucking again." And then, as if to completely contradict her words, she gives your hand a squeeze - a weak, feeble, tremulous one. Showing you just how hard of a time Wendy is having just to keep still.

...Well, that's fine. It's okay to be scared, you think.

You're scared too. You'll be honest, today has been nothing but one fright after another, and you have the sneaking suspicion that there will be a huge one at the very end. The biggest to date, and the most horrible one yet.

But that in itself doesn't scare you.

It's the prospect of not being able to be there for Chiaki anymore after all this does.

You look back at Enishi. Is she going to be okay out here...? You and Wendy'll be practically leaving her alone with Heartcatch Squad once you step in.

"I'll be fine," The Callidus Rank Leader says, smiling. "The moment those doors close behind you is the moment I take off for my own quarters before undoing the illusion. This brightly-colored squad won't even realize what happened."

Right, just as you discussed with her during planning. Also helps with the whole non-incriminating thing.

"Yes, of course, and I'm very thankful for that, but..." The raven-haired Callidus seems hesitant to speak up here. Or maybe it's the effort of her task at hand. "...How will you two get out? What's your exit strategy? Should I come back here and put Heartcatch Squad under my control again later, or...?"

You shake your head. No, she doesn't need to do that. You don't have an exit strategy.

"But...that IS still a Silent Room, right? And--"

You hold up a hand. You don't have an exit strategy because frankly, no one knows what'll happen once you get into the room and hand Chiaki the Golden Weapon. Of course, you're hoping things will actually go well, enough that you won't even need a way to get out, but in the event that you do need to escape, well - you already have that covered.

"...I...I see." Enishi nods, through a mask of sweat and effort. "In that case, then I wish the both of you luck." A smile, wistful this time, curls her lips. "I hope that someday I will find someone who loves me enough to dive through hell for me, Hanegawa. The Warmaster is lucky to have you."

You feel your cheeks heat up at this. That's...you thank Enishi for her words, and ignore Wendy's rueful snorting. A brief check of your person and the Desert Eagle in your Inventory, you decide that you're ready, and say so. Wendy echoes the same, and the both of you stare at the yawning chasm at the door.

Giving one last look at the outside world before stepping in together.

...Hold on, sempai. Just hang in th ere for a bit longer.

The sensation of pushing through something palpable, like a resistance field of some sorts, is the first thing you feel.

The second is the cold, followed almost immediately by a crushing, choking darkness.

Just as you're about to cry out your sempai's name, however - the darkness lifts, revealing your surroundings.

You're no longer in the Silent Room you entered. This doesn't even look like anywhere in Mitakihara, or even in Japan.

Instead, you're in a large, white open plain, stretching out as far as the eye can see.

A plain full of shattered mirrors. Each one smashed, broken, or ground to powder, their empty frames jutting out of the hard-packed dirt like half-buried ribcages of some past civilization flash-fried to oblivion. Killed right were they stood.

"...Where the fuck are we?" Wendy murmurs beside you, her hand still gripping yours. You shake your own head in mute confusion, before the world suddenly changes. The cloudless, steel-grey sky replaced with one darkened with black clouds fattened by rain, each one flinging down drops of moisture that turned the dirt wet and muddy with every passing moment.

You blink at the horizon again, and see that the broken mirrors have been just as quickly replaced by corpses.

Each one wearing your sempai's costume.

Each one wearing your' sempai's face.

Each one sporting long, flowing black hair, and an expression of cold, hard determination, up to their deaths.

And in the distance, you could hear the titanic boom of high-caliber firepower being discharged again and again and again - a veritable war being fought.

What do you do?

[]Go towards the source of the noise. ...Your sempai has to be there.
[]Try to look for survivors in the pile of corpses. Maybe you can find out more about where you are from the dying.

Information and analysis was absolutely vital back in Siberia.
We're in another Barrier created by Matsuda/Homura's fractured psyche. We need information, and just as importantly, allies from among the personality fragments, just like last time.

Okay, so we're going towards the noises. Let's strategize. I bet we're going to get a scene where all the Homus try to pretend to be Chiaki in order to convince us to give them the gun. How do we tell which one is Chiaki? Also, let's try avoid revealing any personal info to any Homus we run into, so we can winnow out the crowd faster (doesn't know our name? Clearly not Chiaki.)

Chiaki Matsuda looked out at the multi-layered, silvery world.
"Where am I?"
INSIDE THE MIRROR.
"Am I dead?"
THE ANSWER TO THAT, said Death, IS SOMEWHERE BETWEEN NO AND YES.
Chiaki turned, and a billion figures turned with her.
"When can I get out?"
WHEN YOU FIND THE ONE THAT'S REAL.
Chiaki Matsuda ran on through the endless reflections.

But the problem is that since we're dealing with ALL previous Homu's AND Chiaki's, some of them are going to be Chiaki's that failed the Procedure, or did some other monumentally stupid thing like handing over their Soul Gem to Ahriman and not choosing to take control back from TTO, or who got themselves killed by the First Knight.

How do we tell a previous Chiaki Matsuda from our current Chiaki Matsuda?

The fact that you can't see that the option to go towards the fighting will get us sucked into the fight means that you're the same kind of idiot that couldn't see saying "Get Fucked" would have Midori charge straight into the fight against the Ribbon Fragment.

The average Homu's pretty ruthless and just as bad as the average /tg/ murderhobo...

So really, in the end, BOTH votes can be HORRIBLY bad, depending on what Decu decides to do with them.

After all, if people remember, a lot of the guys that voted for the 'Get Fucked' option back in Siberia only meant it as what to say, not what to do, they never realized that Decu would do what he did with it.

Chiaki got forcibly reminded that she's literally Satan, grew wings and met her adorable familiars on more pleasant terms
QB put her in a silent room because everybody else will murder them to death if they learn about her being satan
Malal popped up in an implanted memory and said 'yeah I thought this might happen, enjoy another memory wipe', to which Chiaki said get fucked

The dolls told Midori to get the golden deagle to her because she's currently having an incestuous mental battle royale
And now we here

In your entire career as a Magical Girl, you've never been part of a...a full-scale engagement. You've never been part of a squad wilfully sent into the grinder, to die in a massive conflagration of blood and fire and hate as entire groups of magical girls did their level best to kill each other. All in the name of following orders.

As such, you'd never been able to fully appreciate the kind of horror that such engagements left after the last spell had been unleashed, after the last bullet had been shot. You've never been able to behold firsthand the kind of devastation such an encounter brought, and how the sight of so many corpses could render any creed, any justification, any cause pointless and worthless.

But to see such a scene - of an entire horizon full of the dead and the dying, each one resembling your sempai down to the way they stubbornly kept a grip on their weapon even as the life bled out of them - you started to doubt yourself. In the middle of that horror, you started to wonder if you could actually help Chiaki. If you could actually make a difference, in the face of...well, all this. How it looks as if this time, your sempai was truly beyond your help, and how you've stumbled into something no one should ever willingly throw themselves into.

You turn as you hear the sound of someone messily depositing their lunch into the ground - and you blink as you realize that it's not you, this time. It's Wendy, loudly and painfully retching the remains of a burger, while still clammily holding onto your hand. You reach out and hold her hair away from her face as she does so - and she gives your hand a grateful squeeze as she finishes. Wiping her mouth with her sleeve as she straightens up.

"...Jesus Christ, Kong." The American Callidus finally manages to choke out, her voice hoarse and strained. "I...I thought you had some baggage. You told me you did. You told me about your fucking nightmares and how fucked up they were. Even made a joke about how shit they were compared to mine. I didn't..." She shakes her head, both in seeming denial and regret. "...I didn't know it was this bad..."

You shake your own head at this. You don't think anyone could have predicted it was this bad.

Not even you did, and you already died once saving her from her own barrier.

It's here, then, that a noise catches your attention. One of the corpses nearby, still alive, still drawing breath. You let go of Wendy - the Callidus gasping in alarm as you pull away from her - and immediately make for the survivor among the wreckage.

...She doesn't have much long. Her left arm is gone, and her entire lower torso is all but burned away. Despite this, she's trying to pull herself up, using the melted remains of an oversized machinegun to do so with little success.

You hesitate for the briefest of moments, before finally crouching down and helping the dying fragment of your sempai to sit up. Feeling your breath catch in your throat and tears prick at your eyes as you hold her frail, weak form steady. She looks up at you with unseeing eyes - one already rendered into bloody pink paste, most likely from blunt-force trauma, the other swollen over with bruised flesh and premature scabbing.

"Madoka...?" The fragment whispers, reverent, hopeful. "Madoka, is that you? I'm...please, help me up. I can still - nggh - I can still fight. The Nameless One is nearly defeated. I just need a clear shot." Her breathing, already light and feathery, begins to grow shallower with every gulp of air. "J-just one clear shot, and...and then I can save you myself."

How do you react?

So many reasons to do this that are in line with Midori's personality. Because she's shown in the past that when it comes down to it, even though it might hurt her, she does what needs to be done.

While using it to kill people (let alone other Homus) would probably be stupid, I do wonder why its not doing anything to help.

I realise GWs are dangerous, but I would expect that Braids atleast would try to help due to her nature or Murderface due to it being Midori who is holding the DEagle.

Heck, even Dildoes would presumably want to fix this mess as well as possible even if she might be annoyed at Chiaki for ending up like this.

Why the heck is the DEagle not doing anything when the other GWs had little trouble manifesting ghostly critters.
Presumably theres a reason.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 09/06/15(Sun)11:04:19 No.42327352 Archived

You swallow hard as you cradle the dying Magical Girl in your arms. The Magical Girl that is - and at the same time, not - your sempai. Forcing yourself to remember that fact, even as you tend to her final moments alive.

Dismembered, blinded, with her costume so encrusted with dried blood you couldn't even tell where one stain ended, her once-luxurious long black hair falling down the sides of her face in matted, stringy snarls - you still couldn't help but choke out a sob as you see how miserable, how pathetic this simulacra of your sempai has become, and how bleak the end of her journey will be. An end no one in her shoes would ever deserve, especially when all she wanted to do was to save the one person she loved the most.

"...I'm here, Homura-chan." You finally manage to say, just barely masking your voice enough to sound like how you remember the Blessed lady sounded, in all her amber-eyed benevolence. An echo of her own final benediction to your sempai's fragments, back in Siberia. "I'm here. It's alright. You can rest now. Everything's going to be okay."

As soon as she hears your voice - as soon as the first word of mimicked divinity leaves your lips - the twitching, gasping fragment in your arms relaxes. Not the lifeless slackening of something finally surrendering to the pull of death, but rather a gradual untensing of the body that spoke of a deep, profound relief.

A relief that can only be from the utterly-unshakable belief that true salvation had indeed arrived, mere moments from midnight.

You're not sure whether to feel happy or wretched that your half-baked deception worked. Probably...probably both, to be honest.

>> ☐ Deculture 09/06/15(Sun)11:05:59 No.42327371

>>42327352

"Thank...thank you." Homura breathes, one that ends in a feeble, red-misted cough. "Just...just let me catch my breath and I'll be back on my feet again."

You force yourself to smile and nod, even though you know she wouldn't be able to see either gesture. "Alright. Just take your time." You say as soothingly as you can, your free hand reaching for one of hers and giving it a squeeze. Ignoring how cold and limp her fingers felt in your grip. "Can you tell me about the Nameless One? Where is she now, Homura-chan?"

The dying fragment lets out a breathless huff of bloody air, and it's only after you see the bitter smile on her lips that you realize she's laughing. "She's...tenacious. Even outnumbered and outgunned, she's repelled nearly every attempt we've made to breach her final stronghold. ...Every single time we think we're making any headway, we end up getting murdered in an ambush of her own making, or stumble into a chokepoint riddled with explosives rigged to blow." She pauses her for a moment, the smile on her face widening. "She is...she is still one of us, after all."

Another cough wracks her frame, this time strong enough to nearly make you lose your grip of her. Blood dripping freely from her lips now, welling with every word, darkening her already-smeared costume even further. "...It's useless, though. We have her surrounded. It's only a matter of time before the Nameless One succumbs to her wounds."

...Ngh. That means you don't have much time to get to your sempai, then. If she dies here...no, you don't even want to think about that right now.

Not here. Not now. You didn't pull her out of the hell in Siberia for her to die in a place like this.

"That's...that's good, Homura-chan. That's very good." You manage to say after a moment, forcing your voice to remain level. "But where is she? Where is her...her final stronghold?""

>>42327371

The dying fragment of your sempai blinks her bruised, sightless eyes up at you. "...You...you don't know, Madoka? It's...it's the bastion built upon our many failures." She seems to hesitate here, before smiling again. "...Oh. But then, I'm forgetting how things are mutable here, in this godforsaken place..."

She coughs again, and when she speaks she's nearly inaudible - her voice now less of one and more of a barely-intelligible wheezing, forever at the edge of a last breath. The voice of someone who was, by all rights, living on borrowed time. "The Nameless One is...is making her final stand in a black tower north of here." The dying Magical Girl lets out another sigh. "You...you can't miss it. The rest of us are laying siege to it."

"...Sounds like Kong, all right." Wendy murmurs beside you, the American seemingly regaining her composure after earlier. "Probably picking off targets at the very top at her leisure, with all the entrances, exits and stairwells rigged with shaped charges." She glances down at the dying Homura in your arms, before shaking her head again. "...Let's move, Green. We know where to go. We can't waste time fucking around here."

But--

"..." The Callidus turns her back on you, making to walk away. "Don't even fucking argue, Green. That isn't Kong and you know it."

"...Madoka?" The nearly-dead girl in your grip whispers. "Madoka, I...it's getting harder to breathe, I...I don't think I'm getting any better..."

You look back at Wendy's retreating back - the Callidus clearly walking North - and then back at your sempai's dying fragment.

What do you do?

BATTLE FINISH

Actually, Nero is much better than Arturia in Grand Order. And she is a four star, and Arturia is a five star.

Both have really good skills. Arturia has worse stats. Nero's NP is extremely dependable.

Arturia's thing is that Excalibur is really strong in theory, but complete shit in practice. It's damage increases both with weapon level and overcharge. Problem is that she is a FIVE STAR SERVANT, meaning she is REALLY RARE, and you need to spend the card of the same servant to upgrade a NP once, so you would need to spend many, many shekels - we're talking a few wages here - to get enough quartz to safely roll FIVE Arturias and get Excalibur to level 5, and THEN in the actual battle you would have to have Arturia charge her NP bar to 300% and have her go last in a NP chain (which is actually really difficult to do).Then you would have Arturia as strong as she is supposed to be in canon.

Arturia is just so bad, holy shit. Fuck Arturia.

It's okay. I am getting tired of it now, but it's not a bad game, and the story actually includes some cool new Nasu fluff. A lot of stuff is no longer a taboo, like real dragons. One of the big bosses of the main story is Fafnir himself, which is really cool.

But it's much better if you play a bunch of friends to play it with, otherwise it will be really lonely (and underpowered, because no strong supports means no 40AP exp dailies)

You decide to hold her until she passes.

It's...you know it isn't her. You're not stupid.

And she even made it abundantly clear to you that she got herself into this condition by doing her level best to kill the person you were trying to rescue.

But...even with all that...

"...Madoka?" The dying Magical Girl wearing your sempai's face speaks again, for what sounds like the last time. "I'm...I think I'm going to rest for a bit. Is...is it alright if we stay like this...? At...at least until I fall asleep?"

Furiously blinking away tears, you smile and nod, before forcing yourself to speak as you hold her broken frame the slightest bit tighter.

"Of course, Homura-chan. You didn't even need to ask. We can stay like this." You reach down with one hand to brush her matted, blood-encrusted hair away from her features. "And I'll still be here when you wake up. I promise."

Mercifully, the fragment had no other reply to that, other than a smile. A smile that of relief, of contentment, of a long-denied peace finally found - after a lifetime of fighting and killing and having nothing else to show for it.

A smile that didn't fade even after she finally died, five minutes later. The breath leaving her lungs one final time, five minutes before she went completely still.

"Took you long enough, Green." Wendy greets you with a growl as you finally catch up to her, the American Callidus not even crediting you with a look. "I told you to just fucking leave her back there, and what do you do? Are you going to fucking cuddle each and every one of them to death? Is that it? Is that what you want?" She shakes her head irritably, before finally turning to the side to glare at you directly.

You return Wendy's look with a hard one of your own, the effect slightly diminished from your eyes reddened from all the crying you didn't do. ...It just didn't feel right to leave her, you attempt to explain. To just leave someone like that, cold and alone in their last moments alive--

"So?" Wendy's scowl deepens at this. "I died. Once. Did I fucking cry and bitch and moan when some big-titted nurse neglected to usher me off the mortal coil by burying my face in her cleavage? Did I, Green?"

That's...that's different! And you weren't even there, how could you tell if--

"I didn't!" The American audibly snaps. "The fucking point is, fine, there's a time and place for everything. This place - wherever the fuck it is, maybe Kong's broken brain or something - isn't it. Especially when the person you're trying to give a happy ending to was actually someone trying fucking kill the person you were supposed to be fucking rescuing in the FIRST PLACE!"

You open your mouth to reply here, the both of you continuing to march through the featureless, bleak landscape - but decide better of it to let Wendy wear herself out instead. It's...it's not that you've given up or anything, of course. Just that your unexpected bout of crying at the end - obviously triggered by the all-too-real horror of havving a facsimile of your sempai dying in your arms - you feel that it helped let you release the emotions that you'd been doing a great job of clamping down on for quite some time. Emotions that you've been pushing back ever since this entire mess with your sempai started, all in order to find a way to get her back intact.

Feeling the fragment finally breathe her last - you're thankful that Wendy wasn't around then to see you. Or hear you. You doubt you've ever cried that loud or that hard ever before. Clutching that broken body with yown hands, feeling how disgustingly light and frail it was due to its injuries - it brought all the fear, the helplessness, the agony flooding back to you, and you couldn't clamp down on them fast enough to prevent - as Kyoko and Sayaka had so glibly put it - the waterworks from starting. So you let it instead, letting it wash over you in a tidal wave.

And you came out of it drained. Drained, but...feeling a bit better, at least. Better enough to deal with whatever else you have to do to bring your sempai back.

...And true to form, Wendy does give up on her tirade soon enough, most likely recognizing your silence for what it is. It's only when what looks like the tower that the dying fragment described appear on the horizon - a black tower, surrounded by what appears to be whole Officios of Magical Girls, each one involved in some sort of concerted, if somewhat disogranized effort to lay siege to it - that she speaks up again. And when she does, it's in a rather apologetic tone that makes you turn back to her in surprise.

"...Sorry. It's this fucking place." Wendy murmurs. "...I didn't want to watch Kong die, either."

You give her a long look, before shaking your head and giving her a small smile. It's fine, you tell her. You understand completely. You can talk about it later though, if she wanted to.

There's a time and place for everything, after all.

You hear the American Callidus choke at this, but you try your best not to look too smug as you turn to look at the tower in the horizon. For a structure in this kind of place, you thought it'd be taller, at least. But it's no taller than a simple office building, ten, maybe twelve stories high. Completely black, all hard edges and right angles, ramrod straight. A straight line stabbed into the ground, bisecting the sky.

Somewhere in there is your own sempai. The real Chiaki. And you have to get to her before it's too late.

You shake your head as your gaze goes lower, to see the horde of...of sempais laying siege to it. There's got to be four, five Officios' worth of them running around down there, easily! Even if you had the idea that there was going to be a lot of them trying to take the real sempai out, just the sight of the horde - and the idea that each one of them was a perfect clone of the girl you're currently trying to rescue - is enough to make your knees weak.

"...Wish I brought a camera along." Wendy says beside you as she beholds the scene herself. "...Can you fucking imagine it? Enough clones of Kong to fill ten fucking Officios?" She shakes her head. "I can't even start to wrap my brain around the fucking concept."

Neither can you, you assure her. To hear about it is one thing, to see it is...it's completely another, all right.

"...Yeah." Wendy shakes her head, before nodding towards the tableau. "Anyway. How do you think we should make our way inside? My opinion, we have two options: try to sneak in undetected, or disguise ourselves as one of them, piggyback our way inside with one of their insertion attempts, something like that." She thinks for a second. "...Up to me, I'd go for infiltration. They're probably too busy worrying about getting inside that they won't notice us sneaking into the building."

That...that makes sense, but...hnn. Maybe there's an easier way...or a faster way, at least.

How do you want to try and get into the tower?

[]Sneak inside. The Homuras will probably be too busy to notice two Callidus sneaking in.
[]Disguise yourself. Less chance of you being discovered, and not to mention they may actually help you get inside the building.

The Idols are actually just a bunch of stock characters. You could rename them and repaint them in the MGNQ anime and nobody would get mad on any side ~~Iori has no fans~~.

The 40k pretty much only dictates terminology. That can be changed.

Metal Gear RAY can be any other robot or big fat boss, Blueberry Cheesecake Brownie could be removed entirely and nobody would really miss it, because it is flavor of the year again.

But the magical girl show expies? Those have to stay. And that would be a problem above anything else.

Wendy is the main character, Madotsuki, from a game called "Yume Nikki". In the game, she can use various powers, called "effects", to affect the game. One effect turns her into a traffic light, which causes everyone to stop moving.

You decide to echo Wendy's choice of action here. Sneaking in would probably be the best way to go about things. From how it's looking at in your vantage point, it does look as if the assembled horde of Homuras would be too busy to notice two Callidus slipping in after them. It'd be easy enough to infiltrate with all the commotion.

"...Thought so." Wendy nods, before squinting at the crowd of Homuras surrounding the tower from all sides. "Now we'll have to figure out how to actually do that. We half-ass this, and we got ten metric fucktons of Kong crashing down on us like a bad day." She shakes her head. "...Shit, is that a fucking tank? They're actually going to try and roll a fucking tank inside there? How...how is it going to fucking work? You won't even be able to shoot the main gun worth a damn in that kind of space--"

You have no idea, but it sounds like what your sempai would do anyway. Especially when she's about to lose her temper.

"...Point." Wendy murmurs. "...Anyway, let's try to get closer without being seen. We do that, we can probably find out when their next all-out assault will be and how. That'll be the time when we can get in without them knowing."

And so, for the second time in what seems like a day, you decide to use the skills you've long since abandoned after you got good enough to accurately imitate someone. ...No, you're not complaining. It's actually nostalgic in a way, relying on the abilities drilled to you during basic Callidus training, rather than continuing to use illusory magic as a crutch.

Of course, it also has the unfortunate side effect of bringing your poor life decisions to light. Specifically, the decisions that involve shutting yourself in your room and drawing nothing but magical girls all day, with only soda and junk food for sustenance.

...Anyway. After a few moments of sneaking around and cautiously inching forward, you find yourself hiding behind some stacked ammo crates, while Wendy concealed herself behind the wrecked, rocket-pockmarked corpse of a Panzer IV Ausf.D. The faded logo of a goofily-drawn anglerfish standing out from its gray-painted hull.

Just a few metres in front of you, close enough to eavesdrop on, is what appears to be an impromptu strategy meeting between the more senior-looking of Homuras. Homuras that look suitably battle-hardened, weary, and determined - a stark contrast from the others that look fresh from contracting. ...One of them is even sporting a prosthetic arm, painted crimson. A shard of black shrapnel sticking out from her forehead - at least, until one of the other Homuras irritably plucked it out, revealing it as some sort of tape-on prop.

...So it's just not clones, you realize. It's other versions of your sempai.

"Alright, alright, settle down." One of the Homuras clears her throat in an attempt to catch the others' attention. "We've confirmed that the Nameless One is holed up at the top floor. That's where anyone one with sense would hole up in, considering this is a ground siege and all.

"Now, it's easy enough to get into the building. Hell, the Nameless One probably should've rolled out the red carpet, with how she's neglected securing the entrance and the lobby." The Homura taking the lead jabs a finger at what looks like a rough sketch of the tower. "But as we've had the direct displeasure of discovering that many, if not all the floors between the roof and the lobby have been rigged with traps set to detonate remotely. Now, that would just be easily solved with a few ECMs being thrown down, but they're also rigged with motion sensors, so..."

>>42331892

One of the other raven-haired Magical Girls speaks up. "The tower itself is a conundrum. Each floor is divided into nine equal-sized rooms, and those rooms switch around each other without any warning at all. So not only do we have to deal with getting blown up, but also by getting so irrevocably lost that we open ourselves up to one of her ambushes." She shakes her head, heaving an irritated sigh. "I think we may need to cut our losses here--"

The obvious leader of the pack - a Homura with what appears to be a network of scars etched across her face - shakes her head. "This is our one last chance to get things right. We can't give up now." She glares at each other in turn, before shaking her head again. "Now, like I suggested earlier, the next assault should involve an direct aerial attack, one that drops operatives directly onto the top floor. One of us is busy trying to see if they can procure an attack helicopter from their own collection, and she's one of those types that compulsively stole anything that she thought she could get away with at the time, so there's a good chance we should be airborne soon."

"Something's going our way at least, then." One of the Magical Girls grumble, to the murmured assent of the others.

"Besides that, we're still working on smashing through one of the floors with an actual tank, as well as the usual spate of ten-person kill teams sent in thirty minutes." The scarred Homura shakes her head. "Not one has come back intact, only stragglers she left alive to come back and tell the tale. But from the reports of the survivors, we ARE getting closer and closer. It's just taking time."

More murmurs of agreement, while some took the time and opportunity to curse the Nameless One underneath their breaths.

"I know, it's not much to go on, but that's what we have." The scarred Homura shakes her head. "We just need to keep trying, and trying, and trying. One of us will get it right eventually." She laughs. "Just like our primogenitor did."

More laughter, and it's here that they finally break apart, the meeting obviously concluded. In their inattention, you make your way over to Wendy, the bulk of the busted tank enough to conceal the both of you.

"...So that gives us two options, then." Wendy mulls this over. "Either wait for their chopper to get ready and be operational, get on board somehow, and drop ourselves down when we get the chance - or slip in after one of their kill-teams and go from there. The thing with the shifting rooms is fucked, though. ...Then again, it's just like Kong to come up with shit like that."

Oh? Your sempai would actually go that far...?

The American Callidus blinks at you, before nodding. "Yeah. She can get very paranoid about shit if you let her. This kind of excessive precaution is normal for her." She glances up at the tower. "And I bet she's got something to address her weak spot from up top, too. But there's the off-chance she missed it, so..."

So it's the helicopter, then? Navigating the building sounds like a hellish maze to deal with, so--

Wendy shakes her head. "...Navigation's not even an issue. Your Soul Gem's attuned to hers, right?"

Yeah? What about it...?

"Then you can use it to track her down. See what route we have to take to get to her." She hesitates for a moment, before forging on. "...That, or the Golden Weapon we stole. Either way, one of them has to work, right?"

...Hnnh. That's possible.

"Anyway. Still your decision, Green. You decide, I'll follow."

What do you do?

I really, really hate votes like this one. There are just too many possible courses of action and diverging opinions to really settle with a vote. There's picking the routes, and there's a 'when to use what' part to either side. Since Soul Gem resonance, Tiny Pete, DEagle Spirits and Wendy's broom all have their moments where they could be useful in this fuck up, but the problem is picking an order, which not to use at all, so on and so forth...

Also, ask the spirits in the DEagle for an option.

Finally, what about scaling the outside of the tower?

You look up at the tower from the cover of the ruined tank. Going with the helicopter seems like a safe bet - it'd take you up to the uppermost floor of the tower, no problem, you only need to remain undetected for the entirety of the ride. Slipping into the building amidst the chaos of their full-out assault seems feasible too, albeit a bit more risky.

Just as you make to blurt out your decision, however, it's here that a thought strikes you - one that you immediately berate yourself mentally for missing. ...Your sempai may be obtuse and socially-inept sometimes, and she can be devastatingly callous if she wants to be - but she's not as stupid as people think she is at first.

She wouldn't simply hole up inside somewhere without addressing all glaring security gaps - and an attack from above is definitely one of them, especially in this situation. Maybe she'd rigged the roof to blow up at the slightest sign of intruders. Automated sentry guns, you've heard her murmur something in her sleep about them before - she could have posted dozens and dozens of them all over the building, in entrances, exits, bottlenecks...

You blink again. ...No, that's not possible. That's not...it can't be.

Can't it? This is sempai you're talking about after all, and--

"...Well, Green?" Wendy hisses from her spot behind the murdered Panzer. "Any fucking day now would be nice!"

You glance at Wendy, then back at the tower. Before shaking your head again in utter disbelief.

"Green? What the fuck is--" Wendy begins again, but stops as she sees you draw out your Soul Gem. "...What? Green, you realize you're doing this in the midst of a fucking assault force? What the fuck are you doing?!"

You shush her as you hold the glowing bauble close to you, so as to not to attract too much attention. At the same time you concentrate - forcing your thoughts, your will, into the singular purpose of finding Chiaki. Of finding your sempai.

Your Soul Gem glows once. Twice. Three times in succession.

And then, with the sound of a small bell chime, a small ray of crimson light shoots from your Soul Gem. Its afterimage leaving a trail leading not towards the tower, but away from it.

Your breath catches in your throat as you realize just what it means. Beside you, you hear Wendy let out a curse underneath her breath - the American also realizing the truth a couple of heartbeats after you do.

That's...that's it.

You've found Chiaki.

You've found your sempai. Somewhere, in this bleak, featureless landscape, is your sempai. Far away from here.

And somehow, she's taken all her other selves as fools, making them throw their lives away trying to force their way up a heavily-fortified base she isn't even taking refuge in.

"...Goddammit, Kong." Wendy grins, shaking her head in incredulous glee. "Just...fuck. Goddammit."

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 09/13/15(Sun)11:49:26 No.42474640 Archived

You are a Magical Girl, and you've narrowly avoided drowning.

...Wait, no. Where did that come from? What you did narrowly avoid was trying to get into someplace you obviously have no business in - especially when the person you're looking for isn't really in that place to begin with, but rather somewhere else. Somewhere that's probably high up, or at least with enough elevation to give her a clear line of sight with the high-powered sniper rifle scope she's more than likely peering through right now. A bent cigarette burning between her lips as she grumbles something about casuals underneath her breath.

You can't believe you didn't think of it sooner, though. After all, your sempai IS the type of person to hole up inside a building, riddling every entrance with booby traps and shaped charges before barricading herself at the very top - all in preparation for a bloody final stand. The type of person who would look at a losing situation and decide to make the most out of it - not by surrendering or bargaining for an easier fate, but to make her attackers work for their kill. To make them bleed for it. To go down swinging, taking out as many of her enemies with her as she can.

Murder Mayumi did the same, when she was surrounded by Homicide Holly's gang of operator thugs, and she did it while laughing through the entire bloody, corpse-filled chapter.

>>42474640

But to do exactly that while not having to pay that ultimate price? Of not actually having to be there in the first place, instead being somewhere so far away that even your Soul Gem is having trouble pinpointing her exact location, forcing you to concentrate just to keep a solid lock on her whereabouts? Being this cunning that she was able to take advantage of her other selves' obvious tunnel vision, leading them all by the nose, directing them to bark up at the completely wrong tree while she chuckles at their dogged efforts from miles away?

You're relieved that you managed to second-guess her before you yourself fell into the same trap, of course. But this...it's a chilling reminder that even with you being able to bring out her softer, warmer side, there will always be that part of her that earned the name Murderface.

The part of her that could kill as easily as she breathed.

The part of her that could run headfirst into a huge firefight with a gun and a single magazine, headshot everyone, and still have enough rounds left to blow out everyone else's kneecaps.

The part of her that would eventually earn her wings and be called the blight of the universe by mutant alien cats.

...

Someday, you'll be able to tell her how much that murderous, dangerous side of her excites you just as much as it frightens you.

Maybe then you'll be able to tell her the truth, too.

About everything.

Anyway. With your Soul Gem leading the way, you and Wendy carefully extract yourselves from the death trap that the other Homuras have decided to throw away their own lives into assaulting - taking care not to leave any trail behind you, just in case one of them gets the bright idea of shadowing you. They may have fallen for your sempai's ruse, but as they do share your sempai's own kind of frighteningly-focused intellect...well, you just don't want to take any chances. The last thing you want to do is to blow your sempai's cover and lead them to her.

A few minutes' of walking - followed by ten minutes of hitching a ride on Wendy's rather ridiculous-looking flying broomstick, a mode of transportation that she had to literally threaten you to take seriously, as the mere sight of it made you giggle like a maniac - and you finally reach the location that your Soul Gem had been pointing to. And for the most part, your prediction fits - your sempai has indeed holed herself up in an elevated position, just far enough from the actual building to escape detection while being high enough to offer a wicked vantage point to pick off targets with. A Vindicare's dream.

But at the same time, it's...not really what you expected.

Embedded in the bleak, featureless scenery's many random outcroppings of jagged rock and marble, on one high enough that it could be considered a small mountain - is an apartment-style condominium. One literally sliced away from the high-rise building it was a part of, and stuck there like a clumsy children's project.

But it's not..it's not your sempai's. Not the one you know of, anyway. For one, it doesn't look like the expensive unit that Kyuubey gave her before her ratification. It certainly doesn't look half as nice.

>> ☐ Deculture 09/13/15(Sun)11:55:07 No.42474705

>>42474687

"...Holy shit." Wendy's eyes go wide as she makes the broom you've both been riding on touch down near the apartment's doorstep. "...It's...it's her old apartment. The shitty one, before she got roped into being a watch-wearing dildo. Before...everything, really." The American Callidus shakes her head. "Jesus. I didn't think I'd ever see it again."

Her old apartment...? You echo, looking back at the cheaply-made door barring your path, the thinly-applied paintjob doing a commendable job in flaking away bit by bit. ...Oh. That...that makes sense, then. You've never really seen it yourself, only having heard of the events that had taken place that had necessitated her moving out. Not...really all that pleasant to hear to be honest, but then again, nothing about your sempai's past has been particularly cheerful, with the rare exception here and there.

But that doesn't matter. Not right now. Not when you've finally found her - a step closer to getting her out of this Nightmare and back into the real world.

You just need to get inside and find her. The patina-covered doorknob all but calling for you to reach out and grab it.

...It's...it's strange, though. For some reason, instead of your feeling elated, all you feel is dread. A cold sort, the kind that twists your gusts from within and dumps ice in the pit of your stomach.

"...Well?" Wendy turns towards you, confused. "Aren't we going in? We still have to give her the Desert Eagle, right?"

Y-yeah. Of course.

"So what the fuck are we waiting for?"

What do you do?

[]Knock on the door.
[]Turn the doorknob and push the door open.

[]Call out your sempai.
[]Other.

You shake your head at Wendy and signal for her to stay completely still. The brown-haired Callidus frowning at you, but nodding - her sleepy eyes narrowing at the sight of your Soul Gem pulsing in a slow, steady rhythm. The both of you watching it for any change, any errant misstep in the beat that would clue you in to someone occluding themselves from sight with magic. Someone who may have followed you here.

Finding none - the both of you heaving a simultaneous sigh of relief - it's here that you signal Wendy to keep a look out as you make to pulse your sempai, while keeping away from the door yourself. ...You're not taking any chances here, either. If your sempai had been canny enough to not only trick a thousand gun-toting maniac clones of herself to infiltrate the wrong building, then she's certainly canny enough to rig her apartment door with a few traps - just in case some idiot decides to barge in unexpectedly. And you know she hates unexpected guests more than anyone.

+ Sempai? + You pulse into your attunement with her. + Sempai, I'm outside with Wendy. Can you let us in? +

For a couple of moments, you receive no answer. No reply, not even a psychic nudge of acknowledgment pulsed through the connection.

A few minutes later, it comes - in the form of what sounds like multiple locks being undone from behind the door. Followed by the slow, menacing cacophony of guns being unloaded and cleared of ammunition. ...Quite a few of them, if your untrained ears are any judge. Most also qualifying as the sort of firearm with the word 'machine' somewhere in their descriptor.

"...Guess that's as good as a reply as we're going to get, then," Wendy remarks, and you can't help but agree there. Under the current circumstances, it's as good as your sempai welcoming you with a big grin and wide-open arms. Not that she would ever smile like that, no. Not unless you stuck your fingers in her mouth and pulled them apart.

You reach out and grab hold of the doorknob, before twisting it in your grip and then pushing the door itself open. Wendy following you close behind, one hand on the scruff of your hoodie, just in case you needed pulling away at the last moment.

What greets you at the other side of the door - besides an empty room and another door leading out of it, labeled - is a pile of guns. Literally a pile of guns hanging from the ceiling, all haphazardly lashed together in a complicated web of nylon rope and duct tape - and all of them aimed at the door. From the looks of things, they were set to empty their bulky magazines the moment someone entered the doorway, sending a veritable hailstorm of bullets at near point-blank range.

"...Jesus, Kong. Not even Mickey could've survived something like this." Wendy mutters as she beholds the booby trap to end all booby traps. "All of them set to fucking full auto, too. Jesus. What the fuck was she expecting?"

The worst, you reply, spying a small wooden chair in the corner of the room - in the middle of a pile of empty Kong bottles and spent cigarette filters. Beside it, laying open on its side, is a half-full suitcase full of grenades.

Ever since you've met her and became a part of her life, that was your sempai. Always anticipating the worst, always expecting the universe to shit itself as it always does, always bracing for the karmic gut-check to come screaming down at her. ...Some could call that paranoid, sure, but when even the universe makes itself known that it was out to get you, in the form of a pink-haired demon haunting you at every corner, even in your dreams...well, no one can blame her for being realistic, at least.

So, have any of you read the Puella Magica Homura Tamura spinoff manga? It's about Homu ending up in bizzarre worlds after using her shield too much, and features a chapter with multiple Homu's hanging out in a bar ran by a Homura with a broken shield.

I mean, I'm not saying Decu is ghost writing for Magica Quartet or anything, but I'm not saying he isn't either.

You approach the ghost, gently prying Wendy's grip from your hoodie. She glances at you, then at your destination, before darkly murmuring something underneath her breath. A moment later, her signature weapon - a plain-looking kitchen knife - manifests in her hand with the juicy sound of a sharpened sword being pulled from the spine it's been using as a temporary sheath.

"...I fucking hope you know what you're doing." You hear her grumble, and you give her a nod. ...It's funny how things are working out. Before all this, back during that awfully-early meeting, you were pretty sure you'd end up trying to stab each other's faces in. Now you're actually covering each other, in this hellscape where your sempai has found herself trapped in again.

As soon as you move a couple of steps closer to the ghost is when it turns towards you, its featureless gaze swiveling milky gray eyes towards yours. You freeze for a second - just as you feel Wendy tense behind you - but instead of leaping off of her chair to bludgeon you to death with her rifle, the ghost begins to talk. Her voice oddly disembodied, as if being piped in from the outside.

"...Sleeper agents are usually the common tactic when dealing with high-risk, high-import targets." The ghost begins. "It should need not be mentioned that Callidus are the perfect choice in this matter. While there are many schools of thought on how to actually go about creating one, the premise usually follows as such: a fresh contract, on the track to a Callidus classification, is intercepted before she receives basic training."

The ghost blinks, before speaking again. This time, her voice sounds much closer. Much more real. And no longer speaking in the convoluted jargon it was babbling on about earlier. And for some reason, you have the inkling that she's talking directly to you, rather than simply repeating a message from rote memory.

"Are you ready to fulfill your main objective, Hanegawa Midori?"

W-what..? Main objective...?

I don't think the midori failsafe is to make sure the memory's get wiped. I think this is specifically for the scenario in which a Homura has enough balls to fight the memory wipe and learn what's really going on.That they are fully ready to accept and handle the responsibilities all of this shit entails. That would cause a horrible persona-cascade though so the key then becomes this: how do you make sure the right Homura survives.

By making absolutely sure that the right person will be in the right place to ensure it. Without Midori here would anyone even think of using the golden weapons for this? When your warmaster is apparently becoming consumed/turning into a demon god the answer isn't usually 'lets throw more shinier demons at it, I'm sure it'll sort it out.' Instead you make sure there is somone the homura has an emotional connection with and trusts enough to handle this for you.

With Malal we often had interesting twists because most of it was nicely foreshadowed ages ago. This however would come pretty much out of nowhere.

What? What is she talking about? A...sleeper agent? Is she saying that you're one, and your main bjective involves your sempai somehow?

...That's...that's stupid! That's insane! You remember your first day reporting for basic Callidus training - you were never pulled out of formation, you were never 'intercepted', and you sure as hell didn't go through any hypno-therapy or whatever...! You're just here to save your sempai, that's it!

B-besides, Chiaki...Chiaki could have killed you back then, the first time you met! What kind of sleeper agent would have you been then, huh? What, is she saying that whoever set you up as a sleeper agent predicted that she'd spare your life, too?! Because no one can plan that far ahead, that's just crazy!

Wait...is she insinuating that this is one of Malal's plans, or whatever? Because that's...no, that's not possible. Malal wouldn't do something like that to your sempai. Not after everything else she's put her through. It's stupid--

The ghost seems to consider this, before smiling. A small, sad smile. "You underestimate the dedication of those who placed you on the game board, Hanegawa Midori. They play the long game, just as we do. Just as Malal tried to and failed." It lets out a small chuckle, one you can't help but feel insulted by. "Then again, I agree. I would've picked a more practical approach."

You stand still for a moment, trying to reign in your temper - before shaking your head once more. For...forget it. Where the hell is your sempai? You're not sticking around for this kind of crazy talk. You've had enough thrown at your face already, and you're worried about it catching.

"Just beyond that door." It gestures politely to the one door leading out of the room - besides the one you entered from, anyway. "Send my regards to the Nameless One when the final moment dawns. ...And don't worry. I don't think she'll take it personally. Not right now as she is, anyway."

You give the room a cursory once-over before going through the door. Just in case you missed anything. Wendy, still confused about your own deflection, helps out a moment later - not that you needed it, anyway. You wanted to do something, anything, just to occupy yourself from thinking about what the ghost just said.

You find what you're looking for - or at least, what you were supposed to come upon - in the suitcase of grenades, or at least.

A fragment of a Soul Gem. One that used to be whole, and one that glowed with a deep purple light.

Remarkably similar to the one you put together a lifetime ago, with the help of a pink-haired goddess. After the first time you died.

Wendy says nothing as you place it inside your inventory. Her mood - which had already been dark before - has mellowed out somewhat, although now tainted with concern. It's obvious that this is the first time she's seen you like this - and had it been any other time, you would have tried to set perceptions right. Explained things before going about them.

Not right now. Just...not right now.

You open the door leading to the next room with such force that you very nearly rip it off its hinges - causing its one lone occupant, another gray ghost in the form of your sempai - to squeak and nearly drop the bomb it was putting together. Its hair tied into two thick, heavy braids that fall to the floor on either side of her, framing a youthful bespectacled face of innocence. It looks up at you, nervous and fidgety, from its place in its heavy, comfy-looking kotatsu.

Beside the floor cushion it is sitting on is a large, wickedly-curved sword, one seemingly made of rusting black metal. It looks too murderous, too violent, to be a parrying weapon. Its purpose is singular - to main and kill and rip and tear.

"That's--" Wendy starts, but you raise a hand, stopping her even before she can continue.

"Sleeper agents are...I think they're horribly unfair." The ghost murmurs as you step closer to it, its eyes going wide. "N-not just to the target, but also to the agent itself. They spend all this time being with the target, becoming their friend, companion, e-even lover...a-and then they're expected to carry out their duty after hearing a particular command phrase? It presumes that, even with the weight of hypnotic suggestion, that the agent will just magically ignore their feelings towards the target, forsake their morals and convictions and belief...and for what? To follow the order of a superior who had the sadistic need to turn them into mindless, murdering robots with no free will of their own?"

"Are you...are you really going to fulfill your main objective, Hanegawa Midori-san?" The ghost asks, her voice quivering.

How do you respond?

Why is everybody assuming that Midori was a sleeper agent from the start?
Isn't it more likely that she was made into a sleeper agent when her Soul Gem was recreated by Godoka and Malal?
They had complete access to her soul at that point, and any number of hidden failsafes and backup protocols could have been inserted into Midori's very soul.

Can we really be sure that Pinky, or an unconscious portion of her, couldn't have inserted a few hidden commands into Midori while Godoka was putting her back together?
Midori is a Vessel of Faust; maybe there's some hidden dangers or side-effects whenever Godoka has to use Pinky's powers.

Yeah but how many of those would have had a chance to plant Midori as a sleeper agent here?

It would have to be someone who has a motive to plant her near Chiaki in order for the current events to occur, someone who knew how to make her likeable to Chiaki, someone who had the power to plant things like that in the mind of a callidus without her knowing and someone with the opening to do so.

That doesn't really leave many options.

You force yourself to remain calm. Fine. It's going to be like this, is it? This is how they want to play? Just making you out like the bad guy, when all you've been doing is trying to save the one person you love?

"My...main objective is to save Chiaki." You say after a moment, inwardly horrified at how hoarse - and tired - you sound. "That's what I've been doing all this time, and that's what I'm going to do. And no one is going to tell me otherwise."

The ghost looks up at you with eyes wide with naive surprise - before it slowly lowers its head and cries. Not like a child bawling its eyes out after its toy had been broken into pieces in front of it by a vengeful playground bully, but rather the silent, shaking tears of heartbroken gratitude.

She disappears without a smirking rejoinder, leaving behind another Soul Gem fragment on the table, amongst the spare parts of the bomb she was constructing. Placing it in your inventory, you immediately go through the door leading to the next room. Because of course there's one.

Wendy, still silent, still reluctant, follows you close behind. Her breath tickling the back of your neck as you forge onward.

The person you stumble into in the next godforsaken room is....a surprise. Enough that you feel the brimming rage bubbling at the back of your eyes suddenly grow cold in your shock.

It's...it's the Armored Fragment. The crazed, brutishly-clawed fragment of your sempai that could only talk through pulsing - her mouth unable to facilitate regular speech due to the steel-sharp ivory of her blood-pinked teeth. Also ghostlike, also completely gray, but even in this diminished form you could feel the danger coming off of her in waves. The tension thick in the air around her, even as she sits slumped forward on a bench in the corner of the room, scarred face buried in her claws.

"I--" You begin, but your answer is a wet leopard growl that bounces off the walls like a gunshot. A growl that ends in an almost pitiful whine, almost like that of a kicked dog.

The fragment is there, by her feet, and you slowly and carefully pick it up. You look back at Wendy, and she isn't even looking at the fragment - in fact, she's doing all she can not to look. Her eyes averted from the creature, her hand clamped tight around your wrist.

You pick up the fragment, put it in your inventory, and make to leave.

Just as you do so, though--

+ I. TRUSTED. YOU. +

You look back in alarm, just as the door you just stepped through slams shut.

The next room isn't a room at all. It's...it looks like an apartment balcony, looking out into the night. And far in the distance is the black tower - the building under siege by your sempai's many clones. The night illuminated with the lightning-flash of muzzle flare, and made loud by ordnance thunder-crash.

Someone is...at the balcony. Someone familiar, yet a few years younger than she should be. Wearing the cream-colored Mitakihara Middle School uniform rather than the white-and-purple costume you've always seen her in. Perfect, pale unmarred skin in place of calloused, scarred swathes of flesh, with just the slightest hint of a tan, from actually spending time outside rather than secluding themselves indoors.

Her back pointed towards you as she peers at the tower in the horizon through the scope of a high-powered rifle. Snickering something about casuals underneath her breath the entire time.

"Is...is that...?" Wendy murmurs behind you. "...Kong?"

"...Chiaki's fine," The younger version of your sempai replies flippantly, with a voice yet to be ravaged by years of alcohol and nicotine abuse. "Don't misunderstand, I find the nickname cute, just that I'm not that eager to start adopting it yet."

The bobcut was there, sure. No longer looking like it was styled with a combat knife. Clear purple eyes, without even so much as a hint of eyebags. A quick and easy smile, a disarming one, as opposed to the perennial scowl you've grown to love.

...Sempai?

"Doubt it, I'm a few years younger than you. Kind of off to consider someone your junior your sempai, right?" Chiaki Matsuda grins, both hands on hips, a stance that your old sempai would have balked at pulling off, much less attempt.

>A world-class idol.

>In fact you're the best goddamn idol there is.

>You're pretty, you're talented, you've got legions of adoring fans, and you have a new security detail competent enough to separate you from the unwashed masses. Your songs are always number one on any chart that matters, and even some that don't.

>You're number one, and you've made everybody who tried to usurp you into your friend or your bitch.

>The world is yours.

>And yet, you feel unfulfilled. Empty, as if there was a chain-smoking, binge-drinking, foul-mouthed magical girl shaped-hole in your heart.

>Oh, certainly, she was beyond crude, and she hated you like you hated idol boot camp, but having the new Warmaster as your guard dog... well, it was the most fun you'd had since you first learned how to kill.

>Which is why you plan to pay her a surprise visit. You'll drag her kicking and screaming out of her tomb of paperwork and responsibility. Really, you'll be doing her a favor. How could she refuse -you-?

>No, not a surprise visit. A surprise concert. For her. At her Officio. And you're bringing all your friends.

>The only question is... what are you going to wear? As tempting as it sounds, you can't just show up naked. The press, and your production company, would never let you hear the end of it!

>No, it has to be something bold, but tasteful. Something that screams "all eyes on me, because I'm calling the shots now."

>You'd think having a wardrobe bigger than a college campus would make this easier. Truly, nobody appreciates how much you must suffer for your art.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 09/20/15(Sun)09:42:25 No.42621437 Archived

You stare at the smiling raven-haired girl in front of you. The girl declaring to be your sempai, despite looking like her complete polar opposite - even more than the other fragments of her psyche that you've encountered.

Well, no. That's probably an exaggeration. She...she looks the part, that's for sure, from the severe-looking bobcut to the modest proportions that you've always felt was perfect, especially on your sempai. She even has that particular gleam in her eye - that subtle look of someone who was perfectly capable to do whatever needs to be done - anything, up to and including taking a gun and killing a bunch of people with it.

But...is it really her? It's not that you're suspecting her of being anyone else, of course, but...there's just something strange about her that you can't seem to put your finger on. Nothing unfamiliar or alarming anything like that, but it's as if something is missing--

You blink, and then laugh softly to yourself. ...Of course. How...how could you have been so stupid? How could you miss THAT? You, of all people?

"...Green?" Wendy calls out from behind you, clearly concerned and somewhat uncertain. "...You alright? Sounding a bit full mental jacket there for a second." You feel her hand on your shoulder, warm and firm. "Maybe just take deep breaths, yeah?"

Your sempai's near-identical - and impossibly-different - facsimile joins in a moment later, the same amount of worry tainting her words. "Well, er, I suppose this is a hell of a lot to take in, especially with everything that's been happening so far." She shakes her head, her perfectly-cut hair briefly ruffling in disarray at the movement, before falling back into place, with not one strand awry. "Midori? Maybe you'd better sit down, I think we have a bit of time to just get a new perspective on things and--"

HYPE

>> ☐ Deculture 09/20/15(Sun)09:45:04 No.42621461

>>42621437

You shake your own head, still giggling underneath your breath. N-no! No, you're fine! You're not...you're not overwhelmed! It's just...you can't believe you missed something so obvious! Something that was staring you right in the face all along!

Ignoring the concerned looks your two companions continue to give you, you shake your head again, before rifling in your inventory. Mami herself gave you a spare pair, just for occassions like these...ah, there it is...!

"Midori? Midori, come on, you can sit down right here beside me, and then we can--" Your sempai starts, but she stops cold as she sees what's in your hands. Watching you with a sudden, captive attention as you unfold the accessory, turn it around, and then - with infinite care - place it right where it belongs.

Where it had been missing all this time.

Finally removing all doubt from your soul about whether or not this person in front of you is in fact who she says she is.

You stare down at Chiaki as she looks up at you through her glasses, her own eyes wide behind the crimson-rimmed lenses, her mouth open in surprise. An expression that you would've liked to stare at a bit more, had not unbidden tears began fogging your vision up, at the same time that your breath started to catch in your throat. Making your reply - the only way to reply to her greeting - come out in a querulous sob despite the big, tearful smile you've forced yourself to give.

Despite having practiced greeting her again over and over in your mind when you finally get her back from the nightmare she'd found herself trapped in again.

"K-kept...kept y-you waiting....huh?"

>> ☐ Deculture 09/20/15(Sun)09:46:57 No.42621487

>>42621461

And just like that - without you even being able to stop yourself in time, or at the very least check your advance - you simply and utterly break down. Your mental floodgates that had held back every panic attack, every stab of despair and hurt and anger at what Fate had decided to deal the only person you called your own finally buckling, then bursting under the pressure of it all. The pressure - and the overwhelming, exhausting relief at getting your sempai back again. Back in one piece.

You don't even hear yourself crying. You don't even FEEL yourself crying. All you know is that you're making an awful, embarrassing mess of yourself, something that your sempai should never have to see ever. You want to bury your face in your hands, to try and conceal yourself from the one person who had already suffered so much and you know will suffer even more in the future - but you can't even manage that.

You're too tired, too drained, too exhausted to. All you can do is stand there and cry it out and hope that Wendy wouldn't give you too much grief about it. ...She would, though. If you knew the American Callidus at all, she wouldn't pass up an opportunity for another scathing insult, or at least a grumbled snark.

To your surprise she does nothing of the sort - all you hear from her is something approaching a mumbled apology, before you felt your own sempai step forward and take you into a hug of her own. You immediately fold into the embrace, unable to do anything else but to slump forward and lean your frame against hers. Your arms wrapping around the smaller, shorter Magical Girl - burying your face into her shoulder to muffle your cries there.

"It's okay, Midori. It's alright. You did great." Your sempai whispers soothingly, lovingly, one hand rubbing your back. "That's two I owe you now. Thank you. I don't think I'll ever be able to pay you back for all this."

N-no! No, she doesn't owe you anything...! You just wanted her to be okay, that's all!

...is what you would've said, had you not been rendered completely incoherent by your little nervous breakdown. Instead you hold her tighter, your nails digging into her back, as if worried that the moment you slacken your grip is the moment your sempai slips through your grasp again. Something you will never let happen ever again.

Never again. Even if you have to actually kill someone this time, you don't care.

"Alright, alright, I get it." Chiaki laughs gently, squirming gently in your arms but not exactly making to extract herself. "I'm not going anywhere, Midori. ...Not yet, anyway, but certainly not right now. So just...relax, alright?"

You nod tearfully, while still keeping a hold of your new sempai. The action making you headbutt her shoulder in the gentlest and most pathetic kind of way. She laughs at this again, before you feel her turn her head towards...someone behind you. ...Wendy, probably. You don't know. Right now you don't really care.

Another moment, and you feel a hand take your shoulder, grabbing it in a friendly squeeze before pulling away. At the same time that your sempai, still keeping a hold of you, gently and slowly leads you to what feels like a bench. A bench set just a few feet from your sempai's vantage point, overlooking the skyscraper in the distance still being laid siege to by her pursuers.

You feel her take the seat next to you, her shoulder against yours. Once - way back then - the proximity may have embarrassed the both of you. But not now. certainly not now.

"It's getting really rare, isn't it?" She says out of the blue, as soon as you manage to settle down enough to look at the girl sitting beside you without spraying her with tears and snot. "Times like these, I mean. Just to take a breather and enjoy each other's company. It always feels like bad things are happening right after another, right?"

Restating the obvious two times in a row doesn't give any depth, honky. And he's stating exactly what the reader should be thinking anyways. For a direct example;
Most of the first half of >>42621487 is just plain padding. The entire first three paragraphs can easily be shortened into just one and give the reader just as much information and detail.

I agree, slower and more detailed descriptions may add tension. This, however, is neither a tense situation, neither does the description of Midori's fee fees add any tension in this context. Building up tension is a good idea in this context, yes, but none of these descriptions do it.

Midori's fee fees get cut down and replaced with quicker sentences that rather describe the length of time than each individual action. Unimportant actions don't need to be described in detail, such as
>"Another moment, and you feel a hand take your shoulder, grabbing it in a friendly squeeze before pulling away. At the same time that your sempai, still keeping a hold of you, gently and slowly leads you to what feels like a bench. A bench set just a few feet from your sempai's vantage point, overlooking the skyscraper in the distance still being laid siege to by her pursuers.

>You feel her take the seat next to you, her shoulder against yours. Once - way back then - the proximity may have embarrassed the both of you. But not now. certainly not now."
can be shortened down to >Moments later, your sempai is sitting next to you as you watch her many predecessors besiege her believed location.
or something like that.
Some of the dialogue is unnecessary as well.

Do you understand the concept of critique?
That's what I'm doing. I want Decu to improve and to see this quest finally end some day in my own lifespan. I want his writing to improve so we all may have a better experience. At this stage, I just skip through over half his writing, through all the obvious padding and through all the tiring introspections. It's been like this for this entire Midori arc. Decu's strength really does lie within writing action.

The second point wasn't "You just don't like what I like". It was "There are a lot of people and they all like different things." which is an undeniable truth no matter how you look at it.

Just like there's a huge split over write-faggotry, or waifus, or everything really. No matter how Decu writes, there will be people that will be displeased. If he'd go faster, there would be people that would feel that the quest is 'being rushed'. If he'd skimp on the details, there would be people that would think that this or that was pulled out of nowhere or that it doesn't make sense. So on and so forth.

The point is, literature, and writing in general, is an art, not a science, there's no such thing as the perfect, logical approach.

While the argument that "you can't please everyone and not everyone likes the same thing" is worth thinking about, it's not something we should use to just excuse low-quality writing.

Take a shitty movie, like, I dunno, Manos: The Hands of Fate or something. It's unfair to say that the movie's flaws (which are many) aren't flaws at all because the director can't please everyone.

What makes my opinion valid is its noncomformity. The anon that likes it the way it is right now would likely see no difference if the pacing improved, because he cannot view Decu's work from a different point of perspective. The pacing can improve yet not impact people's enjoyment of the story in any way. It's the same way with other forms of art. For example, in a realistic portrait of a woman in a room, the anatomy may be wrong, the perspective of the room may be off by several degrees and the lightning may be confusing in several areas. You can improve all three of these areas and thus make your painting "better" in the eyes of any complainers. Improving any of these aspects wouldn't anger those who liked the painting even past its faults, because they either couldn't see them or found something much more important in the painting that overshadowed these issues. If it does anger them, then they are plain objectively wrong because the focus of realism is to depict objects and people the way they look. That's why there is plenty of other areas of art.

Thing is, I don't think Decu is a post-modernist writer. I also think Decu got discouraged by all this critical banter. Time to post blondes or whatever.

That's debatable.

Sometimes, what you said is accurate.

Other times, you run a quest, or write some piece of fiction, or draw a webcomic or w/e, and it's fun. You start getting some fans, maybe just a few, maybe a lot, it's hard to tell on the Internet sometimes. You start feeling at least a little pressure to please them as much as possible. Sometimes you're aware of it, sometimes not... and if you're not careful, it stops being about doing the thing you enjoy, and it's all about not disappointing the people that follow your work.

Then the fun ends, if it gets that far.

I dunno how many of the people here have been on both ends of this situation, but I've been there. Which is why I prefer to be gentle when it comes to critiques, no matter how many 'hurr durr have a thicker skin' comments I see.

As for an actual reply:

People are not so much criticising Decu's writing technique as they're criticising his decision to spend significant time and attention on Midori's emotional state.
And that is not an objective matter of technical quality, but you're free to think Midori isn't worth the time, or to think detailing a character's feelings so extensively in general isn't worth the time. As long as you acknowledge that not everyone agrees with you on that, there's no problem.

I'm not sure how to feel about Midori's introspection, but neither do I think it is an objective flaw.

The problem is, this quest format is directly centered around pleasing the audience. Guess how far this quest would've went if Decu ignored all the votes and just railroaded it all away? No, it's not just about pleasing everyone that gets you down. It's about pleasing majorities with completely polar opinions that ends interactive stories, and so far we didn't really have that, only to minor numbers. It may get worse over time, oh yes, and speeding up the pace just might avoid it completely. Might.

I'm criticizing the pacing, it's just that I currently cannot find an example that does not include Midori in some way because we were at this green-arc for months.
I dislike all the introspection, and it may affect the pacing, but it isn't my argument. There are many ways to speed up the writing process and the writing itself without sacrificing much, if any quality at all. But for that we might need a closer look into Decu's writing process.

I'd tell you to lurk more, but the fact is that you're most likely going to be spoonfed.
Spoonfeeding makes you more susceptible to being told what to do in the future, and makes you into a person who, rather ask other people for info rather than make an effort yourself.

Ok, then what's an example of constructive criticism? "The pacing is too slow" sounds like valid constructive criticism to me.

Otherwise, it's starting to sound like criticizing anything for its flaws = presenting opinion as fact and therefore SJW.

Example: "Midori's internal monologuing is padded out" = either objective criticism (which can't exist because muh art) or subjective opinion (and therefore SJW)

You would've replied then. You agree wholeheartedly, after all. Even despite the leaps and bounds that the both of you have made in terms of your progress as a couple - it feels like the universe itself is conspiring to rip your relationship apart in the most horrific way possible, even going so far as to line up event after catastrophic event to do so. Bombarding the both of you with emergency after emergency, disaster after disaster. Each one proving more horrible than the last.

As if you didn't have enough to worry about already. As if neither of you truly deserved even a moment to yourselves, or at least something more than just one night.

But you don't. With you slowly coming down from that exhaustingly-draining high that your cathartic nervous breakdown had set you afloat on - you start to wonder if you didn't pre-empt yourself here. A traitorous little thought worming its way from the depths of your brain, reminding you that this isn't exactly the place to be complacent. To be so trusting. To be so painfully naive that you'd automatically trust someone with your sempai's face - simply because they bothered to match her haircut.

Newsflash, Miracle Midori - literally everyone who wants to kill your sempai right now has looks like her. They don't even have to do much to get her haircut, either! I

So instead of elaborating on what you felt about the universe continuing to squat over you and your sempai's attempts at having a normal relationship, you instead sniff loudly and nod, hoping that your companion would mistake your silence for emotionally-drained speechlessness rather than anything else.

And it seems to work, with the raven-haired girl beside you reaching over to place her hand on top of yours, before giving it a squeeze. Seemingly completely unaware that you've surreptitiously manifested your Soul Gem in your other hand, the bauble and its tell-tale glow blocked from sight with your own body.

Stupid, you inwardly berate yourself. You should've checked first before going into theatrics like that. Literally the first thing you should've done upon seeing her. But no, you just had to break down like that, didn't you? You just couldn't wait to celebrate finding her, when you could've held on for a few moments longer instead. Especially with someone who acts so differently than the one you know. Instead, you just hugged her and broke down and accepted her as your sempai, all without proof.

Now you have to do this. Now you have to find out if she's on the level, hoping to hell that you won't get the result you're dreading.

Because it would be just the shit cherry on the shit ice cream sundae if the girl you were all but blubbering all over earlier was someone you actually needed to kill to get your real sempai back.

But anyway. With your Soul Gem in hand, you gather what little composure you have left, and try to figure out just where your sempai is again. Forcing that small ray of light to appear again, hoping against hope that all it would do was to point int the direction of the girl quietly sitting beside you, still holding your other hand like it's the most natural thing in the world.

Please, you find yourself inwardly pleading, not just at your own Soul Gem but towards the girl sitting beside you. Just....please. Please turn out to be sempai.

Please.

The thin crimson beam shines from your Soul Gem, pulsing in time with your heart beat --

--before it quickly and decisively points towards the same girl holding your hand.

Nearly making you collapse for the second time in the overwhelming relief of it all. The smile from earlier returning to your face, at the same time the tension that had locked your muscles in a panicked clinch began to bleed away.

Constructive criticism also includes the merits of the thing it is criticising, so that these merits can be exemplified, further advanced, and pointed out to the benefit of the writer. Unless you can point out the good and the bad in equal or at least amounts that do not equal zero, then what you are doing isn't constructive, just cherrypicking flaws to point out to everyone.

What anon was doing was pointing out something that he doesn't like and suggesting ways to correct that under the guise of constructive criticism, which is not what it was.

It's also here, though, that your sempai - your verified 100% genuine sempai - turns to look at you. You immediately perk up at this, now fully prepared to enjoy your stolen bit of personal time with her - when the slightly-disappointed tone in her voice makes your heart freeze inside your chest.

"...I know I'm acting differently than what you're used to, and I should really have expected as much, considering that we're in some place where you can't just take things for granted, but..." She shakes her head, a small smile curling her lips. "...Well, a part of me was hoping that you'd be able to tell right away that I was for real, Midori. Even without checking our attunement."

She...she knew? That's...but how? You made sure she didn't see--

"Let's just say I was really looking out for it, okay?" Chiaki laughs again, in her disarmingly-clear and completely-unforced giggle. "I was going to point it out, but you were just so tense that I thought you'd snap in two if I did. So I just let you do it." She shrugs. "But it's really me, Midori. Even if I'm talking without years of alcohol and nicotine damage to my vocal chords making me sound like a blender pureeing gravel and buttermilk. Even without all the scars, I'm still me."

But...why, then? If she's the real Chiaki, then why the drastic changes...?

The raven-haired girl that is your sempai looks at you, before shrugging again. "We're going to be here all day trying to straighten it out, but let's just say the decisions I've been making have been...complicating things. Something about...dead timelines suddenly having parallel, alternative ones that are still dead, but can hop over the other ones. It's all..." She puffs out her cheeks and gesticulates with her hands. "Just one giant big pile of tangled shit that even the Incubators won't be able to figure out. Really. I'm not even going to bother."

She sees the confusion in your face, and she shakes her head. "The...the closest thing to an explanation I can probably give is that I'm...well, I'm not the Chiaki you know, but for all intents and purposes right now, I am Chiaki. Kind of like the armored fragment back there," She gestures to the door behind the both of you, where you encountered three fragments of your sempai's psyche. "She's from what we call an alternate timeline. Kind of a different flavor of the dead ones. ...But you see where I'm getting at, here?"

You nod. Sort...sort of, yes. So she's an alternate version of Chiaki, just like the armored fragment. But...if that's the case, then where IS your sempai? Where is the original?

"Right now? Well, you're looking right at her. I don't...yeah, I don't get it either, but apparently I'm standing in for the both of us. ...Me and your original sempai, that is." Chiaki smiles at you, rather awkwardly. "I believe it's only a temporary setup, though - the moment I touch that awful thing you brought along with you is the moment I vanish back into the ether, with the sempai you know and love coming back in one piece."

A-ah. Well, that's a relief, but...

Wait. She's vanishing?! But that means--

"It means I'm given one opportunity to do what I need to do." Chiaki says firmly, but gently. "Don't worry about me, I doubt I'll even remember all this myself. But right now, I'm just thankful that I'm given this shot to do what needs to be done, before it's too late."

The American Callidus clearly trying her best not to look at your direction, furiously puffing away at a cigarette, with spent and discarded filters littering the ground by her feet. ...She's far enough that you're not worried if she's eavesdropping or not, but you couldn't help noticing how she seemed to quickly look back at you a split second before you turned away.

"Anyway, enough about the doom and gloom for the moment. Talk to me, Midori." Your sempai lets out a sigh. "And forgive me for bringing this up, because I know that this is going to be really hard to talk about, considering just where we are and what you've just been through. But...well, are you having second thoughts?"

You blink at her. Second thoughts about...what?

"About us."

That's fair, though you and I seem to be running under different definitions of "constructive criticism". I, personally, would say that constructive criticism is any statement made with the clear intention of improving the criticized work--this includes both what you described and what the other anon was doing (cherry-picking flaws).

I figure, pointing out the perceived flaws in something is valid critique since doing so helps draw attention to potential issues in the work, even if the critic does not also point out things that are done well.

Phew, been reading only the archive and finally caught a live thread now!

Now, am I the only one who felt a Triss and Yennefer sort of vibes from Midori and Wendy? The points described in the recent Extra Credits episode at least. Midori is gentler, and overall is the better one for Chiaki's life (disregarding the whole Green Is Danger thing), but Wendy simply works and complements her better although like Mami said, she's quite a bad influence for her. Putting it back to the Extra Credits' question, I wonder what does each girls says about Chiaki. Maybe even throw Pinky and Harem choice in there too (so destructive that only a saint could love her and too greedy for her own good?).

>>42625204
Indeed, but my point is that the two were resurrected by Pinky, so they have a connection to her, and so far, neither of the two have shown signs of being dangerous because of that. Of course, I agree that that possibility may exists, but so far we don´t have proof, so the option to kill Midori because she "can" be dangerous, considering all the positive things she represents in the life of Chiaki, looks like a dumb decision to me. Wich is my point in this disscussion with you

"No." You say flatly, directly. No second thoughts. None whatsoever. A complete and utter lacking of any second-guessing whenever you and your sempai is concerned.

What the hell kind of question is that?! You're in the nightmarish hellscape created by your sempai's broken psyche and her becoming a witch and God knows what else, and your relationship with her is being put into question? You, being asked if you have second thoughts about the person you've saved from a literal and figurative hell twice, and survived to actually confess your feelings to AND become an actual, official couple with? WHY?

"I told you it's going to be really hard to talk about, and I did say sorry in advance," Your sempai winces. "But anyway, I wanted to ask because...well, you do know what happened, right? With me getting the wings, and the cocktail dress, and everything else?"

You nod. You heard enough about it from Wendy and Kyuubey, sure. She turned into some kind of boogeyman - a fanservicey cocktail madam kind of boogeyman - for the Incubators, and a fanservicey cocktail madam kind of Satan for Magical Girls. Either way, it's not something that's going to be doing anyone - especially your sempai - any good, and dumped on top of the Golden Weapons and Pinky...

...Nnh. It's never really enough, is it? when is it going to end? When is the universe just going to let up with making your sempai suffer?

"Well, they always say that being a Magical Girl IS suffering." Your sempai notes drily. "But anyway, the reason I asked is that...well, I'm trying to give you an out. And no, it's not just me saying it - both of us are saying it. Me, and the Chiaki you know and love. We're giving you a chance to walk away."

Your eyes go wide here. W-what? Is...is your sempai breaking up with you? Here? NOW?!

"N-no! No!" The raven-haired girl shakes her head. "I mean, not as such, no! We're just, we know you've done so much for us and we love you for it--" The moment she says this is the moment where her cheeks burn a complete shade of red. "--but, because of recent events, we also believe it's only fair to give you a chance to just...cut loose, and not have to deal with things. Because it's only going to get worse from here. ...A lot worse. So...yeah."

Well. It seems that your sempai - and her current representative - is trying to give you a way out of the relationship. Despite everything you've done and everything you've been through together, they apparently think that you're actually looking for a way to call it quits.

How do you react?

Wendy takes it up the ass more, because it's her best feature, and her expression is usually annoying to look at, so doing her from behind is best.

Midori does more boobjobs, because bigger boobs, and she's more expressive so it's hot to look down at her with a d stuck between those melons of hers.

Midori's ass is large and thick. It's very high quality. Not very firm. Instead, your fingers sink in whenever you grab a handful due to the abundance of assflesh. Very soft.

Wendy's ass is large and toned. When you reach out to grab it, your fingers will have a hard time finding purchase in it's smooth, almost porcelain molding. It's the kind of ass you can slap and watch while it jiggles nicely. Smooth and almost silky to the touch. Her ass is moderately toned, but it pales in comparison to Sayaka's butt.

Both frequently take it up the butt.

The thing in the other girl shoulder is identical as the thing Homura has in her magical dress. The original name for this picture was "Tea in space", and was posted when QB informed Chiaki after her transformation into Satan that Mami went to the Moon to ask for info to help Chiaki. I asked Decu in ask.fm if that girl is this timeline Homu, and he answered no. Then, I asked if she is Hazuki Amane, and he responded with his characteristic "Hahaha!".

You stare into your sempai's - your Chiaki's - blushing face, and cup her rosy cheeks with both hands. The unexpected contact making the younger, less rough-around-the-edges version of your sempai blink and blush even more. Her eyes widening behind her glasses as she stares up at you. She opens her mouth to say something--

--but what comes out is a panicked screech of pain as you suddenly start subjecting her to the tried-and-tested schoolyard torture method known as Funny Face - grasping a healthy amount of cheek between thumb and forefinger, and then pulling both cheeks in opposite directions.

"FUNNY FACE!" You shout as you continue to inflict this upon your sempai, the raven-haired girl wriggling and squirming in futility to get herself free. "EVERYONE, LOOK AT HER FUNNY FACE!" You twist around to show your handiwork to Wendy. "WENDY! LOOK AT HER FUNNY FACE! LOOK AT IT AND LAUGH!"

"OWW! M-Midori...!" Your sempai wails, clearly distressed, obviously caught completely by surprise by this kind of treament. "Come on! Lemme go, this isn't funny!"

You keep up the torture for a few more moments before finally let her go - and when you do it's with your hand smacking the back of her head, not nowhere near hard enough to hurt but definitely enough to make your displeasure felt. Chiaki stumbles forward at the soft impact, before whirling to look at you, looking quite pissed - that is, until she sees just how pissed YOU are.

"IDIOT! SEMPAI, YOU STUPID FUH...FUCKING IDIOT!" You shriek at her, loud enough for your voice to nearly eclipse the far-off explosions of the ongoing siege. "You're giving ME a way out? It's only FAIR? You're only thinking about MY INTERESTS, IS THAT IT?"

Chiaki's eyes go wide here, and you see her swallow painfully before nodding. "T-that's right...! We...we're just looking out for you--"

"No." You hiss at her, tears springing to your eyes, tears you angrily wipe away with a sleeve. "No, sempai. You don't have the right to tell me that. Not anymore. Not after everything we've been through. Not after I made my own decision - twice - to get you out of places that no one else would have gone into for you."

"But--"

"I don't NEED PROTECTING!" You spread your arms wide. "Sempai, please! I know you've really tried your best to prevent me from being in any kind of dangerous situation - and I do appreciate it, really - but I'm a Magical Girl, just like you! I know how to react to danger! I know enough how to get in and out of hostile areas! I know how to slit someone's throat, dump the body and leave like nothing ever happened! AND BACK THEN, I KNEW how to get into a room secured by one of the most dangerous Magical Girls ever to be contracted, so dangerous that Kharn the Betrayer gave her the name Murderface!"

"..." Chiaki goes silent here, and you take this as her capitulation. Allowing yourself a deep, calming breath, before continuing - in a quieter, but no less firmer tone of voice.

"Stop treating me like I'm made of glass, sempai." You murmur, with as much conviction as you could muster. "Whatever it is, no matter how dangerous it is, I want us to deal with it together. I'm not leaving you just because it's dangerous - otherwise, I would've left long ago."

Silence. And then...

"That's...that's the thing." Your sempai replies. "We can't. I...she has to do this alone. Otherwise, it's not going to work, and a lot more people will suffer because of it." She shakes her head mournfully. "A lot more people will die because of it."

Your sempai lets out a sigh. "We should've killed Tomoe Mami when we had the chance."

W-what? Tomoe...Mami?

How do you react?

While Mami can see it happening while altering her weapon to explode Homu's head off. It might not be a perma-kill, but it would hurt like a bitch and probably incapacitating too. Homu can't alter her own gun, not as easily anyway.

There have been fuck tons of hints that there's something off with Mami since the very first handful of threads. The biggest one I believe was during the Kirika mess, but people still chose to trust her. Decu has been hinting left right and center that she was going to be trouble in some fashion. People went nope.jpg, let's trust the mumi, 'cause boobs.

Now people seem to be surprised in a not-sarcastic way.

Why do I come here again?

That she was reasonable in the past does not mean she is reasonable now and merely putting up an act. Hell, most psychopaths are reasonable in their own heads and think all their actions are perfectly justified.

It was more because using our shadowruns to inspire a character who has an absolute faith in the Mumis to take Shadowrun-type precautions about her might have been a bit meta-gamey. Especially when the Mumis haven't done much to the character to inspire shadowruns.

I did not get that particular impression out of that particular thread. I just got the impression that Mami is still Mami, only with a huge dollop of manipulative talent added on top, and also being actively targeted by Pinky. Since that thread and now, she could have given in to the GW temptation... which seems likely seeing as she, unlike Kharn, didn't give hers up for experimentation once Kharn's popped up.

Throwing it away does not mean that Pinky would have stopped making it pop up, especially since Madoka had been quite fond of Mami... and that would likely translate itself in a weird way to Pinky, much like it did when it comes to Homu/Chiaki.

Unless I'm mistaken, the whole, 'trust the Mami' thing was more or less started by anons in the first place, since early on, it looked like Decu was still doing a bit of fleshing out to the relationships between characters, particularly Chiaki and everyone else.

Chiaki could have easily been the one person that looked at Mami and how she relates to everyone else, and be suspicious, openly or otherwise.

But meh, we'll see I suppose.

W-what? Miss Mami? Your eyes go wide at this revelation, the indignant fury borne from your sempai's unthinking, selfish...selflessness going cold at this. What...what about her? What's her role in all of this?

Chiaki shakes her head. "I'm...I can't be specific, as I have no idea how it'll play out in this timeline, but from what I know she will cause the deaths of everyone we - or rather, your sempai - holds dear. Not to mention indirectly killing off quite a large chunk of the world's Magical Girl population as well as its normal, mundane folk, but I thought it's best to emphasize the bit about everyone important to us dying. You know, to get the point across much more efficiently." She pauses here, as if remembering something. "Oh, and I suppose she kills us too, even at the apex of our ascension as featherboa grandma. so there's that."

You shake your head. No. No, that's not good enough. You need more to go on. You need more details, not more of this cryptic bullshit!

"I'm not being cryptic! I'm telling you what I know and remember! I can't be cryptic if there isn't enough information to be cryptic about, jeez!" Chiaki shoots back, clearly irritated. You make to move towards her, your hands outstretched, and she recoils - both hands on her cheeks. "And no amount of Funny Face torture is going to get anything more out of me, so don't even try it!"

Nngh. You stop in your tracks, forcing yourself to calm down. ...But there has to be more! Otherwise you can't warn Chiaki, and you can't stop all of that...that nonsense from happening!

And to think you were so taken with Mami! Up to now you've never even thought of a single horrible thought towards her - she'd always been this sort of mother figure to everyone in the Ninth, a relationship that could not be more exemplified by her and your sempai! It was one of the reasons why you didn't feel THAT jealous whenever Chiaki raved on about the blonde or her pancakes - you knew that no matter what, Mami would never get romantically involved with Chiaki, because they were that close, that...intimate with each other that hooking up would be tantamount to something unspeakable, like...like incest. Yeah.

Then again, you did feel a bit weirded out about how everyone and their mother seemed to adore her so much, about how everyone you encountered seemed to have nothing but a positive word for the blonde, their admiration for her coming off in waves. Certainly no one was that nice, or that amazing to have been able to get everyone on their side. There'd always be one person that they'd inevitably piss off, a vocal dissenter - but in Mami's case, even someone like your sempai couldn't even bring herself to get made at the blonde even after some dubious decisions she made in the past.

Nngh. You glance back at your sempai, who seems to be disconsolately rubbing her cheeks, or more specifically the spots where you pinched them. Is there really nothing else? Nothing else she can tell you about Mami?

Your sempai shakes her head. "Nothing else. Well...other than the fact that you're in the best spot to stop it from having the kind of...horrific consecquences that it's going to have. Meaning, you can reduce the body count of what she's going to do pretty significantly."

Oh. W-well, that's good, then! That's even better! What is it that you have to do to make this a reality, then?

"..." Your sempai looks back at Wendy, then back at you. Reluctance in their voice, but easily overcome by what seems like duty. Still, she makes a face as she tells you. "It...it's why I - or we - also asked you about...well, letting go. Leaving us. Letting us - her - face it all alone."

...So, wait. She's saying that to stop all those deaths from happening, all you have to do is to abandon your sempai? Is that it? Are you some...some sort of accomplice to Mami, like a sleeper agent?!

The raven-haired girl quickly shakes her head. "N-no, not really. I don't really get where the sleeper agent thing comes from, honestly. But...it's sort of like that, yes. Mami's betrayal - whenever and whatever it will be - won't hurt as much if she sees that we're--she's--all alone. That we don't have anyone else on our side but ourselves." She lets out a sigh, her eyes downcast.

"I know it sounds bad, and it is. But consider the alternative - all our friends, everyone we care about, everyone ends up dead. And once that happens, it's pretty much a guarantee that we go off the deep end." She places a fingergun's barrel to her temple. "In comparison, if it's just us, we're resourceful enough to keep on the run long enough to find a solution to all of this ourselves, pull it off, and save the world and everyone in it."

That's...surely it can't come to just that, that's stupid...! And you already gave your answer earlier, you're not budging from it! Leaving your sempai alone to take on everything solo...that's unthinkable!

"I know you won't." Chiaki smiles weakly. "Just...well, if you really love us - if you really love her - then you know why you have to do this. Why you can't give her a reason to stay, or try something stupid like...taking you with her."

How do you respond?

That might be true for the Homura's that are attacking the Nameless One, but this Chiaki is from an alternate set of timelines with a Chiaki Matsuda and Officio's. Same with the Armored Fragment. Right now we're dealing with alternate timelines that are related to our timeline, so we're not that divergent.

>Even still, 'let's kill Tomoe Mami on a half-remembered hunch from an alternate universes' is a really stupid plan
Yes, I agree with that. I just don't agree with the statement that >We're wildly fucking divergent to start what with the Officio system, the damaged Shield, QB not being 100% dick, etc.
We should use the knowledge that in the other Chiaki Matsuda timelines, Mami betrayed Chiaki in some way, to figure out why Mami betrayed Chiaki, and to prevent the conditions that lead up to that result.
Having Mami as an ally is too great of a positive not to work towards.

Maybe.

Or, what if we have Midori talk to Mami, get her to help out with Chiaki's condition? Make Mami think that instead of Chiaki going rogue and she needs to be put down before she goes Full Homucifer, Mami can control Chiaki?

The Journal Entry about Mami did make the implication that if we can get Mami to think we're her pawn instead of an obstacle, she's far more willing to work with us.

Of course, this has to wait until Mami comes back from the Moon. Though maybe we should try to get in contact with her now, to try to lay down the groundwork since waiting could be too late.

And what if we won't have that chance? She's away right now, she's an (ex)-Warmaster, so it's safe to assume that she has some degree of contacts even when she's on a fucking moon. She was sent to the Moon to help cover for us.
QB said that everyone involved would be purged, so Mami would also be eliminated as a loose end.
And even if Mami thought that turning us in would save her, QB already said that the First and the other Officios would execute him and every single Magical Girl under his command regardless.
Based on what we've seen of Mami, I think that she wouldn't throw away an entire Officio she indirectly controls if she can help it.

If she doesn't go for it and still betrays Chiaki, then things go according to how they were predicted.
If she does, then we can avoid losing so many Magical Girls.
And all we have to do, is let Chiaki act like Murderface/Girl A/Chiaki Matsuda: a rough and unlikable girl who immediately turns into a loyal and obedient daughter-surrogate that will do anything Mami asks, desperate for Mommy Mami's approval.

What...what about Wendy, then? Is she telling her to stay away, too?

Your sempai glances back at the American Callidus, before nodding. "Sort...sort of. I told her that I needed to talk to the both of you seperately, just so things don't get muddled up. She just asked me for a pack of cigarettes and then told me to go easy on you. ...I think she has an inkling of what I'm going to say, anyway."

She turns back to you. "But yes, you do understand what I'm saying, right, Midori? For this to work, I need to have zero distractions. Zero ties to anyone else important to me. I need to be able to move without...without worrying about anyone else, without caring for someone else's safety." She shakes her head. "Don't misunderstand, being with you...I can honestly say that it's one of the few times I can actually remember being happy. But I need to go back to who I was in order to get things done. Cutties ties with everyone seems cold, but it's the only way--"

"No."

You cut her off with a refusal again. Did she just imply that everyone - everyone that your sempai had started caring for, and had cared for her in return - is something that she needs to get rid of in order to succeed? Something weighing her down and immobilizing her, which will then spell her inevitable failure and doom for everyone else? Is that what she's implying?

"No, I was--" Your sempai tries, but you're having none of it. Cutting her off again, telling her in no uncertain terms that everyone that Chiaki had grown close to and had grown close to her had done nothing but ensure her success and safety up to this point. Without Misaka, without Sayaka, without Kyoko - your sempai wouldn't even be here to tell you this kind of garbage to your face. And not to toot your own trombone here, but if it hadn't been for you, your sempai would still be languishing in some nightmare in Siberia!

"Of course, but that was before we turned into something we weren't supposed to turn into," Your sempai insists. "This is a completely new playing field, and if we don't plan things right, we could end up losing everything - including the game board. So we need to--"

No, you interrupt her once more, the act gaining you a look of pure irritation from the usually-smiling raven-haired girl. Demon or Goddess or whatever the hell your sempai turned into, you're not going to abandon her. NO matter how dangerous it is, you'll get through it together.

See? You can be stubborn like that, too.

"You're not LISTENING, are you?" It's here that a trace of your old sempai comes to the fore, even complete with the voice at the edge of snarling. "I NEED to go solo. This isn't another feel-good squad where everyone pitches in and does their parts, Midori. This is what needs to be done when the chips are down. Our feelings - or what we have - doesn't even figure into it. It never did."

You glare at each other here, a contest of stubborn wills locked in a stalemate - before you suddenly think of something that seems like it has the potential to upset it.

You pitch the idea to Chiaki, who seems to blink in confusion at it, before slowly nodding. "What, just actually pretending that I'm isolated, while we keep in contact in secret? That's...hnh. If Mami into that, sure, I can see it's working. But we have to make sure that I'm convinced as well, at least until we know that Mami's taken the bait." She frowns here, clearly deep in thought. "Going solo with an outside support network than that, that's...actually pretty good. Maybe it CAN work, but..."

Your sempai turns back to you. "Of course, if you're actually okay with supporting me from afar, which, let's face it, is no way to manage a relationship."

How do you react?

[]Sure. If you think it can work, I'm all for it. I'll endure anything.

Let's just keep in mind that this is going to have to hurt to work. Chiaki's going to wake up and 'not remember' being with us, just like what happened to Wendy. She'll probably need to pick a new secretary and kick us out.
We'll need to 'try' to make her remember, because just giving up would be suspicious. We probably won't need to try very hard to cry and despair when she has to shut us down. We probably won't be able to do too much communication even through discreet means.

If Midori doesn't tell Chiaki about the possibility of alternatives, she'll ignore all other possibilities.
She's still a Homura, she will still become blind to everything except the obvious problem and solution in front of her.

How embarrassing, and yet predictable, would it be for Chiaki, who fooled all those Homura's attacking the Tower, to fall into the same mental trap and end up thinking that she has to fight Mami when there was another way.

I think it'll be too late by then. We need to make her consider the possibility that Mami could be made into an ally, that maybe the Nameless One isn't in the Tower, before she's already committed/is halfway up the Tower and lost hundreds of Homura's.

That's an alternative, yes, but it's not what the Chiaki's are considering right now.
We HAVE to make the Chiaki's see that there are other, better plans that can be worked on rather than just waiting for the betrayal from Mami.
This is that Homura tunnel vision I mentioned in >>42631985

No, my alternative is to reinforce the image of a Chiaki that is completely and utterly loyal to Mami, who will do anything and everything that Mommy Mami asks her too, just for the slightest chance at her approval.
Reinforce to Mami that Chiaki is still a useful pawn and can be controlled, so that she considers betrayal to be unnecessary and wasteful.

The point is to make Midori tell Chiaki she needs to consider alternatives; right now the only course of action that Chiaki is considering is to leave the Officio. We need to make her see that there are alternatives.

It's also the option that has the most synergy with the other alternative, of acting as if the memory wipe worked.

All the of the personalities in this timeline adored Mami, from the first Girl A that was found in Charlotte's Barrier.
Even the most recent Chiaki Matsuda, that just had her memory wiped and woke up in Thread 1, still idolized Mami.
So acting like Chiaki can be controlled by Mami without effort would be very believable, and would help in getting more time for other preparations.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 09/22/15(Tue)10:36:19 No.42663936 Archived

You shrug at your sempai. Sure, you tell her. If she thinks it's even a feasible idea at this point - if she thinks it'll work - then you'll do it, whatever it is or how painful it seems.

You've been through hell to get her back, after all.

You've DIED trying to get her back.

Compared to that, how much more will having a long-distance relationship sting, anyway?

The younger, less-scarred version of your sempai looks at you quietly for a moment, before shaking her head and then doing something that pretty much reminds you that she IS the person you love, just a bit different: namely walking forward to bury her face in your chest, both her arms wrapping tightly around you in a hug. You squeak in surprise about this, your own cheeks reddening at the unexpected, but not unwelcome contact.

"...Sorry." She murmurs, pulling away from your gasp after what seems like a painfully-short eternity, looking properly chastised. "I don't know why I keep forgetting. You're...you're the last person I should even think about asking if you're willing to sacrifice something to make this relationship work."

You shake your head a moment later. It's...it's okay, you murmur in reply, your own breath taken away at the gesture. That brief moment of physical contact painfully making you realize that it's been a while since you actually managed to hug your sempai, or vice-versa.

Sure, she'd always be awkward about it, often freezing in your grasp for a second or two, still clearly getting used to the idea of such displays of affection - but she'd always melt in your grasp a few seconds later, the tension slowly bleeding out from her frame.

You just...you just miss her so much.

But it's okay. After this - after all three of you get back from this awful place - the first order of business is going to be making up for lost time with your sempai. Every single moment that she's been away from you - you're going to make up for it.

And you're never going to let her go ever again.

>>42663936

But yeah. It's alright if she forgot. You're not the sort to bandy what you did about, and your sempai often has more than just your relationship on her mind. As long as she doesn't forget about you or what you're willing to go through for her, then you're happy.

"I don't really know what I did to deserve you, Midori, but whatever it is, I'm glad I did it." Your sempai says, managing to look up at you now, smiling. "I don't think I've ever had someone love me - or care about me me the same way you do." She clasps one of your hand between hers and gives it a heartfelt squeeze. "...Thank you. I don't say that much, do I?"

You blush crimson again, before shaking your head. It's not like you needed that kind of thing, even though it'd be nice. Your sempai never really was much of a talker, but you've always felt her gratitude in other ways.

"Well, maybe when this is all over I'll remind her to be just a bit more appreciative." She grins. "...Anyway, um. I know you just said so, but I just want to really make sure you're okay - not because I don't think you can handle it, but because I want to know if you're sure about this or not. I don't really know when Mami'll go through with whatever she's planning, or if she'll even get around to it - but if you have any second thoughts or even other ideas about what we can do to counter it, then now's the time to say it" She shakes her head. "After all, you're going to be the one doing most of the legwork again, since I don't think I'll be able to remember anything that took place here when we get back."

...Oh. Hnnh. It's never that simple, is it?

"Never is when you're a chronic amnesiac." She taps her temple with a finger ruefully.

How do you respond?

[]Agree with the idea as it is now. You can always just fine-tune it after bringing your sempai up to speed back in the real world.

There's two alternatives: act as if she underwent another explosive amnesia episode, and she can be controlled, or work to convince Mami that Chiaki is still easily controlled and worth keeping.

Both can be done as well.
We need information on what leads Mami to the betrayal and stopping that. Killing Mami will just make the entire situation worse not better.

In addition, this Young Chiaki knows that when the betrayal hits, she loses everyone she loves, right?
Does she know how that happens?
Like, say, Sayaka Witching Out because Chiaki killed Mami for her treachery, leading to a schism in the Ninth, causing Kyouko to go full Blood Knight, and all of the Officios uniting against Chiaki and her followers?
The exact scenario we're trying to avoid?

You know the two Meguca that Wendy probably killed when it was unnecessary?
If Midori and Wendy go rogue, that's just two Meguca with no support structure and while Bing hunted by the Ninth.
Kind of a dumb idea, to rely on a support network that only consists of two and is being hunted themselves.

That's really the plan you're endorsing?

The Church and Siberia aren't safe. The Church is the first place anyone would look, and it's a full-on cult with human sacrifices and everything.

Siberia belongs to the Ninth already. And Kharn's not going to agree with turning on Mami.

Other Officios are the only possible source of refuge.

Do they have to go rogue though? If the bodies can be covered up somehow, then there shouldn't be any problem with staying. The whole going rogue thing would also kinda screw up the "support Chiaki somehow" thing, and would most likely end up with them dead. If the 10th can hunt down Midori within days of her official reneging to the 9th and she only survived because of the protection she got there, then the 9th shouldn't really have many problems.

What's more, it would start a full on meguca war, because Midori is imported from the 10th and Wendy on loan from the Church. It would be really super dumb to start that sort of a conflict now.

It's also obvious enough that Midori should see it coming, since she's not an idiot.

Not to mention, it puts us straight on the road to having Chiaki sitting on an uncomfortable throne while Kyouko comes after her, followed by a Deep Strike from the First.

i'm not the one suggesting that Midori and Wendy hightail it out of the 9th as soon as they can and run for help elsewhere. I mean, if a former russian spy and a scientologist leader shoot a couple of dudes inside the Pentagon, it's unlikely that anyone's going to say "Yeah cool, they were clearly working alone" The 9th would be pretty much forced to mobilise against the 10th, the Church and whoever houses the pair if they try to run.

I mean, they were ready to mobilise when a team was killed whilst planning to kidnap Mami, and in this case two girls were killed.

You...well, you have to be honest. Making a long-distance relationship work is another thing, you don't have an issue with that, but...does she really have to go solo? Does she really have to cut herself off from everyone just to do what she's supposed to do? There should be something else, right? Something that doesn't involve her taking on such a burden all on her own?

Because while it's going to be hard on you for sure, it's going to be all sorts of impossible for her. Working alone like that, against pretty much the entire Magical Girl world - how can she even consider something like that as feasible?

"Well, that's why I'm asking." Your sempai replies after a while. "There's nothing else I can think of at the moment that'll work the same way as going solo will, especially when it's...Mami I'm going up against."

She makes a face here. "Don't misunderstand, I hate the idea as much as you do, and I know that despite everything else I've said it kinda makes me sound like the dildoes currently killing themselves trying to infiltrate a building-shaped bomb." She jerks a thumb back at the tower being laid siege to in the horizon. "But it's the only way I can think about that doesn't involve everyone we care about getting crapped on, too. So if you've got a better idea than that, then I'm all ears, Midori."

Hnh. Well...you do have a few ideas of your own, so...

What plan do you suggest in lieu of Chiaki going rogue? Something that isn't as crazy and suicidal as that?

If all of them did so and it turns out that she is actually planning something nefarious, it puts us the uncomfortable position of having told our enemy all of our plans.

It's not like the only two options are "Mami is secretly evil " or "There was a communications failure", but a failure to communicate we can deal with by foiling her plans, which conveniently also stops her if she's evil. Trying to talk it out is only going to work if there's a failure to communicate, which given what we know, is probably less than 50% likely.

Given that going straight to plan kill-Mami is going to result in very similar results to Chiaki wandering out of the silent room in full wing-and-cocktail-dress getup anyway, we may as well at least ATTEMPT an alternate solution, keeping "plan murder-the-Mumi" as a backup.
If it turns out she's plotting something anyway, then there's not many other options. But if she isn't, then killing her because 'an alternate timeline version of her was totally a dick' is a really incredibly dumb plan.

There's something that puzzles you about this entire thing. Namely, the reason why Tomoe Mami would betray your sempai, especially when she's in this kind of delicate state. For what purpose would someone like Tomoe Mami ever resort to betrayal? From what you've seen and heard, it was only Tomoe Mami who really stuck it out for your sempai in her early days, when everyone was just about ready to call it quits with her. She was the only one who furiously lobbied for your sempai - then only known as the sullen, stoic Girl A - to be included into the ranks of the Ninth, when even Kharn was contemplating execution.

You know about this because Mami herself told you, in one of the many talks over tea that you had while briefly serving as her assistant. ...It was also then that she very nearly let slip her secret for your sempai's pancakes, a secret that she promised to share soon enough. With everything that's been happening, however, you're not sure if you're ever going to know.

Nnnh. But anyway. The alternative you have in mind - something you're pretty sure could work a whole lot better than going solo - is basically trying to get on Mami's good side. Like, on her really good side. Give her no reason whatsoever to think that your sempai is even worth the thought of betraying - because whatever she has planned, whatever she's after, she can be sure that your sempai will hop to it with a song and a smile.

"..." The younger, less nicotine-addicted version of your sempai blinks at you, before frowning. "Midori, are you serious? Let me get this straight, you're asking me to make myself even more of a lapdog to Tomoe Mami, just so I don't have to worry about her stabbing me in the back eventually? Am I getting you clear, here?"

Well, in...in so many words, yes. That's exactly what you think is the best course of action right now. ...Although, now that you're hearing it said back to you, it does sound kind of...off, doesn't it?

Well, in...in so many words, yes. That's exactly what you think is the best course of action right now. ...Although, now that you're hearing it said back to you, it...does sound kind of off, doesn't it?

You shake your head here, before trying again. Maybe...maybe not exactly doing it that way, but more of...well, just not giving Mami a reason to act against your sempai in that kind of manner, that's all. More than that, even getting Mami to take your sempai's side, to get her as a real ally rather than just someone acting on false pretenses.

Your sempai crosses her arms over her chest, still clearly unimpressed with your idea with how much she's frowning. When she speaks, however, uncertainty and hesitation taints her words, as if your bringing up the idea has dinged her brittle resolve some.

"I...I don't really know, Midori." She begins. "I mean, with everything else that's happened, is that going to work? It's..." She shakes her head. "It's not like I haven't been like that with her this entire time, right? Even with what happened, I always thought that Mami would be someone I could trust. Someone I could easily count on, like you. But this..."

Chiaki looks up at you, and it's here that you realize just how hard it is for her to even talk of something like this.

How much it hurts for her to even consider the idea that the one person in her life that had once formed her entire support network - when all she had left was an unreliable memory - was even capable of something so heinous, so underhanded as betrayal.

"But...if you think that's the best way to go about things, then we'll go with that." Your bespectacled sempai says after a long, pregnant silence, the words followed with a heavy sigh and a rather tired-looking smile. "Maybe it really is time for me to start trusting other people a bit more, than just letting my paranoia get away from me."

It seems that your sempai is going with your alternative, despite her obvious misgivings in the entire matter. She still sounds like she's convinced that going solo is the only way, but she's placing her complete and utter trust in you.

How do you react?

[]Maybe we should hold off making a decision until we really know what's going on with Mami.
[]Take your idea back, going solo might be better, even if it's going to be harder.

[]Try to comfort her, make it easier for her to accept her decision. It's not easy going against your own instinct, but this'll be better for everyone in the long run.

Remember people, this is not PMMM Mami, this MGNQ Mami, who took quite a few levels in badass among other things. So there's probably more here than meets the eye. For all we know, Mami herself might be played by someone, or she's the evil mastermind of her own scheme. The thing is, it's implied that Mami betrays Chiaki 'for the greater good' or some such, which means that it probably won't matter what Chiaki does or will do. Odds are that something convinces her that Chiaki is the enemy, because let's face it, anons were already going in a direction that Mami favored, and stupid decisions aside, they'd have kept going in that direction. So yeah, the way Chiaki acts is less important than figuring out wtf is going on here.

Is Hydra/Prime/whoeverthefuckitwasthatfuckedKharnbeforeWPN responsible? Is it someone else? If it's Mami, do you really think how Chiaki acts will matter at all?

Yeah but it's a core part of her character, and still seems to be in this universe, that she puts others before herself since her wish. Given that her powers are the same, her wish was likely the same as well. This means she's just as likely to not want to be selfish which means that killing someone who may endanger any others is still in character for her. Given Faust is still technically the Blessed Lady, killing her won't exactly make everything peachy, which could turn Mami against us.

>"...Sleeper agents are usually the common tactic when dealing with high-risk, high-import targets." The ghost begins. "It should need not be mentioned that Callidus are the perfect choice in this matter. While there are many schools of thought on how to actually go about creating one, the premise usually follows as such: a fresh contract, on the track to a Callidus classification, is intercepted before she receives basic training."

>"Are you ready to fulfill your main objective, Hanegawa Midori?"

>"You underestimate the dedication of those who placed you on the game board, Hanegawa Midori. They play the long game, just as we do. Just as Malal tried to and failed."

>"Sleeper agents are...I think they're horribly unfair." The ghost murmurs as you step closer to it, its eyes going wide. "N-not just to the target, but also to the agent itself. They spend all this time being with the target, becoming their friend, companion, e-even lover...a-and then they're expected to carry out their duty after hearing a particular command phrase? It presumes that, even with the weight of hypnotic suggestion, that the agent will just magically ignore their feelings towards the target, forsake their morals and convictions and belief...and for what? To follow the order of a superior who had the sadistic need to turn them into mindless, murdering robots with no free will of their own?"

>"Are you...are you really going to fulfill your main objective, Hanegawa Midori-san?"

>+ I. TRUSTED. YOU. +

I mean it never explicitly stated that Midori was, in fact, the sleeper agent, it just implied it. The way it's phrased makes it seem to be a Callidus who is the sleeper, but the only suggestion to Midori being a sleeper is the phrase about her being placed on the board, which really could just mean her being brought into the mess. The fact that one of the ghosts cried in gratitude when Midori states her objetive as saving Chiaki implies more choice than a sleeper agent might have.

Based on the information we have this is unlikely though. Mami has been kept close to QB since she contracted since he genuinely likes her. He would therefore not be the one to make her an agent, and nobody else has really had a chance.

It hasn't actually been foreshadowed at all - it was said that Mami was untrustworthy and that she would stab us in the back, but also because that was who she is, not because she's a sleeper agent. It's not even that it's too paranoid, it just doesn't match the information we've been given.

>> ☐ Anonymous 09/22/15(Tue)15:14:31 No.42667878

Annoyingly, if not Mami, than the closest one to Chiaki - and the one who has ALWAYS been close to her in every timeline - is Kyoubro. Most likely sleeper agent right there. Her ability to withstand Culexus proximity and ability to pulse may just be side-effects of manipulation by Malal.

It doesn't really seem too likely that any of the pmmm carryover characters is the sleeper agent. None of them shows any sign of possible callidus potential beyond Mami, who Kyuubey liked too much from the point he contracted her to manipulate her like that

>That all changed when you established a contract with Mami Tomoe.

>If you knew how to laugh at all, you probably would have.

>An Incubator caring for a contractee. The very thought itself was hilarious, and borderline heretical.

Each of them also has a role in terms of the metaplot (the blood knight etc.) so making one of them into the agent is also makes the characterisation a little busy. It makes the most sense for it to be either Wendy or Midori, and of those two, Wendy has been more vulnerable to outside forces whose interests don't currently align with ours.

You push away your own dark mood to work up a smile and pull your sempai closer to you, in an attempt to make her feel better about the decision she just made. It's...it'll be alright, you tell her. You know it's not easy for anyone to go against their own instinct - much more when it's someone as set in her ways as your sempai - but you feel that this is the best thing to do, with the information you have right now. It'll be better for everyone involved in the long run.

"I...yeah. That's right." Chiaki swallows hard, before nodding. "Sorry. Please don't think it's because I don't trust you or anything, it's just..." She looks at you before shaking her head. "All this time I've been wracking my brain for just how to deal with Mami when the time comes, and it always felt like just going it alone would be the best thing to do all around." She lets out a sigh, before managing a smile of her own. "But...yeah. Your plan does sound better, Midori. If we could just convince her that everything's okay, that I'm not going to destroy the world or anything like that...then maybe we have a shot at keeping everyone safe until this whole thing blows over."

It's here, then, that she gently - and regretfully - pulls away from you, the raven-haired girl standing up to pat her school uniform down. "...Well, since we've made our decision, I think we should probably leave as soon as possible. But let me talk to Wendy first - I promised her we'd have a talk of our own, one on one, after our own little chat." She turns to look at you, eyes bright. "You don't mind, do you?"

O-oh? Well...aright, then. And no, you don't mind at all. Sure, you can wait for a while longer. Is she going to tell Wendy about the plan to win Mami over?

Your sempai nods. "I know she's been spending a lot of time with Mami recently, so she'll probably going to be our biggest asset there." She pauses here, a smirk curling her lips before she continues. "I know she's not all that hot with the prospect of fighting Mami either, so I'm hoping that'll be enough motivation for her to share whatever she knows that can help us."

That makes sense, yes. You have an inkling yourself that the American Callidus has the biggest crush on Mami - hell, you even admitted your suspicions to her back then, after visiting her in her apartment. But yeah, you hope Wendy'll come along for the ride, even though she hadn't done or said anything otherwise. In fact, she was the one who wanted to volunteer going in the Akashic Realm alone, and look what happened.

Anyway, you let your sempai go, to have her private conversation with Wendy. Leaning back against the bench's backrest, allowing yourself to take a breather for your own. You feel like you deserve it, after everything else that had happened. After all, there's only just the exit to make, and everything will be okay, right...?

Well, of course, there's still the mess back at the Silent Room - or rather, outside of it - that you'll have to deal with immediately after you make the jump out of this hellhole. But even that seems so far away, something you can't find yourself worrying about right now even though the fallout from that would most likely really hurt.

Oh, that's right. Because you're weak-willed and a coward.
Actually, you're such a screwup that you'd fail to kill yourself even with a pound of C4 and a Desert Eagle with a full magazine, wouldn't you. So why even try, right?

You let out a sigh, before turning subtly in your seat, to glance towards the direction where your sempai ran off to. Finding her easily at the far corner of the vantage point, talking in front of a rather bashful-looking Wendy, the American Callidus leaning against the wall behind her, both hands crossed underneath her chest. Nodding every now and then at your sempai's words, which at this distance is reduced to an unintelligible murmur.

...Nothing you can't eavesdrop on with just a bit of Callidus trickery, of course, if you decide to listen in. And it's...honestly a bit tempting, what with Wendy seemingly shrinking into her scarf, trying to hide her furiously-blushing cheeks while Chiaki continues to talk, all the while smiling that disarming smile of hers from earlier.

What do you do?

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 10/03/15(Sat)12:50:21 No.42867562 Archived

You decide not to eavesdrop on your sempai and her ex. Sure, you're no stranger to indulging that nasty little green-eyed monster in the back of your mind when the American Callidus is concerned, but after everything that's happened so far... Well, all you want to do really is finish things up over here so you can just crawl back to your room, with your sempai in tow, cocoon yourself and her inside a comforter and just sleep.

Sleep for as long as you possibly can. Sleep forever. Sleep until this entire thing blows over, so you won't have to deal with anything else. Sleep for long enough that when you finally wake up - with her in your arms - you can actually have a normal relationship for once. One that doesn't involve multidimensional eldritch exes and hypercompetent blonde psychopaths.

But it doesn't work that way. It won't work that way. You still have to get back, and you're not looking forward to having to deal with...well, the inevitable shitstorm you'll be landing smack dab in the middle in when you do finally return ot the real world. You're pretty sure you just broke every single rule in the Ninth's rulebook trying to rescue your sempai - and you'll be lucky enough to spend your entire life inside a Silent Room after what you did.

...It's not like you care all that much, anyway, whatever they decide to you.

You were trying to save her. There was no other way. If Kyuubey still decides to screw you over because of that, well...it's on him. You had a good run, and you'll say goodbye to your sempai with a smile.

...

Well, okay, no, you'd probably break down there and then. You're not that strong.

But still. Your sempai's safe, and she will be until the next time Fate decides to fling her into another woodchipper.

You just hope that somebody else would care enough about her to get her out again when you're not there to do it.

>> ☐ Deculture 10/03/15(Sat)12:51:51 No.42867576

>>42867562

You look back at your sempai and her ex. From their body language it seems the conversation has taken a tense turn, with your sempai gesticulating and shaking her head a lot more while Wendy's deliberately looking at anything else other than your sempai. You frown here, and wonder if you should get up over there and try to intercede - but a break in the tension, with Wendy finally letting out a sigh before slowly nodding, resulting in the younger version of Chiaki to punch her fist playfully in the air - convinces you otherwise.

"Midorin! Midorin, she said yes!" Your sempai shouts excitedly as she runs back towards you, all smiles, maximum energy, a sight you thought you'd only see in your wildest imaginings. "It took a bit of arguing, but she finally said yes!"

What? Yes to what? You say as you stand up from the bench, smiling at her and then at Wendy following close behind.

"To a threesome!"

Oh! That's good! You were getting worried there for a second, and--

WHAT?

"...She's fucking with you." Wendy replies after a few seconds of forcing your sempai to shut up via a rather cruel-looking headlock and a gloved fist being ground into her scalp. Your sempai's protests ending up muffled against the side of her ample chest. "Just talked my head off about us trying to get along a bit more, because apparently at one point in the future we try to kill each other for real."

Really? You blink at her, then at your struggling, squirming sempai.

"Mnnghf!" Your sempai shouts, or at least tries to, one hand coming up to frantically pat Wendy's arm in the universally-accepted sign of 'I give'.

"Yeah. Really." Wendy intones, ignoring your sempai's submission. "I said yes, but she wanted me to promise. Wouldn't stop talking unless I promised.

...Huh. Well, that's...good, you suppose. Anything to stop the both of you killing each other at some indeterminate point in the future is good, isn't it?

>> ☐ Deculture 10/03/15(Sat)12:53:03 No.42867588

>>42867576

"...Yeah." The American says again, before finally letting your sempai go. The uniformed girl gasping for breath as she manages to break away.

You have a sneaking suspicion that it's something else more than that, but you'll just have to ask her about it later. ...It won't be the first time your sempai's kept something from you, that's for sure.

"A-anyway! Let's get out of here before the dildo brigade finds out we're here!" Your sempai pipes up, jerking a thumb towards the skyscraper in the distance. "Midorin, just give me the Desert Eagle and we'll all get back into the real world, quick as a shot! I'll..." A shadow briefly flickers across her features. "...I'll try to remember as much as I can about what we talked about now, but if I don't, just...feel free to smack me around until I do, okay?" She smiles at you apologetically, and you couldn't help but grin at that.

Well, maybe not smack around. You'll just try to get her back up to speed as gently and as quickly as you can, so the plan you agreed on has the best chance of working.

Your sempai smiles. "Well, that's the best I can hope for, I suppose." She holds out her hand to you. "Anyway, the Desert Eagle, if you please, Midorin?"

Oh, right. Sure. You take the gun out of your inventory, making sure to grab it by its holster. The weight of the oversized firearm making you grunt at the effort.

Just as you make to hand it over, however--

+ SHE'S HERE SHE'S HERE SHE'S HERE +

The panicked psychic cry stabs into your mind like a rusty knife, hot and painful - just as you see a seemingly-insignificant split-second flash of golden light at the corner of your eye.

+ SHE'S HERE SHE'S HERE SHE'S NOT SUPPOSED TO EVEN KNOW YOU'RE IN HERE +

The world slows down to a crawl, with your sempai still smiling, still waiting for you to hand over the Desert Eagle. Seemingly completely oblivious of what was about to happen.

Your heart pounding hard against your chest - your blood roaring in your ears - you realize you only have mere moments to react.

What do you do?

[]Shout a warning, before diving behind cover.
[]Tackle your sempai to the ground as fast and as hard as you can.

No time to say sorry beforehand, or even to make sure the both of you land without hurting yourselves - you simply force your tired, weary body to move, in order to get your sempai out of mortal danger in the quickest and most direct way possible. At the same time pulse a hurried warning to your fellow Callidus.

Your desperate shoulder tackle catches the smaller, younger version of your sempai completely and utterly by surprise, her frame easily swept off the ground by your momentum - and you wrap your arms around her, covering her with your body as the both of you unceremoniously crash into the hard-packed dirt. Nearly the same moment - barely a split-second later after you land- you feel the earth-shaking thud of something huge and heavy smashing into the ground mere feet away from where you landed in a heap, before exploding in the next. Showering the both of you with clods of earth and bits of rock.

"What--" Your sempai shrieks, struggling to get out from underneath you but you pin her there and continue shielding her with your body as similar impacts begin to pound the earth around you. You squeeze your eyes shut, gritting your teeth to keep yourself from screaming, desperately praying to any god who will listen to make it stop, whoever or whatever it was who was doing the shooting. Raging at how...how FUCKING unfair it is, for this to drop on you now, with you literally away from getting your sempai back home safely.

It never ends, does it?

Can't the universe just give you and your sempai a chance at a normal life together?

...

After what seems like an age - one that you spent white-knuckled, tense and shivering as you braced for that crushing, killing impact that would see you dead, a fate you'd have accepted if it meant being able to shield your sempai from such pain - the bombardment stops.

[1/2]

It takes you another age to regain what little composure you have left and open your eyes. Immediately closing them again, having opened them to a stinging, tear-inducing dust cloud. You open them again a few moments later, still holding on to your sempai, looking around the now crater-infested landscape. To check on Wendy, as well as to try and figure out who - or what - did this.

The answer to your first question is...a limp, unconscious silhouette in the far corner.

The second is answered for you, with another silhouette striding from the dust cloud.

A confident silhouette, tall and proud, holding an elegantly-bareled rifle in each hand.

And one of them - despite being completely identical to the other - is pure, blinding gold.

And when she finally comes into full view - close enough for you to see her face - you feel your blood in your veins freeze as you realize what you are truly looking at.

Death. This is how you die.

This is how everything you fought tooth and nail for slips out of your hands, like so much sand.

"Midori-san." Tomoe Mami's voice is as warm and as kind as you've ever heard it - but underneath, you also hear the edge of steel, a forced calm that is as heartbreaking to hear as it is terrifying to behold.

The sound of a hero - a true hero - girding herself to do something she doesn't want to do, but has to for the greater good.

"I'm sorry."

No preamble. No megalomanic speech. No rambling, manic gloating.

Just an apology, before one of the rifles - the golden one - is leveled at you.

"Please move aside and let me kill Chiaki, Midori-san."

...

How do you react?

Though perhaps we should ask her if she wants to also kill all the others out there too? Cuz, there's plenty of Homu to go around right now, Midori just wants hers to stay alive, Mami can get as many of the others as she wants.

Nope, I still find my suspension of disbelief being stretched. I suppose it could be possible, but, wasn't Mami in a meeting with someone from the First or something when we started all this? Plus... I doubt maintaining those ribbons over large distances comes with no magic cost... considering the time involved, and the distances involves, which are much more than what happened in Rebellion, Mami should be either running on empty, or had to have used one or more GS already and I doubt she has access to an unlimited amount.

No matter how you look at it, this is a bit farfetched, and I doubt Pinky would send someone as tough as Mami against Chiaki this soon.

You say that like Mami's entire powerset doesn't guzzle magical energy like a whore. And considering her influence in the 9th, I don't doubt she has enough pull for some grief seeds.

Also, there's the chance that QB would have installed an alert logger for the Vault to tell him every time it's accessed, and Mami might have been told of the danger that Chiaki poses while on the Moon, and this was a predictable situation.

It was either that or have another goddamn failure on their hands, like every single previous timeline and Girl A/Murderface before she'd get another memory wipe.

From how many partners we got killed, it's pretty obvious that without Timestop, Murderface was pretty shit as a Magical Girl, and barely worth keeping around.
Would you let any one of those previous fuckups use a Golden Weapon, let alone take the only ones you have out to fight against people that aren't complete pushovers?

Fuck, even as the mildly competent Chiaki Matsuda personality and wielding the best Golden Weapon most suited for our use, we still needed backup from Kyouko and Tiny Pete to take down Kilgore.
Kilgore! A fucking mundane, using a Golden Weapon he had no synchronicity with!
And Murderface is supposed to fight against actual Magical Girls that have experience and competence with their Golden Weapons, who can cancel out Timestop?

All things considered, I think that's the best plan that Malal and QB could have implemented, given what they were working with.

really I would like nothing better than for midori and mami to be yelling at each other, weeping, only for it to be interrupted by 20 Homus hammering Midori from a sudden attack helicopter. and one of them would be loudly yelling the Ride of Valkyries theme. they would just play it over the sound system but that got damaged on the last attempted roof assault.

That might work if we assume that Mami is not a crazy person.

Logic doesn't work so well with crazy people, or with people who have enough of an ego that enables them to power through the most well-constructed arguments.

It's funny. You should be scared right now. You should be rendered speechless and motionless at the mere sight of Tomoe Mami leveling a weapon at you - a Golden Weapon, no less - with clear murder in her eyes and absolutely no hesitation in her heart. You should even be feeling that heavy, choking pressure that you've felt around Kharn, as well as your sempai - the sensation of feeling someone's pure, focused killing intent wash over you.

Instead, you feel nothing. Nothing but a cold, calm fury that you've never felt before. Not clouding your mind and perception like the usual stripe of anger does - but clearing it, focusing it, making you see just how ridiculous this situation is. How absolutely, hilariously unfair this situation has become.

"Midori-san." Mami says again, quieter this time, but no less firm. No less adamant. "Please. Move aside."

You look up at her, returning her steely glare - before tightening your grip on Chiaki. Pulling your younger, still-shellshocked sempai closer to you, shielding her with your body.

"...Why?" You ask the blonde Vindicare instead. Letting that one word - laced with your own accusatory condemnation - hang in the air between the both of you, in lieu of all the questions you desperately want to scream at her. In lieu of all the insults and the venom and the hate that you want to spit at her, not only for her bare-faced treachery but her hypocrisy, the latter exemplified by the godforsaken golden weapon she's aiming at you right now.

"WHY?"

Silence, before she lowers the rifle, its gaping mouth no longer aimed to spit death at you but still drawing your gaze to it, like a cobra about to strike but slithering away momentarily. You tear your eyes away from it to look back up at Mami, and you manage to see the hint of regret there as she finally replies.

"...Because I must."

Each time the memory wipes happened, the Murderface at the time was basically useless or would have gone rogue with a Golden Weapon.

Trying to keep those previous Murderfaces going would have just ended in failure, or a full-blown Witch Out.
Those memory wipes were necessary because Murderface was absolutely shit.

Then, she blurs, out of focus, and it's here that you feel something smash into your side, with enough force to send you flying - your suddenly-nerveless arms falling slack at the moment of impact, made to relinquish your grip on your sempai. The world tumbles around you in a sickening, bruising spin, before something cracks against the back of your head, turning the colors red and wet and hot, just like the pain blossoming inside your skull.

No--sempai--

You close your eyes when you finally land, hard enough that you hear the crucnh of your own impact before your weary, tired body actually registers the pain. And when it does, you hear yourself scream. Screaming - and cursing. Just like your sempai would.

As you open your eyes - a bloody film briefly covering your vision, blinked away in the migraine-bright light being reflected from the Golden Weapon in the blonde traitor's grasp - it's here that you feel something ensnaring you. Something long and pliant wrapping around your limbs, around your body, cinching tight and constricting. You try to struggle against it, to extract yourself from its embrace before it could completely wrap around you - but you're too slow, too stunned to do so. Only a few heartbeats and you're rendered completely immobile, and as you look down you realize just what had done it.

Ribbon. Yellow ribbon.

The kind that Mami was now pulling free from Wendy's unconscious form, from somewhere underneath her scarf.

Beside you - also immobilized in the same fashion, albeit in an almost halfhearted way, with her wrists tied behind her back - is your sempai. Still stunned to the point of helplessness, unable to move, unable to move or react with the same bloody-minded viciousness like your actual sempai would be doing right about now.

"Malal wasn't the only one who dreamed of things, you know." You hear Mami murmur, less to you and more to herself. "I did, too. Of things so horrible I thought I was...I was going crazy at first." She picks up something from the ground - the holstered Desert Eagle - before shaking her head and placing it in her inventory. "And I knew I had to do something. No matter what I felt about it, or what others may feel about me - I had to do something about it, something that only I could do. Something that I was uniquely placed and prepped to, even before this entire mess started."

She stands up, smiling wistfully at the torn yellow ribbon in her hand before letting it drift away in the wind.

"Sempai...sempai trusted you." You spit at her, struggling against your bonds again, trying to worry your arms free, or at least get them together. "She never wanted any of this. She just...nngh...she just wanted to do what was right. But people kept hiding things away from her and then THIS happened." There's a tiny bit of give, just enough for you to think you could do it if you keep her distracted enough.

"She's....sempai's not a bad person, Mami. You know this. It hasn't changed. She's still Chiaki. No one else - nothing else."

"I know." Comes the whispered reply. "I know, Midori."

There's a click as she stands in front of your stunned sempai, before leveling the golden rifle at her once more.

"It's why I have to do it now. Before she changes."

No. No, no, no, no...!

It can't end like this! It can't...! NO!

Once we have Chiaki back, either Mami flips out and goes rogue (in which case that significantly reduces the chance of a multi-officio beatdown on Chiaki) or realises that her visions are just as fallible as Malal's.

We did have things thought out for them, though.

I mean, we were told about the attunement of Midori's Soul Gem being able to calm down the Armored Fragment, and that's what we used to make her calm enough that Midori could hug her and have her calm down enough to recognize the other Fragments we had with us as allies rather than enemies.

As for Kharn, we did use our knowledge to analyze the situation and tell Kharn the exact things that would make her stop.

So, they were more thought out than on-the-spot emotion-driven actions that you make them out to have been.

In the Siberia Barrier, every now and then people would scream to summon Tiny Pete, and every one else would tell them how stupid they were to summon him when the Ribbon Homu was still on the loose.

And look! By talking down Pinky, the Armored Fragment, and Kharn, instead of summoning Tiny Pete to fight them, we got them all as allies instead of losing them in a fight.

They were the actions that had the highest chance of success, because the alternatives were to fight it out when we had a big fight looming on the horizon, we couldn't actually kill the Armored Fragment because that would fuck up everything and make recovery impossible, and fighting Kharn would have meant that we would have been in even worse shape to fight Ribbon-Homu.

You can...you can reach the teleport beacon. It'll take some doing, and you need a bit more time for it to take, but...you can do it. You just need to keep her occupied until you do, something you're not sure you could pull off. Not against someone as determined as her. As completely convinced of what she was doing as her.

Still, you have to try. Otherwise--

"MAMI-SAN!" You scream at her, just as you see her finger tighten on the trigger. "Right now - right now you think you have everything figured out, don't you? Right now you think you have an idea of what's going on and what's going to happen, right?!"

Silence, but the miniscule tensing of her already stiff shoulders tells you you've struck a nerve, and you take that as a cue to press on. Throwing all caution to the wind, just to delay her for a few moments longer.

"But you're wrong!" Just a bit farther, just a bit more... "You don't even have the faintest fucking idea! None!" That gets her attention, her head turning the slightest bit to look at you. "You're just another chesspiece thrown on the board - just like Miss Kharn! JUST LIKE MISS MALAL!"

Click. You let out an involuntary sigh of relief as you finally manage to bring your hands together, your numb fingers finding the screen of the bulky teleport beacon and depressing it. Even without seeing its screen, you know that it's already working its magic - already you can taste the developing ozone-scent of teleportation, even in this unnatural air. Now it's only a few more seconds until--

"What did you do?" Mami turns away from your catatonic sempai, glaring daggers at you. Piercing you to the core. "Midori-san, what in the world did you--"

Her words are lost as a clap of thunder - immediately followed by an explosion of white, caustic light - erupts mere feet away from you, forcing you to avert your eyes, and for Mami to shield hers.

Immediately you feel and hear something immeasurably heavy slam into the ground, and you can't help but smile - even through the pain - at the sound of servo joints whirring and snarling into life.

At the sound of having bought yourself - and your sempai - just a bit more time.

[TELEPORTATION COMPLETE] The giant from within the resultant dust cloud from the violent teleportation intones. The crimson eyeslits of its tusked, elephantine helm burning hellfire as it strides forward, the skulls impaled on its spiked shoulder racks clattering with every step.

"..." And again, Mami is completely silent at this, meeting the new combatant with nothing short of saintly patience. No curses, no remarks of grudging admiration - just a simple shake of her head, a disappointed glance at you, before levelling the golden rifle at your sempai's huge, hulking robot friend.

She pulls the trigger, and the sight that followed - the deafening, horrifying violence of it - is something that you'll never forget for the rest of your life.

What spits from the golden rifle's barrel isn't just some sort of extra-powerful round that could blast out people's insides if they so much as get caught in the recoil - but a thick, searing beam of pure, roiling unlight.

It's what smashes against Tiny Pete's breastplate, that dented, scarred hull of steel and ceramite that had withstood more than enough firepower to start and end wars. It's what punches through that very same breastplate, then ripping through the other layers of subdermal armor underneath, and then tearing through the machinery within.

It's what cores the Terminator right through, boring a hole through the once-invincible iron giant that had served as your sempai's comrade for as long as you knew it.

All of the Homu's are trying to kill the Nameless One, and Chiaki is the last remaining one. That's been hammered home by Malal and Godoka multiple times. This is the last chance left.

What is the point you're trying to make?
That the Homura's will fire on everything, killing Mami, Midori, Wendy, and Chiaki?
Just as likely as them trying to concentrate fire on Chiaki, since the Nameless One is their target, and ignoring Mami until one of them can get some RPG's.

Or is it that Mami and the Homura's wouldn't work together because they wouldn't try to talk with each other before trying to kill Chiaki?
They wouldn't verbally, but they still have the same objective, so even if they didn't coordinate with each other, they would both be still going after the same thing and not necessarily competing against each other.

But they'd start raining down RPG's and whatever weapons they have on our position, and we're still tied up. A distraction is no good if the distraction is throwing high explosives at us and we can't escape.

Then again, it might be remote assistance since nobody except Midorin and Wendy are supposed to be in the Silent Room as the plan goes

No.
The agreement with the Fourth was for operational and combat data.
No location data, no visual data, no audio data.

Though since he has an AI core, it's debatable if we can get another one, since the Fourth is the one that built it and as a prototype, they may have to machine one from scratch.

Putting it in the chest does make engineering sense, since it's the most heavily armored part of the Ironform.
While the head is harder to hit, it's also much more fragile.

Though on the other hand, the chest is where the pilot goes, and if I remember correctly the scale means that their head doesn't enter the helmet

True, the head is much more fragile, but assuming that the head is where the sensor suite most likely is, the whole unit is out of action if the head is gone regardless of where the core is.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 10/12/15(Mon)10:21:51 No.43033083 Archived

You are a Magical Girl, and you are about to be murdered by a golden-haired traitor.

A traitor that - and it needs to be said here - had played everyone, most of all your sempai, like a goddamn fiddle. To the point where no one - not even you - suspected her of anything other than the most steadfast loyalty, the most motherly of concern.

You'll admit here and now - moments before your death - that you've always been jealous of her. More than your sempai's rough sibling-like closeness with Kyoko, or her grudging camaraderie with Sayaka - even more than her sometimes distressing obsession with trying to get Wendy to like her again - you've always been envious of how Tomoe Mami seemed to always be the sun that your sempai's entire universe revolved around on.

It wasn't love, not the kind you were blessed enough to share with your grumbling, chainsmoking sempai. It was a different kind, one devoid of lust or romance or even the barest hint of infatuation.

It was a love that would have her go on a murder spree to avenge Tomoe Mami's honor. A love that would see your sempai consigning the world to flames if it meant protecting Tomoe Mami from harm.

It was adoration. Pure, focused, unconditional, untainted adoration. Not exactly obsession nor worship, but carrying the unhealthy zealousness of both.

>> ☐ Deculture 10/12/15(Mon)10:22:24 No.43033091

>>43033083

Your sempai adored Tomoe Mami to the point that her true self - the one that warned you about her treachery - was rendered immobile at the simple shock of her warning actually coming true. Unable to even so much as defend you - or herself - from the golden-haired traitor that had just blown an unstoppable metal juggernaut away with a simple pull of a trigger.

"Sempai," You beg the catatonic girl sitting slack on her knees, her eyes glazed over with shock. "Sempai, snap out of it. Please. You need to get up, get yourself out of here, please--"

Pain, hot and sharp, steals your breath - and words - away as the ribbons cinch tighter around you. Making you grit your teeth as you force yourself not to scream, not to give her the satisfaction of hearing you suffer.

"...For what it's worth, I never wanted for things to get this out of hand." You hear Mami say through the absolute agony of slowly, torturously being crushed to death. Her voice still cold, still dead, despite the clear hesitation in her words. "I was supposed to...take care of things long before it got to this point."

Through the pain, you hear Mami clear the breech of her massive golden rifle - and you blearily see her toss what appears to be a darkened soul gem over her shoulder, the spent bauble exploding to dust the moment it touched the ground. With mounting horror, you watch as she takes another soul gem - a sparkling green one, this time - from somewhere behind her and load it into her rifle with a heavy snap.

"But I didn't. Every time I was told to end things, I always held out the hope that she'd change. That she'd stay clear of the path she was destined to be on."

A sigh escapes her lips. The sigh of the massively-bereaved, the sigh of someone with the world's weight on their shoulders.

"But I'm not basing this just on dreams, Midori-san, if you're worried about that. Nor am I just relying on the prognostication of mind-addled Culexus. I've been doing some research of my own."

Your bonds slacken just the slightest bit - giving you a reprieve from the pain - and it's here that you see something behind Mami. A familiar demon in a Magical Girl costume, her pink hair tied into twintails, her sunless eyes as black as a shark's, her bloody lips peeled back in a razortooth grin.

She winks at you, giggling soundlessly, before pressing a crimson-smeared finger to her pursed lips.

"A massive anomaly in the time-space continuum." Mami continues to speak, seemingly not aware of the abomination behind her. "Timelines jumping left and right, stopping and starting, some of them branching off and invading the others. Some even fragmenting into multiple timelines, and even smashing into each other. Chaos. And then...suddenly, everything ends."

She points towards the catatonic fragment of your sempai.

"And it's all her fault."

No! You furiously shake your head, and make to scream - until one of the ribbons esnaring you snap up to stretch across your mouth, gagging you. You shriek into the taut fabric, your words ending up muffled, undecipherable.

"You have no idea how this feels, Midori-san." The blonde shakes her head as she looks down at you. "Knowing that one day, without warning - everything will be reset, with no one the wiser. Everyone losing their memories, of what they've been through, of the people they've loved and loved them in return...I had to do something.

"Seeing what comes next...I couldn't afford to stand idly by anymore."

You make to struggle again, to continue squirming against your bonds in futility - but you stop as you suddenly realize that they've been growing slack ever since Pinky appeared. You look at her again, and she continues to signal you to stay quiet.

"I tried, you have to understand that." Mami turns to you, her eyes sincere, the coldness in her voice suddenly giving way to needy desperation. "My first choice of action was to go for a non-violent means to stop the anomaly from happening to this timeline. I thought if I could only get Chiaki-san off the path she was headed, she'd change her mind and be the person she wanted to be, rather than what she was meant to be. A hero. ...My hero."

She shakes her head. "I gave her everything I could give her, and what I couldn't I forced the world to. Fame. Fortune. Becoming someone important, being someone who everyone looked up to. Good friends. Good food. Love. Companionship."

Mami smiles here, brokenly. "I even summoned a Witch right in my very apartment, so she could rescue me. So she could feel how it is to be a hero, instead of the villain the universe wanted her to be."

You glare at her while trying to keep absolutely still. The ribbons have loosened to the point that you could get up and slap her if you wanted to - but you don't. Not yet. Not while she still has that golden rifle trained at you.

And besides, Pinky seems to be waiting for something, too...

"But no. Even after everything, she still turned into...into THAT." Mami's face hardened. "You saw her, Midori. What she turned into. That...that THING with the dreadful wings. The thing that's going to kill us all. And I made my decision then - I wasn't going to wait for things to improve anymore. I was going to have to be proactive about it."

She looks at Chiaki, before finally swivelling her golden musket to aim squarely at your sempai's head. "I know what you're thinking, Midori-san. I know how much you despise me right now - that I'm no better than a traitor, and should be executed for such. And you're...you're completely right."

Her voice shakes for a moment. "But I'll live with that. I'll live with the sin of betrayal. I'll even take Miss Valnikov's title. But if you think for one moment that I didn't try to save her - if I didn't try everything I could think of doing first - then you're sadly mistaken. But that's alright - I'm used to not being understood."

Your heart pounding in your ears, thudding against your chest as adrenalin begins to pump through your veins - you clench your teeth as the moment you've been waiting for presents itself. The moment where Mami's attention is fully focused on something else - that being your motionless, helpless sempai. Her finger tightening on the trigger, her entire body tensing for that one final act of betrayal.

"I'm sorry, Chiaki-san. I tried, I really did." Tears begin to make their way down the blonde's face. "But this...this has to be done. I'm sorry. I hope you'll forgive me in time, but...it's alright if you don't."

Mami fires her Golden Weapon --

-- and the migraine-bright beam hits nothing as you crash headlong into the blonde. You feel something in your left shoulder crack as the both of you land hard on the hard-packed ground, cursing and clawing at each other.

No time to think. Just enough time to react.

Let up for one moment and she'll kill you right here and now.

What do you do?

There are three things that really bother me:
1- How Mami teleported? The First lend her one of their teleporters? If that is the case, this lend us to the second question:
2- Why lend her a teleporter for "personal use"? How much has Mami told them about what is happening? And so, our last question:
3- Is the First aware of what is happening? If so, how much does it knows? Because them knowing too much means that Mami is the last of our problems, considering that they are going to declare Chiaki Traitoris Extremis and all the Officios are coming to buttfuck us and our Officio

The memory encapsulation and throwing it into someone's mind takes an instant, as was seen with Kyouko and with sending the memories to the Golden Weapon spirits.

>>43033281
We could have told Mami when she appeared right now, instead of panicking and getting Tiny Pete killed. Now things are an even worse mess.
And by sending memories through a psychic package, they're considered to be very reliable to be true, enough that Kyouko and Yuu believed Midori's story.

Pinky can't read minds, we've seen that. So we push the information into Mami's mind along with the threat of Pinky being right here so she doesn't spill about Godoka.

Yeah, it's possible.
But hitting Mami with a psychic punch loaded with memories is still a good way to slow her down.
If she was already aware of the purpose of the Golden Weapons and that Pinky said that Chiaki's current form gives her a better chance at the final fight, then we still knocked her mentally back enough for us to do something else.

And if she wasn't aware, then it's a chance to show Mami that she shouldn't be listening to the Golden Weapons or to the Blessed Lady.

We need her alive so we can convince everyone that she's a traitorous, unhinged psychopath with a gun that shoots souls, and who intentionally summoned a witch.

Someone said that we can restore him from backups, but I really don't see that.
We would need a compatible computer system to house his machine spirit, which we are unlikely to have, and even if we did, we don't even have an AI core that he could be restored to.
I'm pretty sure that Tiny Pete has gone the way of Mirai; a supporting character that you could have saved, but then did something really stupid that got them killed and removed from the story.

They just want to get railroaded into what Decu has planned.
Otherwise, why would they always pick one of the offered rails/choices, instead of a write-in?

And frequently the bad will outweight the good for bad options.
We've already been told that this entire arc was accelerated and made worse by the choice of handing over our Soul Gem, even if it made the Ahriman fight a cake walk.

Well, most of the time write-ins take some time to plan out and write into a coherent post. Even if the write-in is a very good idea, the other pre-written options will get a lot of votes unless the write-in anon was correct in predicting the path the last vote would take and can post the write-in early.

Also, we're on an arc that has been exhausting and agonizingly long for some people. Their main objective may be to get past this as quickly as possible. HAPPENINGS are great, but at this point it's been nothing but HAPPENINGS for maybe a few months straight. We're on a boat ride that never ends made of HAPPENINGS on planet Namek which there are things HAPPENINGS and there are five minutes until it HAPPENS.

It's simply pure player laziness, because you can still change your vote until voting closes.
This doesn't excuse any anon from picking a pre-written choice and then walking away.

Getting past this arc as quickly as possible is also the way to fuck this up the most and get well-liked characters killed.
If they can't handle it, then they should do what others have done and leave until the arc is over.

Midori seems needy so I believe that she would try and rely on Pete or Pinky once she is in a corner (she did the same thing during MidoriQuest 1). I also voted for the pulsing thing without believing in it, simply because I thought Midori would.

She relied on the others in Siberia because she's an infiltration and information specialist in a hostile environment going up against combat-oriented enemies. Of fucking course she'd choose to rely on melee heavy-hitters when she's told she needs to not only find, but also subdue and capture alive, a bruiser that can shrug off the tranq darts she has and she's limited in the magic she can expend.

She doesn't rely on Eversors and Vindicares because she's needy, she relies on them because she's a squishy Callidus and it's the smart thing to do.
It's like calling a crypto-analyst needy for having a pair of infantry escort him into enemy territory.

The most dangerous place to fight a Callidus is on the ground. You've heard that a lot of times during training, sometimes said seriously, sometimes with a knowing smirk on the speaker's face and a smarmy waggling.

But it's true. Of all the ranks - with the exception of the ever-unpredictable, ever enigmatic Culexus - only the Callidus is trained to fight this up close. Eversors are trained for unarmed and melee combat, sure, but they're the most deadly with enough space to move, to kick, to punch, to slash. A Vindicare is trained to cut and stab and slash with a combat knife, but only in desperation, and even then very rarely.

A Callidus is trained, from day one, to be at her deadliest at full body contact, where things such as trigger discipline and martial art forms get thrown out the window, replaced by nothing more than reflex and instinct and nerves. Whether it's how to best embrace someone in order to conceal the knife in your hand that you'll be stabbing into their back - or to grapple with a golden weapon-wielding Vindicare in order to stop her from shooting you AND to steal something from her Inventory - you were trained for it.

It's also one of the few things you're actually good at.

Thankfully, the latter is exactly what you're trying to do, except the Vindicare in this situation is someone who's not only wielding a golden weapon, but also clearly and horribly strong on the physical side.

Even with your experience with leverage and holds and joint locks, you still find yourself barely managing to maintain control of the situation, with Mami almost nearly throwing you off with sheer brute force. But you hang on, using all your strength to do so, a strength aided by both the adrenalin coursing in your veins and the fear gnawing at your core.

Cursing your name, your rank and your heritage - Mami summons a rifle, white and gleaming, from somewhere inside her left sleeve, her fingers curling around the barrel. You smash your elbow into her left wrist, numbing it temporarily and making her drop the weapon - giving you enough time to kick it away, just as you continue pinning the golden rifle to the ground with the entire weight of your body.

A moment later and she summons her ribbons - five strips of it, sprouting out of nowhere, sharp as blades and stiff as swords. You duck under the swipe of one, and lean away from the other, before summoning your own Magical Weapon and rending all five to shreds in one, clean cut.

Your Magical Weapon. Something you never really liked using, and made a point never to use unless you really needed it. A simple butterfly knife that could cut anything you wanted to, when you absolutely needed to. It's nothing special - it doesn't even have any engravings, looking like a cheap butterfly knife made to be sold online to kids with second-year syndrome and an overwhelming desire to lash out - but it was a reliable, dependable blade. A knife you promised to yourself you'd never use to kill - simply because you knew that no matter what, you could always get yourself out of trouble before having to take someone's life with your own hands.

Mami shrieks and bucks again, and you hang on hard and fast as she tries to lever the golden rifle out from underneath you, no doubt chomping at the bit to reload. At that span of time, barely longer than an eyeblink, at least two opportunities present itself for you to cut her throat open, to end it here - but even with the adrenalin singing in your veins and your own common sense screaming at you to get back at the traitor, you let the opportunities pass, one after the other, your knife vanishing into the ether.

You can't.

You won't.

This is still Mami, when all is said is done. Horribly misguided, frighteningly motivated to make the worst decision of her life - and that of everyone else's - she is still the person who had been there for you sempai before you were. And you heard her concern - her hesitation - at the world-ending atrocity that she was about to do.

That counts for something.

That counts for everything.

And you're not going to kill her without doing everything you can to try and talk her out of it first.

But not right now. Not when you're trying to survive this encounter, to stop her from committing the mistake that would doom everyone to a dark, dreamless death.

Certainly not when you're trying to hold on long enough to steal something from her inventory.

Something that you finally manage to grab hold of and pull free - just as she manages to kick you away from her, with a devastating kick that knocks the wind out of you at and at the same time break three of your ribs.

But you ignore it. You ignore every joint, every muscle, every bone in your body screaming in pain and for a moment's respite as you roll with your fall, coming to a stop just long enough to throw the golden desert eagle, holster and all, at your sempai.

And you smile as you see your sempai's eyes light up at the sight of the Golden Weapon, sentience returning to them, her hands outstretched to catch it.

"NO! MIDORI, YOU--!!!" Mami screams - and you turn just in time for her to aim her golden weapon at you. The tip of the rifle glowing with an unearthly blue light. The light of your own impending death.

But instead of fear - instead of rage - all you feel is calm. A placid, almost relieved sense of peace, in such sharp contrast from everything else that you almost feel like laughing. Or crying. Or both at the same time.

You just have enough time to say something before everything ends.

What do you say?

With your own doom approaching, you decide to forgo any cutting rejoinder, any witticism about having a bad time to your murderer.

Instead, you decide to gather everything you've learned and deem to be important to your sempai's past, present and future - along with all the memories you've created with her - into a pulsed thought. A thought that would fill them with all the information they need to continue.

But you only have time to send it to one person and one person alone.

Who do you send it to?

Agreed with >>43035168 Mami is a zealot, and if she comes to understand what Midori has seen, she may well react with hardened determination rather than reconsideration, and use the knowledge against Chiaki. Worse, it could endanger others. Wendy can't really do anything with it. But leaving your loved one with the memories of your time together as YOU experienced them is something unique and seems just like Midori. Not to mention that Chiaki might be able to use some of it in the future as things start getting crazy and it'll inform her future decision-making (i.e. a pass to use knowledge from Midori's perspective that may otherwise be meta). Mami and Wendy risk too much making this a wasted opportunity.

You send that pulsed thought with whatever strength is left in your body - no, your soul. Feeling your body finally give out from that one last burst of effort, one that's immediately validated by the pulse recipient's sudden confusion, and then her stark realization. Proving that you not only succeeded at telling them what you wanted to say, but you also made them understand.

You close your eyes and smile as the light takes you, then overwhelms you.

Letting yourself fall into the darkness that you've eluded for so long, after that fateful day in Siberia.

Thank you, sempai, you think as the darkness claims you, holding you in its warm, loving embrace.

Thank you for everything. For all the memories.

You did what you could. It's all in her hands now.

Your only regret is not being able to say goodbye.

...Well, that's okay.

You probably wouldn't be able to stop yourself crying long enough to do so.

But just as you feel yourself slipping away, you hear someone whisper in your ear, the moment the sweet, cinnamon scent of rotting bodies fills your nostrils.

Midori's death was already fixed once we chose to throw the Golden DEagle to Chiaki instead of grabbing the Golden Musket and shooting Mami, or killing Mami then, or any of the previous opportunities to end this without bloodshed before that, so how bad was giving Mami all of this information? I remember you said that doing so accelerated a lot of things and made things worse, and what we got out of it was making the Ahriman fight easy at the expense of everything else.
Did we learn anything new? Or was it just Ahriman telling us the same things we'd already been told, an example of players forgetting information they'd already been given?

Yes, because you did not imply in any way that you felt that the downsides were not an equitable or advantageous exchange for an increased pace.
We can only judge by the text of your post, and an image if you include one.

Your post was made in response to to a chain saying how we got little to nothing positive from the exchange, and anything positive we did get was not worth the massive amount of negatives. Your post then went on to say that we got one effect from the exchange, instead of seeing it as a negative (things coming at us so fast we don't have time or resources to fend them off properly), we should see it as a positive.
With nothing else to go by in that post, seeing it as a defense of the exchange is obvious.

It's also doubly frustrating when Decu only allows a voting extension on the choice of "who do you relay this information to before your character dies?" when that option was presented earlier and nobody pays attention to it because it's a write-in. Okay, yeah, but the option of mind-slamming Mami with the realization she's been played a fool this entire time could have been inserted at any point when Midori was tied up, which was 3 different vote chances.

I can see how Decu could have some trouble with that, but it's one thing to selectively incorporate write-ins to expedite things not five threads ago and ignore another write-in that could have also made a similar impact.

I get that he's not perfect and that this is a continuous learning process, but ignoring a potential future-altering decision in favor of a smoothly flowing scene (which leads to a character dying, no less) feels kind of scummy.

We could have done it before wasting our breath and time by calling Mami a traitor and that this isn't what Chiaki wanted.
We could have done it before calling Tiny Pete.
We could have done it before doing Flesh of Fallen Angels to call in Pinky.

Compared to Midori Quest 1's final battle, instead of having the stupid decision in the beginning end the fight for us, we were given multiple chances to choose the action that would bloodlessly end the confrontation but didn't take it, and we only did it at the end when it already didn't matter.

Though it's frustrating that the memory dump had almost won after Tiny Pete was killed, but Flesh of Fallen Angels just edged it out, and that's what called Pinky here in the first place.

I just feel really cheated. It feels like that sometimes we'll be allowed shortcuts to do the smart things, sometimes we'll be denied because Decu really wants the plot to go into one direction. Sometimes he won't give prompts for confirming really bad decisions, and sometimes he will. But he'll ignore smart minority write-ins if it will advance the plot in the direction that he wants.

Keeping your eyes closed, you try to listen to your surroundings. Breathing in as slowly as you can to reduce your own noise, letting the quiet filter in what's important to your hearing.

You already know you're in some sort of hospital - most likely the Officio's medical wing. One of those private wards you've had the pleasure of being bedridden in a few lifetimes ago, your breath whistling through bullet holes instead of the dry, parched one half-open and ringed with cracked, chapped lips.

...

You hear it, then. Beyond the monotonous creak of the ceiling fan above you and the life-support machine beeping beside you. Beyond the tinny, cheerful J-pop bullshit being gently piped into the room by a muted MP3 player at the far corner of the room.

Eversors. Vindicares. A squad each, stationed in the corridor outside. Heavily armed. Heavily armored.

...And beyond those, the crackle of two helmet-integrated vox casters communicating with each other.

That's...that means Culexus support, too.

You have a lot of questions right now, starting with how you ended up here.

The last thing you remember, after all, is falling asleep in Silent Room Regalia.

But Culexus support, when your last Culexus died an op ago...

Probably something you should ask about too.

The problem is that that action is going to make us the target fir the rest of the world. It's true that we know that the consequences of killing Mami would be disastrous, but, at the same time, Chiaki is not going to stand there without doing anything after seeing her girlfriend dying at the hands of the person she trusted as a maternal figure. So, IC, I think this is the most appropiate way:
>Beat the everliving crap of Mami, all the time screaming like a Banshee. Then, after making her face look like pudding, ask simply "Why?" while sobbing. Of course, take the musket away from her

That Chiaki-fragment even said she was a fragment and that the real Chiaki Matsuda wouldn't remember once the Barrier went down.

>She sees the confusion in your face, and she shakes her head. "The...the closest thing to an explanation I can probably give is that I'm...well, I'm not the Chiaki you know, but for all intents and purposes right now, I am Chiaki. Kind of like the armored fragment back there," She gestures to the door behind the both of you, where you encountered three fragments of your sempai's psyche. "She's from what we call an alternate timeline. Kind of a different flavor of the dead ones. ...But you see where I'm getting at, here?"

>You nod. Sort...sort of, yes. So she's an alternate version of Chiaki, just like the armored fragment. But...if that's the case, then where IS your sempai? Where is the original?

>"Right now? Well, you're looking right at her. I don't...yeah, I don't get it either, but apparently I'm standing in for the both of us. ...Me and your original sempai, that is." Chiaki smiles at you, rather awkwardly. "I believe it's only a temporary setup, though - the moment I touch that awful thing you brought along with you is the moment I vanish back into the ether, with the sempai you know and love coming back in one piece."

>A-ah. Well, that's a relief, but...

>Wait. She's vanishing?! But that means--

>"It means I'm given one opportunity to do what I need to do." Chiaki says firmly, but gently. "Don't worry about me, I doubt I'll even remember all this myself. But right now, I'm just thankful that I'm given this shot to do what needs to be done, before it's too late."

Pinky has brought dead Meguca back to life before, even from complete Soul Gem destruction.
So some of us are pretty confident that even if Midori is around, it's not really Midori but Pinky in a Midori-suit.

So are you saying that you don't think Midori's body would have been brought back by Pinky for her own twisted amusement (maybe with Midori's personality brought back to drive the body when Pinky isn't doing it)?
Because a number of us pretty much expect Midori to be dead, regardless of the status of her body.

It's probably an intentional depth-of-field effect. The fan is in focus, and therefore the rest of the room is blurry.

Even with white-hot pain stabbing into your skull at the merest idea of opening your eyes - you do so, or at least attempt to. Your eyelids feeling heavy, sluggish - as if weighed down by all the nights you never slept and all the drinks you never passed.

You expected eye-burning brightness, but...well, it's actually thankfully dim. It's clearly daytime, but the sunlight that should be fucking your skull out right now is mostly diffused by the drawn blinds. The fluorescent light above you is also keyed a lot down from its usual intensity - low enough that it's actually a bit dark inside your room, with the only source of illumination being what little sunshine the blinds actually let in.

As your eyes adjust to being used again - the effort of it making them sting and water, something you simply grit your teeth through - you get final, visual confirmation that you are not in a Silent Room anymore. You're outside. Still under heavy guard, but...outside.

...Which means either Kyuubey changed his mind, or...something big happened.

QUestions. More fucking questions. Piling on top of each other. Building up into a great pile of bullshit.

You wish you had your journal to write this shit down, so you know what to ask the next time you get ahold of someone else.

You turn your head to the left - the mere motion making your vision swim and your stomach turn - and see what looks like another hospital bed, right beside yours. It's empty, but obviously slept in, from the rumpled bedsheets to the caved-in pillows and the boxes of empty pocky piled up at the foot of it.

...Kyoko? They put you in the same room as Kyoko?

That's...well. You don't feel quite as lonely anymore. It would've been nice if she was here for you to wake up next to, but--

You flinch in your bed as the door to your room opens, and you watch as a nurse - a Venenum in a nurse uniform, you remind yourself - comes in. Her green hair contrasting nicely against her pink outfit.

She doesn't attend to you directly as a nurse should, however. Instead, she makes a beeline for the MP3 player at the far corner of the room, switching the current track from idol bullshit to something that you're not sure what it's called, but it's slow and soothing and has a lot of saxophones.

...Blues? Something like that, yeah. You remember Charles trying to have it piped in his bar, but it never really caught on.

You continue to watch her as she moves about the room, seemingly doing everything else but noticing that you're awake. ...Probably got too used to you being dead to the world, which makes you afraid to ask just how long you've been away. How long you've been unconscious and unresponsive.

It's probably just a few days. Maybe a week. Nothing longer than that.

Right...?

"Alright, Matsuda-san. Time to check your vitals." The Venenum whispers as she finally walks up beside your bed. Her eyes riveted to the life-support machine's screen beside you, while her other hand gently takes hold of your wrist.

"Well. That's a bit of an improvement from yesterday, and--" It's here that she does glance down towards your face, towards your eyes - and for a moment you see her smiling, professional face mildly crease into confusion, then pale in realization.

"W-Warmaster...!" The Venenum whispers in half-shock, half-disbelief. "Warmaster, you're awake!"

You open your mouth to talk, to respond - but nothing comes out. Nothing except a dry, parched wheezing. ...Shit. So you can't even talk?

Water. Water! You need water, right fucking now!

Burning every atom of sheer physical will left in your body in this moment - gritting your teeth against the pain hard enough that you're certain you'll hear them crack any second now - you make to do something, ANYTHING to make the Venenum stop in her tracks and listen to your demands. Even just to smack your hand against your gurney's railing would do. You just need to make her freeze and pay attention, instead of running off to god knows fucking where.

Thankfully, you do more than that. Even with your entire body feeling so fucking cooking in pain right now that some of your libs are actually insensate, you manage to grab the Venenum by the wrist. Your fingers gripping her wrist hard enough, it seems, to make her squeak in surprise and pain at it. ...Adrenalin, probably? Whatever. So long as you got her to stop.

"W-warmaster!" Again that breathless exclamation of your title as she looks back at you, eyes wide. A title you're not sure you deserve anymore, what with the shit that's been happening left and right. But there's more than enough time for that kind of talk later - right now you need some fluid in your throat, so it stops feeling like a metal pipe caked with rust and razor blades in its interior.

You grunt urgently and tap your lips with two bandaged fingers. Signing what you hope would be a context clue to what you need right now.

"A...A kiss?" The Venenum goes beet red, steam rising from her ears. "I-I, um, Warmaster, I apologize, I'm already spoken for. But..." She looks furtively from side to side, before leaning in close. "If...if that's what my Warmaster wants, I--"

What...? NO! You shove her face away from yours, and you blithely ignore her look of abject disappointmet as you tap your lips again. Then, for emphasis, your throat.

And then, for further emphasis and clarity, you mouth the word as slowly and as carefully as you can.

"O-oh! OH! WATER!" The Venenum SHRIEKS, causing what sounds like a collective bristling from the huge security detail outside. She notices the look of fury and panic in your face, and wisely takes herself down a couple of notches. "A-ahem. Of...of course, Warmaster. Water, of course. Let me just...there!"

A moment later - with the green-haired Venenum taking off like a shot, jostling a few of the armored security details out in the corridor - you start to sip ice water disconsolately from a plastek water bladder, through a flexible bendy straw that you suspect is usually used for IV drips and things like that. Not that you care - you're actually getting water inside of you now. The angry burning pain in your throat slowly being soothed with the cold, icy nectar.

The water also has the convenient side effect of clearing your otherwise pain-muddled thoughts. No, falling asleep in your Silent Room wasn't the last thing you remember.

You remember waking up in the middle of a blinding, oppressive dark. So dark you couldn't even see your hand in front of you.

Your dolls. That's right, your dolls. You heard them screaming, shrieking, begging you to snap out of it, to come back. How in their desperation they sent one of themselves out, to try and ask for help. Something you remember laughing at as you took their bodies and ripped them limb from limb, their porcelain bodies cracking, then crumbling in your clawed grip.

N-no. No, that's...that couldn't have happened. Probably just another fucking dream, or vision, or something.

You get so many of those you're not sure what's real, what's a portent or what's just you needing to drink less before going to bed.

You continue sipping your water - trying to rack your brain for anything else you can recount - when something red-haired and dressed in the same blue hospital gown as you barrels right through the door, before diving forward and catching you in a crushingly affectionate embrace. Making your plastek water bladder slap against the floor.

SHIT SHIT SHIT OW OW OW--

"MURDERFACE! MURDERFACE, YOU'RE ALL RIGHT! YOU'RE AWAKE!!" The Eversor whoops loudly. in a voice roughly hoarsened by what seems like a lot of crying.

And true enough, she's crying right now, her frame shaking as she buries her face into your chest, like a sobbing child would. Her arms around you, cinched tight, as if the moment she let go would be the moment you disappear from the world forever.

...Granted, this would've been more touching if she wasn't squeezing you tight enough to reduce your ribs to powder, but...it's still something to absorb. You've seen your best friend cry before, sure, but not like this. Never like this, with this kind of soul-searing intensity.

And it's with a cold start that you realize it's not just relief she's crying with.

There's grief in there, too.

Which means...something did happen.

Something horrible.

Something that also explains why Midori wasn't here for you to wake up to.

What do you do?

[]Let Kyoko cry it out before asking what happened.
[]Grab her, get her to focus, and have her explain to you just what the fuck is going on.
[]Ask about your best friend first. Something's...changed with her.

Yes.
She got the Golden Chainaxes when she fought and killed Ahriman and 100 Meguca of the Third.
She then Witched Out later, during Walpurgisnacht.

We know this chain of events because Malal was with Kharn and Murderface during the fight with Ahriman. Malal died during the fight with Walpurgisnacht.

Satan NOT being evil and turning the last remaining Incubators in the universe into hollowed out beings forced to experience all of the pain and despair that they were previously incapable of suffering is something that's never happened before, in all of the thousands of previous timelines.

You believe that Homu-Satan not assfucking the Incubators is a possibility only because Chiaki-Satan is a player character we control.
According to all available in-character information that the Incubators have, assuming that Homu-Satan will come to destroy them is a foregone conclusion, as inevitable as the Sun going nova.

You let her cry it out first before asking her anything. while there's no doubt you could've gotten everything out of her after shaking her by the shoulders and forcing her to focus for a second - you also doubt that you would have been able to get to that point. It just wouldn't have felt right. Anybody else you'd brusquely slap them into sobriety, but...well, it's Kyoko. You can wait for a while until she's composed enough to be the bringer of bad news.

When she finally stops - finally extracting herself from you, still sniffling, blowing her nose on a fistful of your own blanket - it's here that you ask her about what happened. Why you're...out here, rather than rotting inside Silent Room Regalia.

You hold off the question about Midori, though.

Because you doubt you can deal with anything like that right now.

Because you hope that whatever it is - whatever had happened - it didn't involve her in the slightest bit, and she's just kept away from you for some harmless, arbitrary reason.

Even though you know it does involve her. Deep in your own fucking soul, you know it does, and you know you'll go nuclear the moment it finally sinks in.

"I'm...I'm not the one who's s'posed to tell ya, Murderface," Kyoko whimpers miserably. "Sayaka's supposed to, but she's away on an offshore meeting right now. I'm s'posed to just have the Venenum sedate you until she gets back."

An...offshore meeting? With who? What for?

"D-dunno. Just some...Actin' Warmaster stuff, that's all. Mami isn't back from the First yet, so there's no one to handle stuff while you were out." She sniffs again, louder this time, and you manage to drag a box of tissues from your bedside table to your bedspread, hoping to avoid another instance of Kyoko using your own bedclothes for a snot receptacle. "But...I can't make you wait that long, Murderface. I don't have the guts to."

But she needed to show you, instead of simply telling you. You needed to see, she told you as she helped you out of your bed and onto your feet.

With your joints feeling like they've been replaced with broken glass and your feet feeling like they're resting on beds of hot coal instead of cold tile, you're reduced - hopefully temporarily - to hobbling as a means of locomotion, with Kyoko beside you serving as your crutch. It's with the Eversor's arm around you that you make your slow, painful way out of your room and into the corridor outside - where your guard detail stands ready in neat, organized rows.

Eversors on one side, Vindicares on the other. All encased in black ruggedized ballistic armor, with the Ninth's logo embossed or tampoed onto specific visual keypoints. Each one also wearing what appears to be a skull mask - not quite the Anima Speculum of the Culexus, but similar enough that you're reminded of the two you heard earlier.

"Miss Kyoko?" One of them, a tall Vindicare, asks as she steps forward. Saiga held across her chest, finger clear from the trigger but obviously itching to brush against that sinful little catch. "Miss Kyoko, you know she isn't to leave the medicae--"

"Piss off, alright?" Kyoko snarls. "We're just going to go visit the other ward, did Kyuubey say anything about not being able to fucking go there or what?"

"No, but--"

"THEN FUCKING PISS OFF THEN!" The red-haired Eversor all but roars, causing the rest of the black-garbed squads to flinch at her rage. Even you're cowed at this, and you're usually the ill-tempered one of the two of you.

"Kyoko? Kyoko, calm down. It's okay." You manage to croak out through the pain, reaching out with your free hand to squeeze her shoulder. "No need to shout--"

She silences you with a glare from her one single eye, before her gaze softens as she seems to realize just who she's staring at. "A-ah. Yeah. Sorry, Murderface. That's...it's just these dildoes, really. I know they mean well and everything, but..." She looks at the corridor lined with armored Magical Girls and shakes her head again. "...Forget it, let's just go. It isn't too far."

It wasn't, but it felt like it was a thousand miles away. By the time you get into the door with Kyoko's help, you're all but ready to collapse to the floor in excruciating, all-encompassing hurt.

But you keep going. Hobbling, using your best friend as a crutch to see the girl lying serenely on her hospital bed, just like you were mere moments ago. Her own life support monitor beeping regularly, an electronic heartbeat.

Looking just as beautiful - and just as vulnerable - as she did four lifetimes ago, in that very same kind of bed. Her long green hair just as lush and as full as you remember it.

"Midori...?" You murmur, and you urge Kyoko to help you move closer. A-alright, she's just here to recover, right? She's just sleeping, that's it, you were worrying about nothing--

"She's been comatose ever since we found her, Murderface." Kyoko begins wretchedly. "We found her in Silent Room Regalia, with you and Wendy and a pile of scrap metal that we recognized as Tiny Pete soon after." She coughs here, the sound more like a half-choked sob than anything else. "I was...I was hopin' she'd wake up before you did, so she could greet you once you woke up, but--"

W-what?! In the Silent Room?! How?!

"Murderface, please, I'm gettin' to it, please don't yell at me--"

HOW?!

Kyoko falls silent here, before taking a deep, shuddering breath, and explaining what happened to you.

How Midori and Wendy hatched up a plan to bust you out of the Silent Room - or at least, help you somehow by getting you your Desert Eagle.

How they broke into your own vault, with Kyoko giving them your keycard to gain access to its contents.

How, in the confusion to get into your Silent Room, Wendy came upon two novitiates. She tried to subdue them, but they ended up fighting back - necessitating her to use a bit more force. The pair was found, unconscious but alive, inside a supply closet.

How Heartcatch Squad was taken out temporarily by Enishi to let Midori and Wendy entry into Regalia.

How the entire Officio was woken up by Regalia triggering a building-wide alarm, its malfunction almost knocking out all the power in Headquarters.

And when they rushed over to the Silent Room to investigate - they found you and Wendy and Midori, all bleeding, all broken, inside the yawning maw of Regalia's demolished doors, the ceramite-layered steel forcibly torn open from the inside.

"I think...I think Heartcatch Squad said that you were the one tearing Regalia open," Kyoko continued. "Even Darks was panicking at the sight of you. They were getting ready to engage when Regalia gave its last failsafe burst and knocked you and everyone else out. Damn near turned the entire building offline, too."

And...and she was comatose already then? Midori?

"She was..." Kyoko shakes her head, her face crumpling up in grief. "She was in a really bad way when we found her, Murderface. Just...I don't know what got to her, but it nearly killed her. We did all we could to fix her, tried to see if we could wake her up, but she's just not responding to anything we're doing. Pulsing, trying to use your attunement with her, even Kyuubey...nothing's working."

...What about Wendy?

"In slightly better shape, but not by much. We were gonna put her in the same room as Midori, but the Church of the Golden Land came by and picked her up personally. Wanted her to recuperate in their church or something like that. I hear she's already awake an' gettin' better, but she goes quiet whenever someone asks her about what really happened..."

Gnnghh. No. This can't...this can't be fucking happening. Not to Midori. Not to her.

After everything you've done to make sure she doesn't get herself in danger...! The fucking...the fucking universe just couldn't let you get this one chance at fucking happiness, it just had to take it away, right?!

"Murderface...? Murderface, you're...Christ, you're bleeding from your eyes--APOTHECARY! SOMEONE GET IN HERE!"

You dimly hear Kyoko calling for someone to attend to you, just as you reach out to grasp Midori's hand through her blanket. The hand that had always held yours with life, with warmth, with love.

Now, no matter how hard you squeeze it - her hand is limp, cold, lifeless. You might as well be holding the hand of a corpse.

Midori. Your Midori.

Someone did this to her.

Blood continues to drip down your cheeks, staining your vision red.

Just as two burning spheres of pain erupt at your shoulder blades, bringing to mind pinions of carrion wings trying to force their way out. Trying to unfurl, to spread, to fly.

What do you do?

Get Fucked established Midori as something more than a permanent hanger-on.

Yuma the Dong Sculptor got us some information and set up a very interesting character arc.

Give Her The Soul Gem was fucking dumb as shit, but as the song says, two out of three ain't bad.

~~I don't even remember bringing QB into time stop, so it can't have been that bad. Probably time to do the archives again.~~

Sure, we lost a side character here and there, but making the 'right choice' has screwed us over worse than most of the retard options.

That entire arc had already established Midori as someone who can analyze a situation on the fly, identify what makes a person or eldritch abomination tick, and use that information to make a potential enemy into an ally. Yes, she uses others to fight in her place, but that's because she's a fucking Callidus, an infiltration specialist and information analyst, not a front-line melee fighter.

We already had her developed as someone who is able to keep control of her emotions and keep them from compromising her ability to complete mission objectives, a competent and talented professional.
Get Fucked threw all of that away.

It wasn't just a sneaking mission, it was a mission to recover the lost party members and bring them together for the boss fight.

But then instead of fighting alongside them or using our goddamn cloaking ability, we charged straight in ahead of our heavy hitter melee tanks.
The support/glass cannon DPS ran ahead an took all the aggro. That wasn't showing Midori as more than just a hanger-on, that was being fucking retarded and threw all of the development as a competent professional out.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 11/06/15(Fri)11:30:27 No.43501196 Archived

No. No. You're...you're not going to lose control here, you tell yourself frantically, desperately trying to reign in what little scrap of composure you have left.

Willing yourself calm, just as you feel yourself become painfully and frighteningly aware of the razor-sharp pain erupting across your shoulder blades, at the tips of your fingers, at the back of your eyes.

You're not going nuclear here.

Not now. Not when you don't even know who - or what - did this to Midori.

She...she tried to save you. You know that. Even without Kyoko's account, you instinctively know that this happened to her because she only wanted to help you.

Even if it meant putting everything on the line. Even if it meant risking her life - her soul - in the process.

She'd done it once before, in Siberia. Diving into two overlapping Nightmares to piece you back together and save you.

And she was lucky enough to return to you alive. Not only that, but intact. Whole.

She wasn't so lucky this time.

...

No. She's still alive. Midori's still alive, that's what counts. Being in a coma doesn't mean being dead, since you just woke up from one. And her Soul Gem's still intact, that's...that's a good sign too, right?

...Yeah. Yeah, there's still hope. You haven't lost her yet.

You just have to make sure you don't do anything stupid that'll hasten the process.

Easier said than done, considering your fucking track record.

With that, you let out the breath you've been holding, and open your eyes.

Just in time to hear rapid footsteps behind you, along with Kyoko's panicked screaming.

Just in time to see a mechanical fist, cast in crimson iron, hurtling towards your face.

>> ☐ Deculture 11/06/15(Fri)11:31:16 No.43501213

You wake up. Again.

Opening your eyes to the same fucking ceiling again. With everything still hurting, again.

Your jaw definitely hurts a bit more this time, though. In fact, it feels like it's recently been healed, the tell-tale tingling and feverish warmth palpable through your own fingertips.

"That's...that's my bad, Murderface," You hear Kyoko say sheepishly from your bedside, and you crane your neck to see her sitting on the floor, her back against your gurney's locked wheels. "S-sorry about that."

You blink. That's...wait. You remember seeing a robot fist hurtling towards your face before you passed out. That was...that was hers?

She raises a hand in silent, awkward response. Her right hand.

It's...not her hand anymore. It's a straight up bionic fist, painted a rather dark, ruddy red. Somewhat resembling Kharn's oversized claws in their stark inhumanity, yet clearly mechanical rather than anything vaguely demonic and disturbing.

"I was planning on showing it off to you right after you woke up, see how cool it is and everything, but...you know." The hand disappears from sight, before it's replaced by Kyoko herself, the red-haired Eversor peeking meekly from over the lip of your bed's thin matress, like a puppy trying to ascertain whether its owner had already forgiven it for murdering a well-loved chair with its teeth. "You're not...you're not mad, are you?"

How do you respond?

You shake your head, just as you struggle to sit back up on your bed. ...No, you're not mad, just...did she have to hit you that hard? And with her bionic hand no less? It feels like you just got kissed by a sledgehammer being swung by fucking Sayaka of all things.

"I'm sorry, I didn't know! I panicked!" Kyoko wails, now standing up and tearing at her hair with both hands - her normal one and her new bionic one. "You were makin' all these scary sounds and bleeding all over the place and there was those things poking out your back! A-and I saw the dildoes outside planning to charge in and take you down, so I rushed ahead of 'em and just knocked you out myself before they could!"

...Hnh. That's...well, you suppose that's a good enough reason as any, but--

"Y-yeah! I heard 'em pulsin' to their Culexus too, something about..." Her voice lowers to a whisper, nearly inaudible if not for her leaning in close. "...somethin' about takin' you out permanently if they had to. And I could tell they were just itchin' to do it, like, chompin' at the bit kinda eager."

...Well. Now you're even more grateful that you took a metal fist to the jaw. Kyoko probably saved your life just then.

A bionic hand, though? Why'd she get one all of a sudden? Or were you actually out for THAT long that you're actually now far into the future, and you're talking to Kyoko and Sayaka's daughter, the one who's doing all she can to emulate her...uh, second mom to a T?

"W-what?! I'm not...! MURDERFACE!" Kyoko grabs you in a headlock, before grinding her metal-shod knuckles into your scalp. The noogie's already uncomfortable as it is, but the sensation of cold steel touching your skin makes it even more intolerable, and you quickly tap out of the painfully-affectionate gesture. Kyoko mercifully registers your capitulation quickly enough, letting you go with her usual big-dog grin on her face.

"A-anyway, um, about this arm." She says after a moment, wriggling the fingers on the bionic construct that was now masquerading as a working limb attached to her elbow. "It's...well, I was thinkin' about what happened back in Wookie World, an' the stuff happening now, and I thought that maybe it's time to look into getting a...a kinda leg up, you know? Too keep up with everyone and stuff, without having to resort to getting one of those Golden Weapons or something like that."

Keeping up...? Her? You blink at this, confusion writ plain on your features. Kyoko's worried about getting left in the dust? But you've seen her fight! She wrecked the Red Culexus one on one, for fuck's sake! And isn't she in line to be the next Eversor Rank Leader, of all things?

Wincing at your mention of the Red Culexus, Kyoko gives you a wan smile. "It's...it ain't really that simple, Murderface." She looks down at her hands briefly - her eyes lingering on her metal one - before she looks back up at you. "I'm not gonna pretend I don't have much more to learn and stuff - I do - but I have it on good authority that I'm at a plateau, here." She shakes her head. "I'm not like Sayaka-chan, she's just a freak beast when it comes to being an Eversor, so I gotta find other ways to get an edge." It's here that she taps her temple. "Ya know, without going crazy and screaming about chicken tendies from Heaven."

Chicken tendies from Hea--

Oh. That's...hah. Clever.

Well, alright, then. If that's her reasoning and she doesn't regret it, then you're okay with it. ...Actually, more than okay, now that you get a clearer look at the thing.

You think it looks fucking brutal.

"Isn't it, though?!" Kyoko exclaims as she leans forward, practically shoving the bionic limb into your face. "It's state of the art and all kinds of -proof! Waterproof, fireproof, bulletproof, you name it! Plus it can do things other than holding and punching things! Look, I just do this and I can shock someone with 2 whole gigawatts of electricity, just like that! ZAP MOTHERFUCKER!"

You stare at the bionic hand crackling with enough electricity to match a huge dam's power output and carefully inch away. ...Yeah, that's even more brutal, sure. But you'd like it to continue being brutal a bit farther away from your face.

"A-ahaha! Alright, Murderface!" Kyoko grins as she pulls her new hand away, the lightning curling around its fingers disappearing with a loud crack. The expended energy leaving an acrid stench in the air. "Anyway, uh, as for how long you were really out, just a couple of hours. If you were asking how long you were REALLY out, like, before you woke up and I punched you in the face..." She pulls out her smartphone and gives it a few taps. "Nine days? A week and change, something like that?"

Nine days? Not that long, then. You probably still have time to try and find out what did this to Midori before the trail goes cold.

You look back at Kyoko. Your best friend seems to be a bit more like her old self now, rather than the hand-wringing worrywart on a hair trigger temper from earlier. Another good sign.

Maybe things aren't as bad as you think.

What do you do?

Good Heavens, just look at the time!

Soon, it'll be game-time with QB. Ought to square something away;
We don't know what QB expects of us right now and that could be very bad. If what the memory from Malal was right, kooby knows about the "plan" and he thought it activated when we went into a coma right now, there would be problems if we told him all about it. We'll have to get our act up or risk getting fucked up by a power anywhere from the entire Ninth's arsenal to the entire incubator's race capabilities, where neither are preferable options.
If, however, QB doesn't expect us to be mind-wiped again or whatever, acting might fuck things up even more.
Either way, we should subtly gather information in an accelerated manner. The second option is much more likely, seeing as Kyobro is completely normal, but it would be better to prepare for a contingency.

Not only do you not understand QB, you pretty much are fearmongering for no fucking reason.

Its actually the other way around. The Critter is probably shitting his pants right now because its obvious the Failsave didnt work as intended and didn't contain TTO. And we now know that this little shit and Malaleorchestrated that whole gig to Amnesiaville.
Shit, they even grabbed a discarded Akemi Homura that was frozen in time so they could mess with TTO.

Yeah, the Incubator must be experiencing a new emotion right now: Fear.

Checking through the archives, Chiaki didn't have the effortless fight against Ahriman that she did against Strength and Devil when she fought as TTO.
And the dream where we saw what would happen if Chiaki killed Mami showed Chiaki losing pretty badly to Kyouko and the forces of the other Officios.

What, specifically, shows we still have the power of TTO after she left Chiaki's body?

>> ☐ Anonymous 11/06/15(Fri)14:05:35 No.43503386

Was the TTO truly manifesting in Chiaki at that point? Or was Ahriman just exploiting some sort of metaphysical link that Chiaki had due to her status as a Homura, and making her look like the TTO?

I was under the impression that the TTO and Chiaki were two different entities, and existed separately from each other.

Going by what we saw inside her head at the time, the thoughts were those of TTO, she referred to herself as such. The flood of memories that were TTO had to be stopped, most of those doors closed while others had to be opened for Chiaki to take back control.

They're separate, but connected. The TTO was manifesting, but that's because she can manifest in any Homura that has that mental connection opened.
And when she left, she most likely left some backdoors open so that she could take control again.

>And so you allow yourself to remember. Gently closing the opened gates in your mind once more with a touch of your psychic sense, and reopening others that have been barred shut by the flood.
>Restoring yourself to what you once were. Not completely, of course. Just enough.

Malal probably wanted a complete memory wipe to try to close any such backdoors; something we prevented from happening.

Well, Kyoko's new bionic arm aside, is there anything else you missed while you were dead to the world? Whatever it is, you want to know about, even if she thinks it isn't important or not.

And who do you have to yell at to get some food around here? Real food, mind, not the bland, tasteless crap that they shove down your throat whenever you're unlucky enough to warrant a stay here.

"Oh, food! Yeah, sure, give me a minute!" Quick as a shot, Kyoko bolts out of your room - before coming back almost immediately, a multi-tiered metal lunch box gripped in both hands. "Gotcha covered!"

This she disassembles with the practiced ease and efficiency of a Vindicare field-stripping a rifle - and in no time flat, your own bed is playing host to an impromptu banquet of rice, fried eel, boiled shrimp and egg rolls, each one in its own canister. There's also a small, shrink-wrapped package of seedless grapes, probably for dessert.

"Since Mami's away and Midori's uh, takin' a sabbatical and everything, I thought to make food for ya instead, Murderface, since I know you hate the food here just as much as I do." Kyoko says with no small amount of pride. "Been wakin' up really early to make 'em everyday, just in case you woke up!"

...Really? You blink down at the canisters full of food. Well, she didn't really need to go through all this trouble, it's not like you can't choke down hospital food, but--

"No buts! You need real food to get back in condition, 'specially after what happened!" Kyoko pokes your cheek with a metal finger, the delicate servos of its knuckles purring. "'Sides, it wasn't really a waste anyway. I just ate what I made if you didn't wake up before lunch, or shared it with one of the nurses watchin' over ya." She cackles here, before shoving a pair of chopsticks into your hands. "Go on, dig in!"

You take the chopsticks and clack them together clumsily, before nodding and making to start on your first canister. You're not really a rice kind of person - you've been a pancakes-for-every-meal kind of person ever since you can remember - but you're feeling really peckish, so this will have to do.

...Besides, it's...it's not like Mami's around to make pancakes for you right now, right? And Midori can't either, so...

Christ. You're not going to cry. Not right now, not in front of your best friend, for fuck's sakes.

As you slowly make your way through the packed lunch Kyoko made for you, she begins to tell you about everything you've missed in the past nine days.

Sayaka's departure, apparently, was Kyuubey's way of damage control: the incident in Silent Room Regalia had alerted enough Culexus abroad that the Ninth was inundated with requests asking what the hell was going on, and if they needed emergency assistance. Without Mami to smooth things over, it was up to your Equerry - and Acting Warmaster - to make sure that no Officio suddenly had the bright idea to send people over and find out just what really happened. The official story, apparently - and you find it hard to believe that Sayaka would be up for something like this, considering how huge the stick up her ass is - is that it was just a catastrophic malfunction of a faulty, unused Silent Room - nothing more.

Then there was Kharn's arrival from Siberia, a couple of days ago. She was her usual charismatic self, apparently, despite wearing 'clothes that you'd see an expectant mom wearing'. You tried to imagine kind of clothing fit that profile, until Kyoko told you herself: a fluffy ribbed sweater and black pencil skirt combo. What was apparently unbelievable was that even though Kharn told everyone that she might be giving birth any day now, all they could see - at least from the contours of the form-hugging sweater - was just the tiniest suggestion of a pot belly.

Even if Kyoko herself - and many other girls - attested to feeling two pairs of feet kick against their hands when they rested them against the former Warmaster's stomach.

Kharn visited you immediately after her arrival, and had made it a point to spend some time with you alone, with the lights in your quarters shut off. She came back quiet and withdrawn, before declaring that she'd be staying until you woke up. In the meantime, she was helping Misaka with the repair and reconstruction of Tiny Pete.

"Besides Wendy gettin' snapped up by some of the folks over at the Church, an' Kyuubey locking himself in his office with instructions for us not to interrupt him for anythin' unless it was really important - you didn't miss anything else, Murderface." Kyoko finishes her explanation.

What about Mami? Has there really been no word from her? From the First?

"Not really, no." Kyoko shakes her head. "Apparently there's a huge dust-up going on up there that's blocking off communication or somewhat, so the moon's a no-go for now."

...Ngh. Just when you needed Mami the most. Kyoko's a big help and all, and you're glad she stuck it out beside you this entire time, but...

"I know, Murderface. I miss her too." Your best friend murmurs, wistful. "Feels like she's the only one who can make sense of all this, and fix it just like that." She snaps her metal fingers.

Yeah. ...Anyway, about the security detail...it's pretty obvious they're not exactly from the Ninth, are they, despite the armor. So where are they from?

"Oh. Them." Kyoko's face turns dark. "Kyuubey's keeping quiet about it, but word is they're from the Sixteenth. Got here like, a few hours before Sayaka could even get dressed for her fucking trip, making a scene about how their mutant alien cat wants to extend the hand of friendship and brotherhood to our mutant alien cat with a 'sincere gesture of assistance', and that they weren't gonna leave until they know that the situation's clear. He just made them wear our armor so there wouldn't be anyone talking - like what we're doin' now.

You wince at this, before suddenly realizing that the two of you have been talking about...well, the sort of thing Kyuubey doesn't want to get leaked out. And they've been standing just outside, so how--

"Yeah, nah, Kyuubey's thought of that, too." Kyoko grins. "Had Enishi cloak your room and Midori's with her Callidus bullshit. Top level, secret family technique stuff, the kind that even Culexus can't detect. Right now all they hear from us is the most inane shit possible, like fashion or food or whatever. We just gotta make sure we don't talk about anything important outside." She glances back towards the line of shadows in the corridor outside. "Fuckin' dildoes, each and every one of 'em."

Hnh. Well, at least Kyuubey still has his head on straight, despite everything else.

What do you do?

[]Have Kyoko call Kharn to your room. You want to ask her about what's happening to you.
[]Have Kyoko help you to Kyuubey's office. You need to talk to the mutant cat bastard as soon as you're able.
[]Ask her if her arm has a vibration function.
[]Ask her about something else. (Write-in)

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/22/15(Tue)23:21:47 No.44335537 Archived

Try as you might, you can't seem to finish your food, even if your stomach's still grumbling loud enough for Kyoko to politely ignore it with a sympathetic grin. You're not sure why, but for some reason you feel as if you're not going to be sated at all, no matter how much food you ram down your throat. As if someone or something had swapped your body's biological need for sustenance with something else, replacing it with a hunger that you felt not only in your bones, in your core - but your soul. A hunger that told you in no uncertain terms that you'll need to feed soon, if you know what's good for you.

You try to make a go of it still, managing to force a couple more bites mouthfuls down, before setting the half-full container aside and asking Kyoko for a glass of water. "Eh? You're done?" The red-haired Eversor asks as you down the cold, tasteless liquid - sighing in relief as the cold touches dry, parched throat. "You barely even got through the first one, Murderface! I know they're not the Mami-grade pancakes you're used to, but you were out for nine days! Ya gotta eat something! ...What, did I cook it wrong or something? Did it turn bad in storage, or...?" She takes the container from you, popping the lid and giving its contents an incautious sniff. "No, still good! What's going on? Not really hungry, or...?"

That's...yeah, you'll go with that, you tell her, not really sure of what to say. Not really hungry, yeah.

Your stomach grumbles again, making Kyoko look at you quizzically. But like the best friend she is, she simply takes the container - and the rest of its unopened, untouched brethren - back, snapping them into place on top of one another. "Well, I'll just leave it here then, 'case you change your mind." She places the orderly pile on your bedside table, easily within reach. "Anyway, ya need anythin' else?"

>>44335537

You nod after a moment's thought. If it's not too much, can Kyoko call Kharn over here to talk to you? You're still trying to absorb all the information she dumped on your lap about the days you've been knocked out cold, but you think you'll do well to talk to your Russian predecessor right now.

"Kharn?" Kyoko echoes, blinking at you with her one good eye, before nodding. "Uh, sure, I guess. But don't you want to take it easy for a few days first? Y'know, just rest and try to get your strength and appetite back?" She seems really disturbed about you turning down food. "I mean, it's not like you need to rush headlong back into the grind here, you can slack off for a bit more until--"

You've done more than enough slacking off, you cut your best friend off as politely as you can, reaching up to adjust your glasses - before realizing that you're not actually wearing any right now. Making you feel more naked than, well, being actually naked under the medical gown you're wearing right now. More than the sensation of not having a gun near you.

...Anyway. You turn back to Kyoko, hoping that focusing on something else would get the feeling of discomfiture to get away. It isn't like you're diving headlong back into work, anyhow. It's just you catching up with Kharn. Nothing more than that.

The red-haired Eversor looks at you uncertainly, before nodding. "Well, alright, then. Gimme a bit and I'll get her up here." She starts to reach over with her metal hand to give your shoulder a squeeze, but she seems to change her mind and just punches you in the arm with her normal one a second later. Anyone else would have missed that brief moment of worried hesitation except you. "You just stay here and don't go running off or somethin'. Unless you wanna piss off the dildoes and cause 'em to have heart attacks outside, in which case feel free!"

>>44335556

You manage to return Kyoko's forced grin, before watching the Eversor leave in a quick jog. Hear her stopping briefly to exchange a few snarled threats at the guard assembled outside your corridor, only to be met by more vox-crackled apologies. The exchange lasts for less than a handful of seconds, however, and soon you hear Kyoko's footsteps recede into silence.

Letting out the sigh you've been holding in, you lean back against your pillow and close your eyes. Trying to relax, trying your best not to think about anything else for too long, trying your best to take things one at a time.

Most of all, trying not to focus on the fact that the girl you love is right next door, comatose, nearly dead to the world. The reward the universe saw fit to award her with for trying to help you - to save you from the shit you got yourself into again.

...Hah, funny. The one time you actually need amnesia, and your brain can't even do the decent thing and kill a few brain cells to let you conveniently forget.

No. No more forgetting any more. No more of that. This is what's happening now.

And you're not going to rest another second until you get everything squared away, and Midori conscious to live the rest of her days - preferably with you, but if that's not in the books, then at least you'll settle with her being okay.

She deserves that ending at least.

You'll settle with ruining the shit of anyone and everyone who gets in your way.

Kharn makes her entrance to your room some ten minutes later, to hushed whispers and murmurs from the guard detail posted outside, and...well. You had to do a brief double-take. This Kharn was...a LOT different than what you remember back from Siberia.

A lot different. Enough that you briefly wonder if Kyoko's sent someone else to you by mistake. Even if the fleshmetal hands and feet were proof enough, as much as the Russian's shark-toothed grin and her scarlet-pinned eyes of sunless black.

Just...you weren't expecting her to actually look the part of a mom.

"The dead rise!" Kharn chuckles, her voice soft and smooth, like billowing silk brushing past a polished, keenly-edged blade. "Ah, Murderface, it has been a long time, a very long time! It is good to see you, very good!" You only have a few seconds of trying to sit up on your bed to meet her properly before you end up with your face being muffled into a sweater-encased chest, one considerably...bigger than you remember too. Not as big as Midori's but definitely something to write home about.

The Russian lets you go after a few awkward moments, her grin as warm as her greeting, seemingly finding nothing wrong with meeting you in this kind of...situation. In this kind of circumstance. "You are looking well, old friend! Well, a bit skinnier and paler than I last saw you, but taking naps of such length will do that to you, ahaha!" You feel clawed fingers brush close against your scalp, the sensation making a chill run up your spine. "But is okay! A haircut, some good food and good drink will help get you back on your feet quickly enough, I think!"

How do you respond?

[]Return her greeting as warmly as you can, ask her she is first before moving to more serious matters.

You do your best to return her greeting formally and warmly - or at least, as warmly as you can while aching all over and having nothing more than starchy medical gown scrap covering you. Just as you murmur your way through wishing her pregnancy would be a smooth and painless one, and that her children be healthy and strong after delivery, it's here that she barks out her trademark cackle - loud as a gunshot and twice as frightening - before slapping your arm hard enough to make it feel as if she'd dislocated it. Or torn it off somehow.

"Ha! Listen to you! Being so formal and dignified, even while looking like you have died and then got back up to take a piss!" She ruffles your hair here, every sharpened tooth on display with her wide, pleased grin. "And here I was expecting you to have not changed a bit, trying to swap IV bag with overturned bottle of whisky, or inject vodka directly into artery!" The Russian lets out a chuckle, before disengaging the railing of your hospital bed to perch on the edge. "Ah, now I really do not doubt Mami Tomoe's decision to make you Warmaster. You have grown into the role magnificently! Even in this diminished state, even when you are heavily guarded like some wild animal in need ot shepherding you feel like someone who is serious about her work as the Leader of an Officio. We do not even need to see you with hat and coat anymore to know your rank, Murderface!"

...What? You blink at Kharn, before ruefully shaking your head as you realize just what you did. Christ, you've done it now, haven't you? You've played the role of a watch-wearing dildo for so long, that it's going to be your legacy from now on, is it? Murderface is long dead, long live Chiaki Matsuda, Dildo Emperor.

"Oh, do not be so hard on yourself, Murderface." Kharn laughs, before pinching your cheek with two razor-sharp fingertips, unsurprisingly not drawing any blood even though it felt like she could have torn your face right off with a twist of her wrist.

"It is a good thing, you know, to be remembered as someone reliable and loyal to her work! It is only unfortunate that you did not have luxury of having someone like Malal, then maybe you could have kept on with your bad habits, like I did. But ah, I think that too is a good thing, yes? To be the one wearing the coat and hat because of your rank, rather than to be known to wear them only you because you look very handsome in them." She sounds a bit wistful at this, but you feel that it's less of melancholy and more of recollection - of recounting memories long past.

"In any case!" Kharn says suddenly, clapping both her clawed hands, the sudden and sharp sound akin to a machinegun's charging bolt being racked. "Since you asked, I am doing very well. Souji is back at Siberia, keeping the base in order. Misaka is downstairs in the garage, working herself sick putting Tiny Pete back together - she is desperate to get him back up and running before her Big Sister Chiaki wakes up. Perhaps you can indulge her for a few more days, I am thinking she will be very disappointed to fail at that task."

You'll...do your best to keep your ass planted on the bed, then, you tell her. What about her...stomach parasites, then?

"Eh? Parasites?" Your raven-haired predecessor blinks, before cackling again as she belatedly gets your joke, hitting you in the arm once more and nearly making you reach for the Nurse Call button. "Aha, that is cruel, Murderface, cruel! But yes, they are doing fine as well. Had ultrasound just the other day near here! Developing very well for twins! One girl and one boy, it looks like!"

Twins, huh? That's...pretty lucky. There's like a one-in-a-million chance of that happening, right?

"Probably a bit better than that, but yes, it is quite rare." The Russian sighs happily as she places a hand on her unbelievably flat stomach, smiling. "Souji was completely taken by surprise when we found out, it looked as if he was about to have heart attack!" She laughs again, the act so enviously easy for her. "Misaka seems to be warming up to them too, she is saying that she will teach them how to fix Tiny Pete when they are old enough, so she does not have to do all the repairs all the time."

Hopefully they take, and not just chase after blondes the moment they can walk, you manage to tease her. Kharn laughs again, harder this time, and you can't help but join in too. It...feels good to talk and laugh about something else for a change. If nothing else, it's a short reprieve from the mountain of shit the universe has seen fit to shovel on top of your corpse.

After a bit more of reminiscing and catching up, it's here that you finally decide to get into something a bit more serious. Kharn, astute as always, notices your change in tone and demeanor, and points it out with her still-wide grin.

"Ah, there it is again. The invisible hat and coat, once more manifesting from the ether." She grins at your discomfiture, before nodding and motioning with a hand. "Come on, then. I know you summoned me here for more than just idle chitchats and talkings."

Alright.

What do you ask Kharn about first?

[]What's happening to me? What the fuck am I turning into?
[]What happened to Midori? Do you think she'll wake up? Can you help her?

All right, anons. Thanks to Nubum, we have a little more info about the Spymaster and her equerry 02. It´s true, we don´t exactly know what part of the answers is simply fuel to our paranoia and Nubum laughing about it, but something can be extracted from them:
1 – The Spymaster is someone who apparently we don´t even think it could be (which leaves Ruri out of this)
2 – Chiaki already has made contact with 02 and the Spymaster
3 – When the Spymaster finally reveals herself, we will realize that we have been played like a damn fiddle
There is more info in Sufficient Velocity (page 17):
https://forums.sufficientvelocity.com/threads/magical-girl-noir-quest.5383/page-17

Now, the real question: with this new info in hand, does anyone has any idea of who they could be? Any fucking theory?

Hm. Doesn't really limit our options much. The most clever/bullshit option I can think of is using Pinky as a disguise. Be a damn good wheeze if you could pull it off, especially if you were already under the influence of a golden weapon. Use magic to appear to people in their heads as a phantom that everyone already knows can only be seen in people's minds. Use the religious bent to make people easier to manipulate. No reason for people to ever suspect you because who why doubt an insane god coming to you as a bloody phantom? Plus the real Pinky would probably find it hilarious as long as you didn't push it too far. Granted, it would difficult to know exactly how far would be too far, and the moment you crossed it you would wish you were dead. That's the real razor's edge, but I imagine most people that really love undercover work are some kind of adrenaline junky.

Other than that, all other major characters are still on the table. Don't even really need to kill any of them and replace them. Just intercept one of our orders or requests to see them, disguise up, everything is good as done. Have the appropriate person then have whatever intel you might need them to have sent to them as an internal personal memo, you can even hand it to them yourself as a facelss drone.

From the MAXIMUM CHRISTMAS recap special
>Idols are a no-go, she just starts shooting, and even if there's no scientific basis, we're all sort of paranoid the sim-Chiaki will get out somehow like one of the billions of episodes about that on one of those sci-fi shows and start shooting up the place.
Does this confirm that the Spymaster is an idol? If so, Noriko might the Spymaster; it would be the perfect cover, and she is a Karasawa.

Kumatora is the most immediately suspicious candidate. Chiaki doesn't seem the type to both acquire a kouhai, and manage to keep then around (or not actively drive them away). Chiaki actually trusts her, and she disappears for days at a time. It's almost too obvious.

This is the sort of thing where writeups intersect with the main quest. This was probably planned to be either a big reveal (if we never figured it out) or a plot thread that could seriously change the status quo from there on (if we did). But now, we can't do anything with this information in-character, and the reveal when it comes will be hollow.

This benefits literally nobody. Anons like us lose out on the fun of the shadowruns, Decu and the other writefags lose a bit of freedom in their future stories, and even the guy who posted it is going to get pushed out of the inner circle because he can no longer be trusted.

You ask the question that's been burning in the back of your mind ever since you started on this...horrifyingly fucked-up fetch quest of yours, then. A fetch quest dumped on your lap by a giggling demonic goddess in pink, of finding golden weaponized chunks of her soul that turns anyone into raving monsters the moment they touch them - all while dealing with the increasingly disturbing changes to your mind, your body, and your soul.

What the fuck is happening to you?

What the FUCK are you turning into?

Kharn is silent for a few moments, before looking out towards the guard detail posted outside. As if suddenly wary that whatever she tells you now would be incredibly damning, and something not worth risking saying - even in a Callidus-secured room like this.

You open your mouth to remind her of that fact - that Karasawa herself secured this room from any kind of wiretapping - when Kharn turns back towards to you. The crimson pupils in her eyes seemingly shrinking to nothing, drowning in the murky depths they swam in.

"We do not know, Murderface." Kharn murmurs after a while. "No one knows. You have completely escaped classification. We cannot even say that you are a Maerorus now, and Blessed Lady knows that that label's definitions are as nebulous as a Magical Girl's inhibitions directly after contracting." She smiles at her own joke, but you can see from how the smile doesn't touch her own eyes that it was her own attempt to lighten the mood a bit. An attempt that she clearly didn't think work, because she let out a sigh immediately after.

"I was supposed to die today, you know?" You blink at this, and you see her smile again, a genuine one this time, just as she wraps a clawed hand on your shoulders.

"Not in any kind of seer-borne prophecy, I assure you. But from the moment you left Siberia, I was waiting for the call that would pull me back here and have me buried beside Malal. All honors and rank restored posthumously, and my children brought to term through artificial means."

What? But...why? What for? Suicide, or--?"

"Oh, no, no. Trust me, even with our reputations, we Russians do not have the same kind of obsession with self-termination as you Japanese do." Kharn laughs. "No, this is more, ah, dying for a friend, rather than anything as selfish or as histrionic as that. It is dying for a cause, one that I was happy to accept, even if..." She falters here, her voice hitching in her throat the slightest bit, before continuing. "Even if it meant that every minute felt like I was waiting for the guillotine blade to drop."

Kharn gives your shoulder a squeeze. "Remember the procedure. I told you how it is two-fold, yes? First, the stopgap measure, then, the permanent measure. The permanent measure would be to take my Soul Gem - or as I am told to refer to it now, my Witch Core - destroy it, and then with the hexagrammatically-purified remains, recast your Soul Gem. It is a decidedly ugly and brutish procedure, but the key point of it is to use my Soul to bolster yours and prevent it from malforming."

Your eyes widen at that. That...she was prepared to do that? For you?

"Of course!" Kharn laughs, looking at you as if you'd suddenly sprouted a third head, and it started spouting memes from some sort of chinese cartoon forum or something. "Why does that seem so unbelievable to you, Murderface? Did our close bond in Siberia fail to make you realize that Valnikov Kharn, despite her dubious obsession with blondes and skulls, will do anything for her friends?"

Well, er...it's not that you didn't think she would, just that--

"Ha! The look on your face!" The Russian cackles, before putting you into a headlock, mashing the side of your face against a very plump sweater-encased breast. "No, no, I am only teasing. I am not blind to how I look and how I seem to other people. But what I said was true, and still is. I was prepared to do that for you, Murderface. I still am, even if it makes me want to cry and do all sorts of shameful things that would show the world how weak I actually am." Her voice grows soft here, wistful, vulnerable.

"You are the only other comrade I have not lost or failed. Of course I would not fail you in the end, when you would truly need of my help. And I would have gone to that death with a smile, knowing that I saved you, and...perhaps earned a bit of redemption in the Blessed Lady's eyes." You hear her sniff just a bit, before cackling again and shaking you in her grip. "And maybe then, with my soul encasing yours, perhaps you would have filled out a bit and stop looking like some skinny boy wearing a washboard under his shirt, eh? Gyahahaha!"

Gah, you don't even care about that! That's the last thing you think about anymore! But... You would have shaken your head here, had you been able to, but you settle for grunting instead. You're...you're surprised that you meant so much to her that she'd be willing to die for you like that. Even if you don't remember much of your days together.

"That is all in the past. What matters is that you are alive and safe, and I do not have to join Malal in leaving this mortal coil." Kharn grins. "She will just have to wait a bit more, but it is okay. She is used to waiting around with me, I was never the punctual type."

Right. Well...about you, then. So she has no idea what you're turning into? With the wings and the dress and the...everything else?

Kharn shakes her head. "I would say that such mutations are typical of a Maerorus growing into her chosen role, but...well, the similarities to a certain, ah, black-winged antichrist cannot be disregarded, you know?" She grins. "I am sure you are not religious, but you have heard the reference made, yes? Certainly from Kyuubey if not anyone else?"

Yeah, you nod. You've heard plenty about the...the winged good-for-nothing, and about how you're the latest incarnation or some second year syndrome bullshit like that. It was pretty much the basis of why Kyuubey stuck you in the Silent Room, because apparently this particular antichrist had the biggest beef with the Incubators.

Kharn nods. "While wings and overly-fashionable dresses are not uncommon in Maerorus - or in normal Magical Girls for that matter - the similarities are too clear to pass off as mere coincidence. The wings, the dress, the gloves...all we are needing for confirmation is when people around you start seeing things at the edge of their vision."

Things? What things?

"Oh, like...I am just basing this off of the scripture I know by heart, but the devil's handmaidens, I am thinking? Cute little dolls with really cute faces, giggling at them from dark corners and such?" Kharn shrugs. "Has anyone told you of this, of you being haunted by such things? Or have you seen them yourself?"

Ah. She's talking about your collection.

How do you respond?

[]Yeah, I've seen them. It's like having a barrel of demonic monkeys with none of the fun.
[]Reply ambigiuously. No one needs to know about them yet. You don't want to set off Kharn's suspicions too early.

Well, you have to remember that NECO is both always wrong and always an annoying cunt. The former trait she might be aware of and capable of using against us through reverse psychology, but I'm doubtful she has the mental capacity to come up with such a scheme, so unless one of the mentally competent contributors is puppetting her I'm fairly confident that we can take her concern at face value.

Kharn, we've been told to trust her with keeping our Sarcophagus, and nothing more.

I guess the Sarcophagus could be her Witch Core which was going to be a secondary container for our own Soul Gem.

She still refers to the Blessed Lady, which to most of the world still means Godoka.
But we don't know if Kharn worships and follows Godoka's plan, or if Pinky tricked her like she did Mami by using a Godoka facade.

Decu even took special care to explain it later on in the OP. Chiaki handed over the gem because she was sick and tired of not knowing shit while it clearly wasn't difficult to know shit if the villian did, and preferred death to shadowruns.

"Hero goes along with the villian out of curiosity" is actually a difficult twist to pull right, but it's justified here.

You nod. You've seen them, yeah. It's like having a barrel of demonic monkeys with none of the fun.

"...Ah." Kharn's face pales considerably at your confirmation. "That does confirm things, then." She looks towards the guard detail outside your room, and you hear the slightest creak of metal grinding against metal coming from somewhere beside her. It's here that you realize that it's her other hand, clenching into a gruesome, bladed fist. After a moment, she loosens it, a sigh escaping her lips and a sad smile curling her lips.

"Murderface - or Chiaki Matsuda, as you like being called - you are in fact the Devil incarnate. If I was not with child, I would say I was jealous of this destiny of yours and mean it." The smile then turns into a savage grin. "First Warmaster, then the Devil that sends us all to hell. How does it feel to have such an important, pivotal role for the end of the world?"

You look at the Betrayer's grinning face - the very last thing many people have seen before being messily torn apart by a snarling, burning chainsword - before it's replaced with the sight of Midori lying there in her bed, hooked up to a life support system, senseless, dead to the world, unable to even so much as smile at you.

How do you respond?

[] Shrug. I'm already a demon in the first place. Heaven's not my kinda place anyway.

[] Grin. Feels pretty good, actually. Maybe not that hot with the whole end of the world thing, though. Not until I make some people pay for what they did.

Probably not yet. Because we don't know who believes in and wants to help Godoka, and who Pinky tricked by using Godoka's face, and who will try to kill us if we show up in the body of Satan herself because fuck, we're in the body of Satan and last time she fucked things up for everybody.

And we don't know that Mami realized that she was being tricked by Pinky because Chiaki doesn't remember the events from inside that Barrier.

The funny thing, though, is that most people WANT Chiaki to collect the Golden Weapons; Pinky because she wants to fight a Chiaki that can put up a fight, and Godoka because she hid the potential to actually kill Pinky in the Golden Weapons.
And Malal and QB want that as well (with QB wanting to control the Weapons after Pinky is defeated).

And it's the one thing that Homusatan doesn't want, not until she's got enough of a grip on Chiaki via accumulated memories that she can ASSUME DIRECT CONTROL like last time.

You never asked for this, you tell her as plainly as you can, staring directly into Kharn's sunless, pitiless gaze. You were fine with just being another rank-and-file Vindicare, some hired gun who gets slapped into sobriety to kill someone every now and then, spending the days in between sauced to the gills. You didn't want to be anyone significant, you didn't want to be anyone special, and you sure as hell didn't want to be the fucking Devil.

But whatever. It's useless to complain about it now. When the fuck has your opinion about the shit that happens in your life matter, anyway?

Kharn chuckles here, before patting you on the head in a surprisingly motherly gesture. "There, there. It is normal to feel this way. Sometimes we find our own destiny, other times we have destiny thrust upon us. All I can say here is that you were meant to become what you are, now. But it is still up to you, Murderface, to decide what history will remember you by, and what it will remember you as."

She releases you from her grasp, smoothening your gown's lapels with her eerily-articulated death machines masquerading as skeletal human fingers. "Being the Devil does not mean you are beholden to live up to that fate, or to do what the Devil should do. You still have faculty over your own thoughts and actions, and knowing you, you would rather let oncoming traffic crush your skull under a wheel than allow yourself to come under the thrall of someone else. To be under the will of someone else." The Russian deftly flicks away hair from your eyes, smiling all the while. "So there is no danger of that, I think."

You shake your head, frowning. She can't say that for sure. You don't know what you'll get into your head next.

"The future is never sure, no. No matter how educated our guesses are or how clear a prognostication is, it is always up in the air. But we have trust. We have faith." She pokes you in the chest with a finger. "I trust you and believe in you, Murderface. I trust that you will keep your own head, even when you are already ruling in hell with your demonic advisors. And I believe that you will do the right thing in the end, even when the temptation of ending it all is so tempting that you cannot help but taste it."

Kharn grins. "All I am saying here is that, you know, this is something you have control over. It is what you make of it. Perhaps, you will learn in the end, that it is not all that bad of a role, and perhaps you will come to enjoy it - in the way you want to."

Hnh. You doubt that'll ever happen, but that's a thought.

...Speaking of which, though. The dolls. Something about them that you have to point out.

"Oh? What is it, then?" Kharn's features light up here, and she bounces on the bed, clearly excited. "Is it how they are like angelic cherubs, wearing dresses made of light, with saintly smiles and dainty wings? Is it how they are so beautiful that they make you cry when you are lucky enough to make them gaze at you directly? What is it, Murderface?"

W-what? Angelic? Saintly? Are...are you talking about the same kind of dolls, here? Because the dolls you've been seeing and talking to are the sort you find to be the stars in kitschy horror movies involving puppetry and animatronics, or setting fire to orphanages.

You keep that comparison to yourself, however, and instead tell her about how one of them is missing. Specifically, the fifteenth doll. Apparently, she's missing or something.

Kharn nods. "Ah, yes. They say that the fifteenth doll is always missing, for some reason or other. It is in the scripture, that when the fifteenth returns, then things will start happening."

Things? What things?

"Ah, you know, the usual doomsday scenario, ahaha. World blanketing in eternal night, the Blessed Lady being torn from the sky and corrupted by the Devil, cats and dogs getting along, complete pandemonium." The Russian says as she takes out what looks like a small black book from her skirt's pocket and flips through it. "It is very long shot, though, because the other members of the Pantheon made sure to hide the fifteenth doll from the Devil. But to be sure, both master and doll are looking for each other, so..." She shrugs, before putting the book back. "Time will tell if that actually matters to your story, aha."

Hnh. Well, in the scripture or whatever it's called, how does the Devil find the fifteenth doll?

Kharn shrugs. "No one knows for sure. The scripture of the Blessed Lady, as it is now, has missing sections in between its pages. Some of it is needless things that we can easily skip over, but some are very important, like the pantheon's true names. How the Devil completes her collection is also one of them, but there's a popular theory on how she does it, if we take the succeeding verses in context."

What's that, then?

"That she kills the rest of the pantheon for the fifteenth doll." Kharn says plainly. "Not that imaginative, but it's very simple, no? So much like...well, you." The Russian flashes her grin yet again, and you force yourself not to grab your pillow and knock it out of her face. "Very direct, very blunt, no-nonsense at all. Classic Murderface!"

How do you react?

[]Well. I just need to not find this fifteenth doll, then. Maybe if I just stay away from creepy dolls, then I can get on with this stupid quest and not worry about destroying the world I live in.
[]This is depressing. Change the subject, ask something else. Maybe something about Midori's condition.
[]Do you think I can do this alone?

This is....well, this is just fucking great. This religious bullshit on top of everything else just takes the cake.

You opt to change the subject here, before things brighten up any more. You ask Kharn instead about Midori. Has she had any chance to find out what's wrong with Midori? You know it's not exactly in Kharn's job description, but since you share an attunement and everything, she must have looked Midori as well, to see if any of the stuff happening to you is bleeding out to her, or something.

...Fuck, that's just even bleaker. But...you have to know, so you may as well.

Kharn looks at you for a along while, before nodding, a small smile on her face. "Aha. This Murderface, I am not sure of now. You are very sharp, yes? Very quick on the uptake, rather than being slow like molasses." She glances at the guard duty again, before suddenly standing up from her seat on the bed. "Come, you can walk, yes? You are fit to stand and move about?"

Eh? Yeah, you can walk fine, sure. Maybe you still feel a bit woozy after Kyoko punching your lights out, but you're alright with short distances. Probably.

"Hoh? She knocked you out? Why did this happen?"

You explain as you clamber out of your bed and shakily onto your feet.

"HAH! That is just like her!" Kharn guffaws. "You keep her beside you at all times, Murderface. A friend willing to break your jaw just to protect you is a friend for life, remember that."

Yeah. You realize why she had to do it, but that doesn't mean you have to like it. ...Where is she taking you, though?

"To where I can answer your question." Kharn says as she leads you into Midori's room, the guards giving you and the Betrayer a very wide berth as you approach. You feel their eyes bore into you again, but with less intensity this time - most likely, some of them are gawping at your companion.

Suits you just fine, you think.

The both of you stop right beside Midori's sleeping form, and you hear Kharn sigh again as she uses her cruelly-made hands to delicately brush hair away from your sleeping Callidus' face.

Well? You look up at your taller, bustier predecessor. What are you here for? Midori's comatose, that much you know. But she's not dying, nor is she about to Witch Out. She's just...well, asleep.

The Betrayer looks at you mournfully, and it's here that you realize that she's about to tell you that it's worse than you thought. Without replying, without saying another word, she reaches over with a hand to delicately peel back Midori's eyelids, revealing the eyes that had once looked at you with enough love that you were - for a time - fooled into thinking that things were actually looking up for you.

But instead of the crimson irises that you remember her sporting--

--all you see is gold. A gold so lustrous, so warm that it was almost amber in its purity.

Anon, the problem with Mami was that we didn't trust her in the first place. That we didn't trust ANYBODY really, besides Midori and Wendy. If we brought her, and probably Sayaka and Kyouko, into the loop earlier on, we could have avoided this.

Our own paranoia fucked us. We should do well to remember that going from here on out.

As soon as we got the wings, it was made pretty clear that information getting out would have been really bad for us. Then we got back and were immediately sent to the silent room, only speaking to Sayaka, who was briefed on the situation.

>>44340207
That's a pretty huge problem, but so is still having Mami around when we know exactly what she does when she gets the idea in her head that someone has to be killed for what she thinks is the greater good.

>>44340233

>>44340294
We were told that Mami could be our best ally if we can convince her that we're on her side and not an enemy. The memory dump did exactly that,but because people delayed in using it, it was too late to keep Midori from getting shot.
And now Mami knows that the greater good is for Chiaki to collect the Golden Weapons and kill Pinky, and only Chiaki can do it.

So instead of taking advantage of this situation which offers us a way to prevent the useless deaths of the Magical Girls under our command, you want to kill Mami, our current best ally, and therefore fulfill one of Pinky's goals. That goal being to have Mami killed, her Golden Musket in our possession, and the entire Magical Girl world hunting Chiaki down, leaving only Pinky and the Cult left as the people she can turn to for help.

>> ☐ no flatbro left behind 12/23/15(Wed)06:43:29 No.44340391

We've had a lot of information kept from us, and it's taken a long time to figure out who's a real friend and who's trying to manipulate us to go along with their plans. Now we know we can trust Midori, Kyouko, Misaka, Kharn, Wendy, and now Sayaka.

6 trustworthy friends is probably doing insanely well for noir.

>>44340367
I think she can be somewhat forgiven if Midori ends up okay, but the level of trust Chiaki had before can't realistically return.

If not, it's too late to get the good end anyway.

>> ☐ Anonymous 12/23/15(Wed)07:00:56 No.44340482

>it's too late to get the good end anyway.
You're just trying to get as bad an end as possible now, by ignoring that Mami shooting Midori was something we could have prevented while getting Mami as an ally, and by actively trying to make things worse by distrusting and planning to murder Mami, who is now our greatest ally and whose death at Chiaki's hands would not only make our search for the other Golden Weapons more difficult but would put us on the path that has failed every time previous, as the other-Chiaki and the Stooges experienced in previous timelines.

As for Kyouko and Sayaka, Kyouko would come after us to kill us if we killed Mami, and Sayaka still has the Knight inside her that will do everything she can to kill us.
Wendy is still a Chosen of Pinky and works for the Church of the Golden Land, meaning she can be compromised at any time.
And Midori became a Vessel of Pinky and she's come to collect, so she's compromised now.

"Anyway! So last time, we were in the middle of the Prophet Mission, neck deep inside the Akashic Realm, with Murderface leading a kill-team to eliminate the Prophet and stop her increasingly disturbing scare tactics an' stuff. At this point I'm out of commission too, so I'm just goin' by everything everyone told me."

"So apparently they got to fight a lot more demons and such, really cool fight scenes, until a huge goat demon boss comes into play and starts wrecking face. Of course his face gets wrecked, since it's coming up against practically the best Magical Girls in the Ninth. It gets its head cut freakin' off, and I think somebody's gonna make a throne out of it, so that's cool."

"Then some more stuff happens, and they finally get to meet the Prophet - Oriko herself. At boy does everyone want this to just be over, since it's been so tough trying to get up this freakin' skyscraper in the middle of all of this wookies!"

"And of course instead of going in there guns blazing, Chiaki decides to sit down and have a tea party with her!"

But after a really long and pitched fight Murderface manages to get the upper hand and knock Oriko out, and grab the FIFTH Golden Weapon in like two fuckin' years or something. So just as she's about to declare that it's mission accomplished and it's time to go home, apparently something so bad happens that I wasn't even told about it. "After all that, and Yuma taking a very long and well-deserved vacation to some place far-off - I think it was Hawaii or somewhat - everyone gets back to the real world. Kyuubey, who's not really into Murderface's costume change, gets into a fit and has the Warmaster of his Officio get thrown in Regalia."

"Because apparently Murderface now looks exactly like the boogeyman of all Incubators, and he has to make sure no one else sees her, or something."

"Some more stuff happens there, Murderface going crazy and talking to herself a lot, some crazy-lookin' dolls make their appearance, and then something else happens that has Midorin getting worried, which necessitates a POV change and the start of Midori Quest 2."

So, okay. Midori Quest 2 - I was already awake by then, and I kinda helped them through it, but this is pretty much going to be a turning point for the rest of the story. Midori and Wendy got it into their heads that Murderface needed to get busted out of the Silent Room she's being holed up in, and pretty much just throws the entire rulebook out the window trying to do so. Stuff happens, things are revealed, and, well, a traitor appears in the midst. Someone we never expected.

Fast forward to the current threads, and Murderface is waking up after a nine-day coma. She's okay, but Midori isn't - in fact, it seems like she's finally paying the price for saving the girl who spared her. You can only coast on the luck of the Blessed Lady for so long until she starts asking for it back. And when she does, you can bet to hell she's gonna take interest.

"Okay, we're on page 10! That interview's over, so let's wrap up the thread!"

"With this being the third or so year of MGNQ, well, it's pretty clear that it hasn't been the most active, but there's been a lot of stuff happening so there's that. Still, I know the writer's determined to see this to the very end, and he's made sure that there'll be more threads on the regular this coming year."

"With that said he thanks everyone for supporting him and staying with him this far into things, even when it's obvious that stuff got a bit hairy a few threads back. He hopes you'll be staying around for the conclusion, but if you can't, well, he thanks you for your patience and understanding anyway."

You can 'give back' to the /tg/ community by not drawing waifus, but rather notable characters or situations, kind of like Dan does sometimes. Waifus are not interesting to anyone but the one requesting them, and a single person isn't the whole community, right? Make, say, fanart of other quests/boardgames/systems without resorting to base weeaboo pandering.

Chiaki never felt like Homura to me, she's mind wiped to be Max Payne + your opinions or something. She hates herself or some nonsense. And the closest-to-canon Homura literally has an insult as a name.

Why don't you have any of the other PMMM characters be submissive fuck toys for Devil Homura instead? Or at least have them fear her, or be preyed upon to some degree, I don't know. You're worse than tumblr with all this insulting shit against Homura.

Be a decent writer. Be a decent artist or enslave a decent artist or be good at finding pictures on the net. Have a good idea. No, not that one, that one's probably shit, a GOOD idea. An idea that allows for player interaction. The ability to let go of your precious story when the players inevitably derail it. Be good at thinking on your feet and writing off the cuff. Many successful quests are simply fanfics of a popular animu/mango. Without even changing the plot and shit noticeably like in MGNQ. The ones who deserve the bullying kind of love are the weaker ones who fucked up and/or benefited greatly from the hard work of others, despite probably not deserving it. That's like, everyone except Homura. Decu does the total opposite though, always pretending like every other character is a god-like hero while someone like devil Homura is a forever alone joke, or fucking angel-of-the-goddess archer Homura is "a dildo". Yeah yeah, quest is set up like that, Homura is smashed into a million pieces, I don't care. I am triggered.

Anyway, I'm done complaining. Decu is a total faggot when it comes to respecting Homura, but these threads were still occasionally fun, even if you don't like Chiaki as a character. You can just pretend she's sorta-Homura and ignore all the annoying stuff, which is what I imagine most people did, hence why the quest always has such a following.

CONSIDER THE FOLLOWING

>>44394360
They are sandboxy if you make them sandboxy. Don't make it a sandbox, because then it will be chaos. Mind you, chaos can be pretty damn entertaining once in a while, but not always, and sometimes a sandbox will turn out great, but you shouldn't rely on luck.

Do something like Decu did. Write a quick plot line. Then take important events from that plot and write them down. Let's say the beginning is A, an important plot point is B, the end is C. You need to get from A through B to C in any way. What lays inbetween is up to the players, but A, B and C are hard coded. There may be a few different Bs or Cs depending on the choices presented, B or C may come sooner or later, but they will inevitably happen, like some natural disaster. It's to avoid the usual chaos whilst not entirely railroading everything.

Then it's just about being a good writer and having something to write about and all that related gubbins.

Point is, quest making is like freeform interactive story making. Like a visual novel with direct input. And like a visual novel, it's still just a story with a plot, one which needs to follow the standard curve if it wants to be good. Mind you, a truly great story needs not an ending or a beginning, but none of us are at such a level.

If you're planning to start a quest, know what you're going into beforehand, and know how you'll likely end it. Also prepare yourself for a variable amount of Henderson.

Pinky I agree, but that's really obvious. Plus she's just allowed to be an evil stalker with no consequence. Pretty sure that's Decu's idea of "the consequence of Homura's sins" or some garbage like that.

I'm pretty sure he tries to make Chiaki like Homura, when he posts Chiaki he tags it as Homura. I'm pretty sure a lot of quest goers think it's Homura, or at least they try.

>I neither feel like it's Homu being bullied nor feel like it's weird or unreasonable that Chiaki struggles so much
Yeah, mostly agree. But you see if Decu thinks she's Homura, and all these other people think she's Homura... yeah. I've seen it carry over to his drawings. Chiaki gets raped in his porn by Sayaka/Kyouko, or even shitty OCs like Kharn. It's not Homura to me or you, but yeah... pretty annoying. I wonder why he never does it to any other PMMM character. MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 12/31/15(Thu)14:33:56 No.44485010 Archived

You stare dumbly at Midori's once-crimson irises, shaking your head at their now unnatural, almost alien amber. Shaking your head in disbelief, in pure absolute denial at what your predecessor said it meant.

No. No, that can't be right.

That can't be true.

The universe does not fucking hate you that much, does it?

To let you survive everything up to this point, sometimes with the skin of your teeth and other times with the help of the people who'd been blessed with enough saintly patience to actually tolerate you, much more actually be friends with you - only to turn around and then stab you right where it hurts...

Her vessel. Her fucking PUPPET.

You could almost hear the insane, eldritchian cackling.

"This...perhaps, it is a good thing, you know?" Kharn ventures hesitantly, her brutal fleshmetal claws moving with enchanting artistry to delicately close Midori's unseeing eyes once more.

"The Blessed Lady - the Lady that the Second and the Fourteenth worships with a zealot's fervor, at least - has golden eyes. She is benevolence incarnate, or at least the scriptures say she is."

A smile joins her reassurances - a small one, but it's there, one that you could almost call motherly if not for the shark's teeth just peeking out between her curled lips. "Perhaps...perhaps it is a sign that she had noticed Midori's plight, and is thus working through her to heal, her." She looks at you with her sunless eyes, eyes the exact mirror of those that belong to the pink-haired demon hunting you in your dreams - before letting out a sigh. "...If nothing else, at least they are not completely black and weeping foul ichor, yes?"

Concentrate on goals and actions.
Not useless questions whose answers are obvious with a little thought.
Of course she would know this, she was called in as a specialist and would have been told.
Whether we did this to Midori is secondary to getting her Soul Gem back in one piece and her back in her body's driver seat.

Ok, anons. We know from tje last recap thread that Pinky is planning to do something to Midori, but that is metagaming, so at least let's try to be IC.

Also, happy New Year,Decu! Thanks for starting the year with this!

Because as far as the rest of the world knows, The Blessed Lady and Faust are two different entities.
We also know that Godoka is hiding in Pinky's subconscious and sometimes is able to get out and do stuff when Pinky is not paying attention.

This has been something we've know for a long time.

In-character, we know that the Blessed Lady has been overtaken by Pinky, so if someone says that they're doing something for the Blessed Lady, or that someone is being told to do something by the Blessed Lady, that Pinky is involved.

We may not know that Midori was identified as a Vessel of the Blessed Lady, but we would know to be suspicious of anything to do with the Blessed Lady that we didn't get directly from Godoka or Malal.

Because TTO took control when Ahriman released Chiaki's Soul Gem and the cracked shield didn't do shit to prevent it.

I have not been able to find that in Decu's ask.fm.

I have, however, found the one where he says that if we had chosen to stick with TTO, Chiaki would have been taken off the table and we'd be in control of Pinky's mortal incarnation to unite all of the Officios to fight against Homusatan.

You forcibly choke back the black bile trying to boil its way through your gritted teeth, the acidic fire burning your throat and chest making you want to spit in Kharn's face about how it's stupid of her to think it would ever be THAT easy - and simply shake your head in dismissal.

The only question that ever deserved asking right now above all else tumbling from your lips in a mumbling murmur - the voice you used to speak in that told everyone you were mere moments away from drowning yourself in whiskey or killing someone in the face with a gun.

Usually both at the same time.

"What should I do?"

Kharn's face tightens at that - her smile disintegrating as she looks back at you, then at your sleeping Callidus.

Her helpless silence, damning as it is, forces you to ask again. Louder, this time. Clearer. The weakness and desperation in your own voice making you wince - or at least, it would have, if you actually still gave a rat's ass about yourself anymore. In fact, you'd say that Chiaki Matsuda has stopped giving a shit about anything related to Chiaki Matsuda.

Not after what happened to Midori.

"How do I get her back to normal, Kharn?"

The Russian winces for you instead, but it's almost a full-body flinch - the same way someone would start at the crack of an unnanounced, unexpected gunshot. "I am...I am afraid I cannot answer that, Murderface. I have tried to think of something, pored over test results and analyses day and night ever since I have got here, but..." She gestures to your sleeping girlfriend with a claw. "What CAN we do when divinity decides to play god with her game pieces?"

She holds up a clawed hand just as you make to speak. "I know, Murderface, I know. That is no satisfactory answer to make, and trust me, I would have shot myself to receive such an answer. But it is what it is. She is stable, for all intents and purposes. She is breathing, she is alive, she is not suffering or wasting away in front of us. Even her brain is still alive, functioning normally, with all the signs of one in REM sleep. If I did not know better, I would say she is only asleep, and could easily be roused into wakefulness with something as easy as a brief shake." Kharn lets out a sigh. "But I do know better. And you do, too."

She rests a hand on your shoulder, the sensation akin to being knighted with a bat wrapped with barbed wire. "All we can do is keep her here, safe from harm, and wait for her to wake up. Perhaps, when she does, then we can look at other methods." The Russian clicks her infamous tongue in her mouth, the pink snakelike tendril slapping against sharpened teeth. "Maybe exorcism, or...or ritual purification. I have contacts with the Seventh who may be able to help us with either."

You blink at her in surprise, and she grins. "Do not look so surprised, dear Murderface. I know I am not the, ah, networker Malal was or Mami came to be, but I have my own ways of making friends."

What, like getting drunk and then sleeping with them?

"Gyahaha, not always! And definitely not always in that order, either!" Your former Warmaster and predecessor giggles, the shrill sound like a monomolecular chainsaw eating into steel. "But yes, we will look into those when she is conscious, whenever that is. To do so while she is somnolent like this, it may be dangerous."

Dangerous? How? Isn't it supposed to be safer? She's comatose, after all, and she's not going anywhere.

You'll...you'll watch and wait, you decide. You trust Midori to pull through for you - she's never let you down before, and you don't think she's going to start now. So you'll do the right thing and wait for her to wake up before deciding on anything else. Staying by her side the entire time.

The clawed fleshmetal hand on your shoulder briefly tightens in a careful squeeze. "That is the best thing to do this moment, I feel, and I am glad you are in agreement. Yes, we should let our green-haired heroine rest, and wait for her to wake up rejuvinated and refreshed. Maybe then, she will tell us herself why she has undergone such a transformation, and if she needs to be relieved of it. If she says yes, then we will go ahead with her own procedure, right at that moment."

...But what if she doesn't wake up?

Kharn is silent for a moment, before shaking her head, determination set in her crimson-pinned black eyes. "She will, Murderface. She will wake up, trust me on this. Maybe not tomorrow, maybe not next week, but...she will wake up, and I guarantee that the first thing coming from her lips is your name."

You look back at Kharn, one eyebrow raised. How can she say that? How's she so sure? Did her analysis say something about that, or...?

The Russian shrugs, but the smile curling her lips is nothing but secretive. Sly, almost. "Aha. I know how your mind works, Murderface, and I know where you are going with this. Let us put it simply as...well, a mother's intuition."

She pats her otherwise flat stomach with a grin. "My mother used the same excuse, whenever she predicted something happening. And she was always accurate, to the point that I wonder if she was herself an uncontracted Culexus, her unripened powers manifesting that way. But that is neither here nor there - I am telling you that she will wake up. And when she does, she will be looking for you."

You look at Kharn for a few moments more, before turning back to Midori. Reaching out with a bandaged hand to gently brush your fingers against a cheek.

Well. Hopefully it's to call you to her side, rather than suddenly indulge in a brief session of open-chest surgery with her bare hands, you say glumly.

"Ah, sorry, Murderface?" Kharn blinks. "I did not catch that. What did you just say?"

Nothing. You said nothing.

Well, since you've decided to wait and see if Midori's going to get any better, then you may as well ask about some things that you probably missed while you were comatose yourself.

Namely, how is Kyuubey right now? And what happened to your wings - why are they invisible now? It seems convenient, seeing as they're pretty much the exact reason why you got thrown inside Regalia in the first place.

"Ah, I can provide a satisfactory answer to at least one of those questions," Kharn smiles at you. "Kyuubey is...well, you are probably wondering if he is angry about what happened? About how Hanegawa and Cooldown tried to rescue you from your prison?"

You nod. Well, less of that and more of...well, can you actually go into his office and talk to him without him freaking out again or having you thrown into another Silent Room, that kind of thing.

Kharn cackles at that. "Gyahaha! Murderface, you are forever incorrigible! But ah, to answer your question, I think he is doing fine, all things in consideration. You know how he is - he does not spend time in lamenting about what happened or going into maudlin tantrums about how unfortunate things have become. In any situation, good or bad, he assesses, he reacts, and then he keeps going. I have not known him to be any different then and I do not think he is going to be different now."

But it's the first time he's dealt with something like you, right?

"Not exactly. He has already dealt with a member of his Officio turning out to be a world-ending blight before." Kharn grins, before jerking a wickedly-clawed thumb towards herself. "And I can say that he handled that situation with admirable calm and resourcefulness. He may have been expecting your case to play out the same way, and carried out the same procedure. Do not hold it against him."

She looks at you for a moment, before patting your shoulder again. "You may hate me for saying this, but perhaps it is fortunate that yours did not turn out the same way."

...Maybe, you find yourself lying. Alright, Kyuubey might be safe to approach later. You'll have to remember that.

Now, as for your wings--

"I have no explanation why they are invisible," Kharn pipes up before you can complete your question. "It is a shame, I was, ah, looking forward to see how they looked, but as it is I believe they have been temporarily sealed away. Magically, of course." The claw resting on your shoulder slides down your spine, before poking two particular spots on your back, one on each of your shoulderblades. "From my analysis it is a self-regenerating seal that can be broken to unleash your wings, and seal them again if needed. I would warn you that it is very easy to break the seal itself - too much stress, physical or emotional, may cause it."

What, so being angry or being tired can turn you back into Miss Fucking Congeniality?

"Well, yes and no," The Russian explains. "The seal is not that sensitive, but I believe it would naturally break itself in times of high tension or crisis. Perhaps in times with heightened emotions as well. As such, you need to reign your temper in, Murderface." She turns you around to poke you in the chest. "Lest you wish the entire world to see you as you truly are."

...You'll keep a note of it, then.

Kharn looks at you for a moment, before smiling guiltily. "Kyuubey told me not to say anything, but...hah...well, I am of the belief that the seal is her doing." Kharn gestures to Midori. "Whatever she did in there, in that Silent Room with you, it gave her the strength to do what she felt was right. And against all odds, she did." She lets out a sigh. "Let us hope you do the same, eh, Murderface? Otherwise, we may all be in for a very bad time."

It's not like you asked for this responsibility, you barely avoid snapping at Kharn. But you'll try.

What the fuck else can you do, anyway? Go fucking insane and start destroying everything?

The both of you share a quite moment together, hearing the machines keeping track of Midori's vital signs beep every now and then - before Kharn glances at her watch and blinks. "Ah. I am very sorry, Murderface, but I will need to return to Misaka's side soon." She smiles apologetically at you. "She has been hard at work repairing her broken friend, and wants to finish before you wake up. She will not be happy if I stay away for too long. You know how children can be when they are insistent like this."

...Yeah. Right.

"Is there anything you wish to know before I make my leave, then?"

How do you react?

Actually, you do have one last question to ask, you say just as Kharn makes to leave. The Russian stops in her tracks and turns around, with all the innate lethal grace of a domesticated killing machine. A nonplussed smile curling her lips, completely unaware of what you're about to ask.

About what you're about to accuse her of.

"Well? Ask it, Murderface, and I will try to--"

"How long have you known that Kyuubey and Malal were fucking my memories out of my skull as a goddamn failsafe?"

Silence, as Kharn blinks once. Twice. The picture-perfect example of complete and utter poleaxed surprise.

"I...what, Murderface?" She manages, her voice barely a squeak. "What are you saying?"

"You heard me." Your voice is low, cold, deadpan - yet by how pale and stricken Kharn suddenly looked, you may as well have been snarling threats about ripping her unborn children out of her stomach and then eating them. "How long have you known, Kharn? After all this time, why are you still covering for Kyuubey?"

"Is it that you were using me? Just like they were?"

"N-NO!" The Russian's denial is a loud one, a desperate one. "No, Murderface, I...please, whatever you are accusing me of, I am innocent, I swear it!" She walks forward, crossing the distance between the both of you in two clanking strides, before grabbing you by your shoulders.

"I believed what everyone else believed - that your exposure to the barrier you have been found in had made your Soul Gem unstable, and thus made you unstable as well! As such, you would be prone to all sorts of nightmarish episodes, such as schizophrenia and amnesia, along with a whole host of other symptoms!"

Kharn shakes you just as she shakes her head. "Never was I told that they were inducing it themselves as some sort of deliberate procedure!"

She looks down at you, her completely-black eyes piercing, the pinprick crimson dots of her pupils boring down on you.

"I am many things, I will admit, Murderface, but I have always considered myself your friend. Your. Friend." She emphasizes each word through sharp gritted teeth. "And no friend would sit idle with the knowledge that their friend was having their memories purged as...as a means of keeping her in check."

She shakes you again, harder this time, forcing you to look up at her. "You must believe me, Murderface. I did not know!"

How do you react?

Ah, just a brief announcement before I go!

So something happened during the last official thread that spoiled a huge plot point that I was saving for a huge reveal, so I'm going to take the time to talk about canon from this point on. I'm also going to ask you guys who've been close to the quest during its background development to be respectful of the audience, the quest, and me by keeping what you know to yourselves - even the fact that you know it. Please remember that knowing background stuff like that means you've been trusted with it, so please be mindful of it!

Granted, I can't stop you if you really want to do that kind of thing, and I'm not going to be uptight about anything. I just don't want to see anyone having a bad experience because of it.

Finally, canon stuff. Like I've said time and again, if it hasn't shown up on a thread yet, then it's non-canon. That accounts for everything now - all the writeups, unless they've already been mentioned or alluded to in the main quest.That doesn't mean I'm not going to be making any of them canon, just in due time.

I'd also like everyone to take my ask.fm answers with a grain of salt, because sometimes I have fun with the questions, ahahaha!

In any case, that's everything! Thank you for reading!

Yeah, it didn't take long for that to become an issue. Canon seems to be solely what appears in a thread now, which is honestly for the best. Been in enough canon debates to know that it's not a good idea to let it run away on you.

>>44492343
Most write-ups used to be canon because Deculture wanted help fleshing out his world. He and everyone else got really carried away with it, which led to some problems outside the quest.

MAGICAL GIRL NOIR QUEST
THE DEATH OF CHIAKI MATSUDA

☐ Magical Girl Noir Quest Deculture 01/07/16(Thu)02:10:32 No.44619608 Archived

You look up at the taller woman in front of you, before finally nodding. ...You believe her, you tell her. You didn't mean to call her trustworthiness into question, it's just that you've been lied to and deliberately kept in the dark for so many times that you often find it hard to differentiate between friend and foe.

"...Ah." Kharn's face, earlier a mask of guilt-ridden desperation, turns to one of genuine sorrow. "That is...ah, Murderface, that is lamentable." Before you can even react, she pulls you into another hug again, and you're once more smothered by the sheer physical evidence of her motherhood. But before you can attempt to squirm your way out of it, she releases you, giving you a full view of her unnatural eyes brimming with tears.

That's...twice in your life that you've seen someone like Kharn cry, and it never stopped being disturbing.

Kharn must have noticed it in your reaction, however, as she blinks at you in surprise - before half-snorting, half-chuckling through her sobbing as she releases you, one clawed hand snatching wads of tissue from the box on your bedstand. "A-ah. This is...I apologize for showing you something this dreadful, Murderface. Souji told me that it is all part of being with child. Mood swings, being maudlin for the slightest reason, crying every now and then like a simpering child."

She sniffs here, dabbing at her eyes, before blowing her nose delicately into the now-sodden mess. "Hormones. This will pass. But...ah, even in my worst days, even when I was disgraced, I knew who was on my side, at least. I...I cannot hope to imagine how terrible it must been for you."

>>44619608

You allow to regain her composure before nodding. It's...well, it's been rough, but you're here now. You're just trying to connect the dots as much as you can, even though you're clearly missing handfuls of them, and the picture slowly being revealed isn't something you'd want to see in any kid's drawing book. Or any book for that matter.

"I...I can imagine." Kharn nods again. "Is...how much do you remember? Did Yuma tell you anything before she...?"

How do you respond?

[]Be honest. Everything that matters. And yes, Yuma told you everything about what happened.
[]Keep things close to your chest for now, just in case. Tell her that you remember enough. Pretend that Yuma didn't get to tell you anything, at least nothing of note.

You decide to be honest. Everything that matters, you tell her. And yes, Yuma told you everything what happened before she died.

"...Aha, I...I see." Kharn's face goes pale, and she makes her way back to your bed in unsteady, clanking footsteps - the black-haired Russian seating herself on the edge of the thin mattress in a heavy, slackening slump, as if she'd been some sort of murderpuppet that just had its strings cut. "Then...then you do know of...my failing, then." She hangs her head low, her hair forming a curtain over her eyes and face, as if both in shame and both in her inability to meet your gaze. "What I let happen. What I let happen to you." She chuckles miserably here - a low, slow sound, the sound of someone who had just had their failures displayed to the entire world before being executed for it.

"That is...well, I was expecting for you to remember eventually, or someone to have told you the entire story, but...hah. You will forgive me for hoping that my skeletons would be long buried and forgotten, at least for the people I care about."

It's one hell of a skeleton, you tell Kharn. The kind that never stays buried for long. Even if she expended every effort to have it forgotten, it'll come back, like a certain pink-haired nightmare that always finds a way to haunt your dreams.

The Russian nods. "I...thought I was going to win, you know." She swallows hard. "When I saw you being attacked, being hurt...I went in there with my usual...confidence. My hubris. I did not even think of calling for aid, or even notifying Malal when all I had to do was to think a single thought, and she would be there." She presses both clawed hands to her face. "Not one second did I think that there was more of the assassins lying in wait, waiting to pounce, waiting for me to swallow the bait whole and present myself to be slaughtered."

"I simply jumped in there with my chainsword, hoping that my own blade and my own desperation would see me through. I have never tasted failure before then, after all. What is caution but the hesitation of those cursed to be weaker, less skilled, less honed for battlecraft like I am?" Her eyes lit up briefly in reminiscence. "I was Valnikov Kharn. I was the Warmaster of one of the most powerful Officios that had ever existed. I was feared, I was respected, I was loved. I was a hero."

She chuckles again. "And yet, when it truly counted, when it truly mattered...I was as useless as the greenest, most inexperienced initiate. Not only that, but I turned into something that..." Kharn's voice cracks as she looks away. "...Something that I should have been executed for, if it had not been for my best friend's dying wish."

Two black orbs, brimming with tears, finally look up to meet yours.

"It is well in your right for you to hate me, Murderface, or even seek my own death as repayment. It will be no less than I deserve." She smiles at you, pleadingly, before placing her clawed hands on her stomach. "I only ask that you allow me to, aha, do something right with my life for once. Then, when they are born into this world, then you can take your revenge as you see fit. I will gladly go into my grave knowing that I did my best to pay for my sins."

How do you react?

[]Forgive her. Not in the business of making orphans, Kharn. There's enough of those already.

Yeah, it can be, but all in all, there is absolutely NO EXPLANATION of who did it. You take the box of tissues from your bedstand and place it on her lap. She flinches at this - seemingly expecting something a bit more harsher - before blinking in complete, tear-drenched surprise at you.

She's forgiven, you tell her. You're not in the business of making orphans. Grieving parents, maybe, but that's only after them having tried to put you in the ground first. ...Or when you're paid to. Whatever.

"Murderface..." Kharn makes a choking sound here. "Truly...? For all of that?"

You nod. Granted, you're still not quite clear about everything that happened - but you do know that there's no sense in lamenting about it when there's so much other shit to worry about. What with everything being your fucking fault to begin with, anyway. So yeah, who are you to ask for reparations for something like that? That'd just be you being a complete hypocrite, wouldn't it?

"N-no. Of course not." The Russian's sunless eyes go wide, staring, as she shakes her head in denial. "This would not be hypocritical, you have suffered enough--"

You shake your head and hold up your hand to silence her. It doesn't matter, you say as you cut her off. What matters is the job in front of you. You're going to do that and go home, and you're not going to let what happened in the past trip you up. You'll worry about that when the job's done.

Besides, what's taking revenge on her going to do for you? Or to anyone still drawing breath? It's not going to sweeten the pot any for you or for them. It's certainly not going to matter if you don't make it, since no one will.

You glance down at her stomach, covered by her bladed hands.

...If she's that set on paying penance, then she can at least try and do right by her kids. Like not naming them something embarrassing. Something normal, like those for regular jackoffs or high-salaried dildoes.

"Murderface, I..." Kharn shakes her head, smiling. "You...you really have changed. I always thought revenge was a fire in your belly, if not your soul, but this..." She laughs, a soft, hoarse exhalation of relief. "...I do not know how to deal with this new Murderface. No, this Chiaki, who does not yearn for vengeance the same way she yearns for certain breakfast items." She thinks for a moment, before gesturing to Midori's sleeping form. "Ah, so does that mean you are sanguine with her fate, then? You do not wish revenge on that who did this to her?"

You look at Kharn blankly for a few moments before shaking your head.

Oh, no, for fuck's sake, no. You've changed, sure, but you didn't turn into someone who'd simply bend over and let Fate fuck them in the ass like that.

Whoever did this to your Midori is going to die. That's not even a prediction or a prognostication or whatever, but a promise.

The Russian smiles one of her trademark smiles. "As relieved as I am, I am thankful we did not lose you entirely, Murderface. It would be such a waste if we did." She shakes her head, before reaching out to run her fingers down your once-again waist-length hair. "We should really give you a haircut, this is nearly as long as it was when you were first Girl A, and..." She blinks, before seemingly reminding herself of something. "A-ah, yes. I nearly forgot. Do you have a suspect of your own? A suspect of who did this to Hanegawa?"

How do you respond?

[]None at the moment, but investigations are ongoing. At least, until you get back into your costume and have a gun in your hand again.

You blink at Kharn, before shaking your head. ...Didn't she get the memo? You just woke up from a nine-day coma. You're still catching up to fucking...well, everything. And it's only been, what, a handful of minutes since you were told about what happened. So no, you don't have a suspect yet. Not until you can get back in your costume and ask some other people some more questions.

It...sounds like she has some in mind, though.

"Ah, me?" The Russian points to herself with one wickedly-clawed finger, before smiling. "...Well, yes and no. I have little evidence and even less of a potential motive, to be sure, and such accusations cannot be made without substantial amounts of those. And in this case, both must also be decisive and irrefutable. But..."

But? You frown at her, finding her habit of letting her sentences hang in the air just irritating enough to snap at. But what?

Kharn smiles sadly at you. "...Well, I realize you have forgiven me, Murderface, and truly, I am thankful for that, but I believe that what I will say next may make you want to change your mind." She lets out a sigh. "Again, I tell you that I have no proof nor any strong reason to believe this, but...call it a former Warmaster's gut instinct. Or maybe call it a pregnant woman's illogical, hormone-fueled musings. But I think this - what happened to Hanegawa - has been inflicted by none other than Tomoe Mami."

...What?

You blink at her, before frowning. Frowning the hardest you've ever frowned ever since you can remember.

Is... is this some sort of fucking joke?

How do you respond?

[]Bullshit. Utter fucking bullshit. I forgave you earlier, Kharn, but that doesn't give you a fucking right to accuse people like that. Especially Mami.

You choke back your rising anger and ask Kharn to explain herself. Before...before you fucking explode.

Seriously, Mami? Tomoe Mami? Is she fucking with you right now? The one person who would be completely blameless? The person who looked out for you ever since she rescued you from that barrier? Not to mention that she was on the fucking Moon when it happened! On the goddamn literal Moon, visiting the First in their fucking moon palace or whatever! How could she have--

"I know, I know, it sounds impossible, even to me," Kharn tries, desperate to get a word in amongst your feverish denials. "Believe me when I say I wish it was someone else. I keep trying to convince myself that it may be an enemy of the Officio, an enemy of Kyuubey's, or someone who had enmity with Hanegawa to begin with. Like...like an agent of the Tenth, which everyone else seems to be suspecting. But...but I cannot. It always comes back to her. It always comes back to Tomoe Mami."

Then HOW? The question leaves your lips in a snarl, and you hear the security detail outside stiffen at your outburst. How the fuck is she arriving at this conclusion, with no proof and no fucking motive?!

Despite seeing her earlier react with as much emotion as someone like her possibly could, you didn't think for one second that you could intimidate Kharn. She was, after all, intimidation incarnate, being as tall and as lethally-made as a killing machine with blades for legs and arms. But surprisingly, your outburst makes her hesitate, stunning her into silence, if only for a brief moment - before she replies.

"Think for a moment, Murderface. Who among us is truly a Magical Girl that fits the name? Who among us is not just a murderer in a cute costume, blessed with strength and invulnerability? Who among us lives to the ideal of a real Magical Girl, a real paragon of hope and truth, who can inspire with a smile as many people as she can save with one pull of a trigger?"

She stands up from Midori's bedside to tower over you, her lethal hands slack by her sides.

"Who among us is a real hero, who would sacrifice everything to save everyone, even if it meant killing someone she had nurtured and healed like her own child? Think, Murderface. Do not focus on whether or not she could have done it, think if she would have instead. Focus on the possibility that she would."

You shake your head. But then, if it was really her, why aren't you dead? Why aren't you fucking atomized already? Why is it Midori and not you?

"Because she obviously failed," Kharn presses. "Hanegawa tried to save you, and she succeeded. She saw what was going to happen and gave herself to get you back here, Murderface. Think."

How do you react?

[]Deny. No. No. Bullshit. That doesn't make sense. She wouldn't. Mami wouldn't. You're as fucking crazy as Risa - no, even worse than Risa. And she's FOREIGN, for fuck's sake!

Never have you wanted so badly to shut someone up before. Sure, you've had to deal with a couple of loudmouths here and there, and you've permanently silenced a few in your career. That of course includes the Eversor from the Third that couldn't keep her big yap shut about Mami - and that resulted in pretty much her entire Officio being dismantled. After having its leadership and most of its top officers being slaughtered, of course.

For Kharn to accuse Mami like this - to accuse her of having a hand in Midori's current state - well, suffice to say that even with your promise earlier, you're finding it very fucking hard to stay your hand. Out of all the Magical Girls in the world, she had to accuse the one that you respect the most? The one who stuck with you when no one else would? The one besides Midori who actually gave more than two shits about you?
